SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS AFTER THE JUNE 1976 AUTOMATIC BENEFIT INCREASE

by Orlo R. Nichols and Steven F. McKay
Office of the Actuary

This Note presents the Social Security benefits which came into effect in June 1976 due to the automatic increase provisions included in the Social Security Amendments of 1973.¹

An increase in Social Security benefits of 6.4% became applicable in June 1976 to all beneficiaries on the rolls, except for those receiving benefits under the special-minimum benefit provision.² Since March 1974, the special-minimum monthly benefit has been $9.00 for each year of coverage in excess of 10 years and up to 30 years; the maximum special-minimum benefit has been $180 per month for workers with 30 or more years of coverage. For less than 22 years of coverage, the minimum benefit is $107.90 per month, which is the regular minimum, since the special-minimum benefit formula would yield an amount that is less than this regular minimum.³

In addition to automatic adjustments in Social Security benefits, the law also provides for automatic adjustments in the taxable earnings base and in the exempt amount in the earnings test. See the Appendix for a description of the automatic provisions. Under these provisions, the earnings base was increased to $14,100 in 1975 and $15,300 in 1976 while the annual exempt amount was increased to $2,520 in 1975 and $2,760 in 1976.

After the above increases, the monthly benefit for each kind of beneficiary is determined on the basis of the benefit table in the law which is based approximately on the following eight-part formula for the Primary Insurance Amount (PIA):

137.77% of the first $110 of AMW, plus
50.10% of the next $290 of AMW, plus

¹The original automatic benefit adjustment provisions were enacted in 1972, but they were modified in 1973 before becoming operative.

²This was the second increase in social security benefits that has become effective under the automatic benefit adjustment provisions. The first such increase amounted to 8.0% and became effective in June, 1975. This increase was not applicable to special-minimum benefits.

³The lowest special-minimum benefit actually payable beginning in June 1976 is $144 based on 26 years of coverage since the regular benefit provisions produce a higher benefit when less than 26 years of coverage are involved.

46.82% of the next $150 of AMW, plus
55.05% of the next $100 of AMW, plus
30.61% of the next $100 of AMW, plus
25.51% of the next $250 of AMW, plus
22.98% of the next $175 of AMW, plus
21.28% of the next $100 of AMW, subject to a minimum PIA of $107.90 for AMW's of $76 or less.

Tables 1A and 1B show the amounts of monthly family benefits effective for June 1976 that are payable under the Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) system for various types of families for each Average Monthly Wage (AMW) interval.

The Maximum Family Benefit (MFB) effective for June 1976 is based approximately on the following formula:

For AMW's under $628 the MFB is equivalent to:

134.7% of the first $436 of AMW, plus
67.3% of the next $191 of AMW, subject to a minimum of 150% of PIA.

For AMW's of $628 or more, the MFB is 1.75 times PIA. As shown in Table 2, the MFB increases from 150% of PIA at the low AMW's to a maximum of 188% of PIA for an AMW of $436, and then decreases to 175% of PIA for AMW's of $628 or more.

The new monthly amounts payable to transitionally insured and transitionally noninsured individuals, aged 72 or over, effective for June 1976 are $74.10 for a worker, and $111.20 for a married couple.

The lump-sum death payment payable upon the insured person's death remains $255 and will apply in all cases.

Table 3 shows the maximum old-age monthly benefit payable at the time of retirement to individuals retiring at age 65 in the years 1940-76. Also shown in the table are the benefits payable to these individuals in 1976 after the June benefit increase.

APPENDIX

Cost-of-Living Increases in Benefits

Automatic benefit increases are based on changes in the CPI over a measuring period computed in terms of calendar quarters. The CPI for a calendar quarter is calculated as the average of the corresponding three monthly CPI's. In order to "trigger" a benefit increase, it is required that the rise in the CPI over the measuring period be at least 3%

The 8% increase of June 1975 and the 6.4% increase of June 1976 were both automatic benefit increases. Automatic benefit increases are effective for the month of June based on the CPI increase from the first quarter of the year in which the last automatic benefit increase was effective to the first quarter of the year of the new increase.

The above measuring period would be modified if the Congress should legislate an increase in benefits. In that case, the measuring period would be from the quarter in which the legislated increase becomes effective to the first quarter of the year of the new increase. However, no automatic increase could become effective if in the prior year, an ad hoc benefit increase was enacted or became effective.

Adjustments in the Earnings Base

The earnings base for 1975 ($14,100) was adjusted by multiplying the corresponding base for 1974 ($13,200) by the ratio of the average taxable wage of all covered employees for the first calendar quarter of 1974 ($2,007.69) to such average wage for the first calendar quarter of 1973 ($1,895.04). The result was rounded to the nearest multiple of $300. Similarly, the earnings base for 1976 ($15,300) was adjusted by multiplying $14,100 by the ratio of the average taxable wage for the first calendar quarter of 1975 ($2,157.73) to such average wage for the first calendar quarter of 1974. Future automatic adjustments in the earnings base can be effective only for the calendar year following the effective date of an automatic benefit increase. The method of adjusting the earnings base was changed by P.L. 94-202, enacted in January, 1976, so that adjustments will be based on the ratio of average wages in the year prior to the year of the automatic base increase determination to average wages in the calendar year preceding the most recent calendar year such a base increase determination was last made or an ad hoc base increase was enacted, if later. The automatic adjustment will not be made if it would result in a decrease in the earnings base.

Adjustments in the Earnings Test

The monthly exempt amount in the earnings test is adjusted in a manner similar to that used to adjust the earnings base. Automatic adjustments in the exempt amount can be effective only for the calendar year following the effective date of an automatic benefit increase. Adjustments are based on the ratio of average wages in the year prior to the year of an automatic exempt amount increase determination to average wages in the calendar year preceding the most recent calendar year an automatic adjustment in the exempt amount was determined or an ad hoc exempt amount increase was enacted, if later. The product of the ratio and the previous monthly exempt amount is rounded to the nearest multiple of $10. The annual exempt amount will always be 12 times the monthly exempt amount. The automatic adjustment will not be made if it would result in a decrease in the exempt amount.
