the provisions of this subsection were applicable in January 1971 or any prior month in determining the total of the benefits for persons entitled for any such month on the basis of such wages and self-employment income, such total of benefits for June 1972 or any subsequent month shall not be reduced to less than the larger of—

"(A) the amount determined under this subsection without regard to this paragraph, or

"(B) an amount derived by multiplying the sum of the benefit amounts determined under this title for May 1972 (including this subsection, but without the application of section 222(b), section 202(q), and subsections (b), (c), and (d) of this section), by 105 percent and raising such increased amount, if it is not a multiple of $0.10, to the next higher multiple of $0.10;

AUTOMATIC ADJUSTMENTS IN BENEFITS, THE CONTRIBUTION AND BENEFIT BASE, AND THE EARNING TEST

Adjustments in Benefits

SEC. 102. (a) (1) Section 215 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"Cost-of-Living Increases in Benefits

"(i) (1) For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) the term 'base quarter' means (i) the calendar quarter ending on June 30 in each year after 1971, or (ii) any other calendar quarter in which occurs the effective month of a general benefit increase under this title;

"(B) the term 'cost-of-living computation quarter' means a base quarter, as defined in subparagraph (A) (i), in which the Consumer Price Index prepared by the Department of Labor exceeds, by not less than 3 per centum, such Index in the later of (i) the last prior cost-of-living computation quarter which was established under this subparagraph, or (ii) the most recent calendar quarter in which occurred the effective month of a general benefit increase under this title; except that there shall be no cost-of-living computation quarter in any calendar year in which a law has been enacted providing a general benefit increase under this title or in which such a benefit increase becomes effective; and

"(C) the Consumer Price Index for a base quarter, a cost-of-living computation quarter, or any other calendar quarter shall be the arithmetical mean of such index for the 3 months in such quarter.

"(2)(A)(i) The Secretary shall determine each year (subject to the limitation in paragraph (1)(B) and to subparagraph (E) of this paragraph) whether the base quarter (as defined in paragraph (1)(A)(i)) in such year is a cost-of-living computation quarter.

"(ii) If the Secretary determines that such base quarter is a cost-of-living computation quarter, he shall, effective with the month of January of the next calendar year (subject to subparagraph (E)) as provided in subparagraph (B), increase the benefit amount of each individual who for such month is entitled to benefits under section 227 or 228, and the primary insurance amount of each other individual under this title (including a primary insurance amount determined under section 202(a)(3), but not including a primary insurance amount determined under subsection (a)(3) of this section), by an amount derived by multiplying each such amount (including each such individual's primary ~~insurance amount or benefit amount under section 227 or 228 as previously increased under this subparagraph) by the same percentage (rounded to the nearest one-tenth of 1 percent) as the percentage by which the Consumer Price Index for such cost-of-living computation quarter exceeds such index for the most recent prior calendar quarter which was a base quarter under paragraph (1)(A)(ii) or, if later, the most recent cost-of-living computation quarter under paragraph (1)(B). Any such increased amount which is not a multiple $0.10 shall be increased to the next higher multiple of $0.10.~~

~~"(B) The increase provided by subparagraph (A) with respect to a particular cost-of-living computation quarter shall apply (subject to subparagraph (E)) in the case of monthly benefits under this title for months after December of the calendar year in which occurred such cost-of-living computation quarter, and in the case of lump-sum death payments with respect to deaths occurring after December of such calendar year.~~

~~"(C)(i) Whenever the level of the Consumer Price Index as published for any month exceeds by 2.5 percent or more the level of such index for the most recent base quarter (as defined in paragraph (1)(A)(ii)) or, if later, the most recent cost-of-living computation quarter, the Secretary shall (within 5 days after such publication) report the amount of~~ such excess to the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance.

"(ii) Whenever the Secretary determines that a base quarter in a calendar year is also a cost-of-living computation quarter, he shall notify the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance of such determination on or before August 15 of such calendar year, indicating the amount of the benefit increase to be provided, his estimate of the extent to which the cost of such increase would be met by an increase in the contribution and benefit base under section 230 and the estimated amount of the increase in such base, the actuarial estimates of the effect of such increase, and the actuarial assumptions and methodology used in preparing such estimates.

"(D) If the Secretary determines that a base quarter in a calendar year is also a cost-of-living computation quarter, he shall publish in the Federal Register on or before November 1 of such calendar year a determination that a benefit increase is resultantly required and the percentage thereof. He shall also publish in the Federal Register at that time (along with the increased benefit amounts which shall be deemed to be the amounts appearing in sections 227 and 228) a revision of the table of benefits contained in subsection (a) of this section (as it may have been most recently revised by another law or pursuant to this paragraph); and such revised table shall be deemed to be the table appearing in such subsection (a). Such revision shall be determined as follows:

"(i) The headings of the table shall be the same as the headings in the table immediately prior to its revision, except that the parenthetical phrase at the beginning of column II shall reflect the year in which the primary insurance amounts set forth in column IV of the table immediately prior to its revision were effective.

"(ii) The amounts on each line of column I and column III, except as otherwise provided by clause (v) of this subparagraph, shall be the same as the amounts appearing in each such column in the table immediately prior to its revision.

"(iii) The amount on each line of column II shall be changed to the amount shown on the corresponding line of column IV of the table immediately prior to its revision.

"(iv) The amounts on each line of column IV and column V shall be increased from the amounts shown in the table immediately prior to its revision by increasing each such amount by the percentage specified in subparagraph (A) of paragraph (2). The amount on each line of column V shall be increased, if necessary, so that such amount is at least equal to one and one-half times the amount shown on the corresponding line in column IV. Any such increased amount which is not a multiple of $0.10 shall be increased to the next higher multiple of $0.10.

"(v) If the contribution and benefit base (determined under section 230) for the calendar year in which the table of benefits is revised is lower than such base for the following calendar year, columns III, IV, and V of such table shall be extended. The amounts on each additional line of column III shall be the amounts on the preceding line increased by $5 until in the last such line of column III the second figure is equal to one-twelfth of the new contribution and benefit base for the calendar year following the calendar year in which such table of benefits is revised. The amount on each additional line of column IV shall be the amount on the preceding line increased by $1.00 until the amount on the last line of such column is equal to the last line of such column as determined under clause (iv) plus 20 percent of one-twelfth of the excess of the new contribution and benefit base for the calendar year following the calendar year in which such table of benefits is revised (as determined under section 230) over such base for the calendar year in which the table of benefits is revised. The amount on each additional line of column V shall be equal to 1.75 times the amount on the same line of column IV. Any such increased amount which is not a multiple of $0.10 shall be increased to the next higher multiple of $0.10.

"(E) Notwithstanding a determination by the Secretary under subparagraph (A) that a base quarter in any calendar year is a cost-of-living computation quarter (and notwithstanding any notification or publication thereof under subparagraph (C) or (D)), no increase in benefits shall take effect pursuant thereto, and such quarter shall be deemed not to be a cost-of-living computation quarter, if during the calendar year in which such determination is made a law providing a general benefit increase under this title is enacted or becomes effective.

"(3) As used in this subsection, the term 'general benefit increase under this title' means an increase (other than an increase under this subsection) in all primary insurance amounts (including those determined under section 202(a)(3), but not including those determined under subsection (a)(3) of this section) on which monthly insurance benefits under this title are based."

of such Act is amended by striking out "the table in section 215(a)" in the matter preceding paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "the table in (or deemed to be in) section 215(a)".

(B) Effective January 1, 1973, section 203(a)(2) of such Act (as amended by section 101(b) of this Act) is further amended to read as follows:

"(2) when two or more persons were entitled (without the application of section 202(j)(1) and section 223(b)) to monthly benefits under section 202 or 223 of January 1971 or any prior month on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of such insured individual and the provisions of this subsection as in effect for any such month were applicable in determining the benefit amount of any persons on the basis of such wages and self-employment income, the total of benefits for any month after January 1971 shall not be reduced to less than the largest of—

"(A) the amount determined under this subsection without regard to this paragraph,

"(B) the largest amount which has been determined for any month under this subsection for persons entitled to monthly benefits on the basis of such insured individual's wages and self-employment income, or

"(C) if any persons are entitled to benefits on the basis of such wages and self-employment income for the month before the effective month (after June 1972) of a general benefit increase under this title (as defined in section 215(i)(3)) or a benefit increase under the provisions of section 215(i), an amount equal to the sum of such benefits for the month before such effective month increased by a percentage equal to the percentage of the increase provided under such benefit increase (with any such increased amount which is not a multiple of $0.10 being rounded to the next higher multiple of $0.10);

but in any such case (i) paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not be applied to such total of benefits after the application of subparagraph (B) or (C), and (ii) if section 202(k)(2)(A) was applicable in the case of any such benefits for a month, and ceases to apply for a month after such month, the provisions of subparagraph (B) or (C) shall be applied, for and after the month in which section 202(k)(2)(A) ceases to apply, as though paragraph (1) had not been applicable to such total of benefits for the last month for which subparagraph (B) or (C) was applicable, or".

(3)(A) Effective January 1, 1974, section 215

(a) of such Act (as amended by section 101(c) of this Act) is further amended—

(i) by inserting "(or, if larger, the amount in column IV of the latest table deemed to be such table under subsection (i)(2)(D))" after "the following table" in paragraph (1)(A); and

(ii) by inserting "(whether enacted by another law or deemed to be such table under subsection (i)(2)(D))" after "effective month of a new table" in paragraph (2).

(B) Effective January 1, 1974, section 215(b)(4) of such Act (as amended by section 101(d) of this Act) is further amended to read as follows:

"(4) The provisions of this subsection shall be applicable only in the case of an individual—

"(A) who becomes entitled to benefits under section 202(a) or section 223 in or after the month in which a new table that appears in (or is deemed by subsection (i)(2)(D) to appear in) subsection (a) becomes effective; or

"(B) who dies in or after the month in which such table becomes effective without being entitled to benefits under section 202(a) or section 223; or

"(C) whose primary insurance amount is required to be recomputed under subsection (f) (2) or (6)."

(C) Effective January 1, 1974, section 215(e) of such Act (as amended by section 101(c) of this Act) is further amended to read as follows:

"Primary Insurance Amount Under Prior Provisions

"(e)(1) For the purposes of column II of the latest table that appears in (or is deemed to appear in) subsection (a) of this section, an individual's primary insurance amount shall be computed on the basis of the law in effect prior to the month in which the latest such table became effective.

"(2) The provisions of this subsection shall be applicable only in the case of an individual who became entitled to benefits under section 202(a) or section 223, or who died, before such effective month."

(4) Effective January 1, 1974, sections 227 and 228 of such Act (as amended by section 101(g) of this Act) are further amended by striking out "$50.80" wherever it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "the larger of $50.80 or the amount most recently established in lieu thereof under section 215(i)", and by striking out "$25.40" wherever it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "the larger of $25.40 or the amount most recently established in lieu thereof under section 215(i)".

"ADJUSTMENT OF THE CONTRIBUTION AND BENEFIT BASE

"SEC. 230. (a) Whenever the Secretary pursuant to section 215(i) increases benefits effective with the first month of the calendar year following a cost of living computation quarter, he shall also determine and publish in the Federal Register on or before November 1 of the calendar year in which such quarter occurs (along with the publication of such benefit increase as required by section 215(i)(2)(D)) the contribution and benefit base determined under subsection (b) which shall be effective (unless such increase in benefits is prevented from becoming effective by section 215(i)(2)(E)) with respect to remuneration paid after the calendar year in which such quarter occurs and taxable years beginning after such year.

"(b) The amount of such contribution and benefit base shall be the amount of the contribution and benefit base in effect in the year in which the determination is made or, if larger, the product of—

"(1) the contribution and benefit base which was in effect with respect to remuneration paid in (and taxable years beginning in) the calendar year in which the determination under subsection (a) with respect to such particular calendar year was made, and

"(2) the ratio of (A) the average of the taxable wages of all employees as reported to the Secretary for the first calendar quarter of the calendar year in which the determination under subsection (a) with respect to such particular calendar year was made to (B) the average of the taxable wages of all employees as reported to the Secretary for the first calendar quarter of 1972 or, if later, the first calendar quarter of the most recent calendar year in which an increase in the contribution and benefit base was enacted or a determination resulting in such an increase was made under subsection (a), with such product, if not a multiple of $300, being rounded to the next higher multiple of $300 where such product is a multiple of $150 but not of $300 and to the nearest multiple of $300 in any other case.

"(c) For purposes of this section, and for purposes of determining wages and self-employment income under sections 209, 211, 213, and 215 of this Act and sections 1402, 3121, 3122, 3125, 6413, and 6654 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, the 'contribution and benefit base' with respect to remuneration paid in (and taxable years beginning in) any calendar year after 1971 and prior to the calendar year with the first month of which the first increase in benefits pursuant to section 215(i) of this Act becomes effective shall be $10,200 or (if applicable) such other amount as may be specified in a law enacted subsequent to the Social Security Amendments of 1971."

Adjustments in Earnings Test

(c) Section 203(f) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8)(A) Whenever the Secretary pursuant to section 215(i) increases benefits effective with the first month of the calendar year following a cost-of-living computation quarter, he shall also determine and publish in the Federal Register on or before November 1 of the calendar year in which such quarter occurs (along with the publication of such benefit increase as required by section 215(i)(2)(D)) a new exempt amount which shall be effective (unless such new exempt amount is prevented from becoming effective by subparagraph (C) of this paragraph) with respect to any individual's taxable year which ends with the close of or after the calendar year with the first month of which such benefit increase is effective (or, in the case of an individual who dies during such calendar year, with respect to such individual's taxable year which ends, upon his death, during such year).

"(B) The exempt amount for each month of a particular taxable year shall be whichever of the following is the larger—

(2) Section 202(q)(3) of such Act is further amended by striking out subparagraphs (E), (F), and (G).

(c) Section 202(r) of such Act is repealed.

(d)(1) Subject to paragraph (2), subsection (a) of this section and the amendments made thereby shall apply with respect to benefits for months commencing with the sixth month after the month in which this Act is enacted pursuant to applications filed in or after the month in which this Act is enacted.

(2) In the case of an individual who became entitled to benefits under subsection (a) of section 202 or section 223 of such Act for a month prior to the month in which he attains age 65 pursuant to an application filed before the month in which this Act is enacted, and who is so entitled for the fifth month following the month of enactment of the Act, and whose entitlement to benefits under subsection (b) or (c) of such section 202 was prevented by subsection (b)(1)(E) or (c)(1)(D) of such section as in effect prior to the enactment of this Act, the benefits to which such individual is entitled for months after such fifth month shall be redetermined in accordance with subparagraphs (B), (C), (D) of subsection (e)(2) of this section, if, in addition to the application required by paragraph (A) of subsection 202(b)(1) and 202(e)(1), he files a written request for such a redetermination.

In the case of such an individual who is described in paragraph (2)(A)(i) of this subsection, the request for a redetermination under paragraph (2) shall constitute the request required by this subparagraph, and subsection (b) of this section and the amendments made thereby shall apply pursuant to such request with respect to such

In the case of any individual with respect to whose benefits subsection (b) of this section and the amendments made thereby may apply only pursuant to a request made under this subparagraph, such subsection and such amendments shall be effective (subject to paragraph (2) (D)) with respect to benefits for months commencing with the sixth month after the month in which this Act is enacted or, if the request required by this subparagraph is not filed before the end of such sixth month, with the second month following the month in which the request is filed.

(C) Subsection (c) of this section shall apply with respect to benefits payable pursuant to applications filed on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) (A) In any case where an individual—

(i) is entitled, for the fifth month following the month in which this Act is enacted, to a monthly insurance benefit under section 202 of the Social Security Act (I) which was reduced under subsection (q) (3) of such section, and (II) the application for which was deemed (or, except for the fact that an application had been filed, would have been deemed) to have been filed by such individual under subsection (r) (1) or (2) of such section, and

(ii) files a written request for a redetermination under this subsection, on or after the date of the enactment of this Act and in such manner and form as the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall by regulations prescribe,

the Secretary shall redetermine the amount of such benefit, and the amount of the other benefit (reduced under subsection (q) (1) or (2) of such section) which was taken into account in computing the reduction in such benefit under such subsection (q) (3), in the manner provided in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph.

(B) Upon receiving a written request for the redetermination under this paragraph of a benefit which was reduced under subsection (q) (1), (2), or (3) of section 202 of the Social Security Act (or would have been so reduced except for subsection (b) (1) (E) or (c) (1) (D) of such section 202 as in effect prior to the enactment of this Act) and of the other benefit which was (or would have been) taken into account in computing such reduction, filed by an individual as provided in subsection (d) (2) or subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, the Secretary shall—

(i) determine the highest monthly benefit amount which such individual could receive under the subsections of such section 202 which are involved (or under section 223 of such Act and the subsection of such section 202 which is involved) for the month with which the redetermination is to be effective under subparagraph (D) of this subsection (without regard to sections 202 (k), 203 (a), and 202 (b) through (l) as if—

(I) such individual's application for one of such two benefits had been filed in the month in which it was actually filed or was deemed under subsection (r) of such section 202 to have been filed, and his application for the other such benefit had been filed in a later month, and

(II) the amendments made by this section had been in effect at the time each such application was filed; and

(ii) determine whether the amounts which were actually received by such individual in the form of such benefit or of such two benefits during the period prior to the month with which the redetermination under this paragraph is to be effective were in excess of the amounts which would have been received during such period if the applications for such benefits had actually been filed at the times fixed under clause (i) (I) of this subparagraph, and, if so, the total amount by which benefits otherwise payable to such individual under such section 202 (and section 223) would have to be reduced in order to compensate the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund (and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund) for such excess.

(C) The Secretary shall then notify such individual of the amount of each such benefit as computed in accordance with the amendments made by subsections (a), (b), and (c) of this section and as redetermined in accordance with subparagraph (B)(i) of this paragraph, specifying (i) the amount (if any) of the excess determined under subparagraph (B)(ii) of this paragraph, and (ii) the period during which payment of any increase in such individual's benefits resulting from the application of the amendments made by subsections (a), (b), and (c) of this section would under designated circumstances have to be withheld in order to effect the reduction described in subparagraph (B)(ii). Such individual may at any time within thirty days after such notification is mailed to him refuse (in such manner and form as the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe) to accept the redetermination under this paragraph, in which event such redetermination shall not take effect.

(D) Unless the last sentence of subparagraph (C) applies, a redetermination under this paragraph shall be effective (but subject to the reduction described in subparagraph (B)(ii) over the period specified pursuant to clause

~~(ii) of the first sentence of subparagraph (C)) beginning with the sixth month following the month in which this Act is enacted, or, if the request for such redetermination is not filed before the end of such sixth month, with the second month following the month in which the request for such redetermination is filed.~~

~~(E) The Secretary, by withholding amounts from benefits otherwise payable to an individual under title II of the Social Security Act as specified in clause (ii) of the first sentence of subparagraph (C) (and in no other manner), shall recover the amounts necessary to compensate the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund (and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund) for the excess (described in subparagraph (B)(ii)) attributable to benefits which were paid such individual and to which a redetermination under this subsection applies.~~

~~(1) two or more persons are entitled on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of an individual (without the application of sections 202(j)(1) and 223(b) of the Social Security Act) to monthly benefits under section 202 of such Act for the month preceding the month with which (A) a redetermination under subsection (c) of this section becomes effective with respect~~ to the benefits of any one of them and (B) such benefits are accordingly increased by reason of the amendments made by subsections (a), (b), and (c) of this section, and

(2) the total of benefits to which all persons are entitled under such section 202 on the basis of such wages and self-employment income for the month with which such redetermination and increase becomes effective is reduced by reason of section 203(a) of such Act as amended by this Act (or would, but for the penultimate sentence of such section 203(a), be so reduced), then the amount of the benefit to which each of the persons referred to in paragraph (1), other than the person with respect to whose benefits such redetermination and increase is applicable, is entitled for months beginning with the month with which such redetermination and increase becomes effective shall be adjusted, after the application of such section 203(a), to an amount no less than the amount it would have been if such redetermination and increase had not become effective.

"(G) determining (under section 215(a)) an amount equal to the primary insurance amount which would result from the average monthly wage determined under subparagraph (F).

For purposes of subparagraph (F) if an individual or his spouse is entitled to disability insurance benefits, such individual or spouse shall be deemed to have attained age 62 at the time provided in section 223(a)(2).

(a) Any provider of services as defined in section 1861(u), whose services are otherwise reimbursable, under any program under this Act in which there is Federal financial participation on the basis of 'reasonable cost', shall not be entitled to a professional fee or dispensing charge or reasonable billing allowance as determined pursuant to this part.*

"(b) A fee, charge, or billing allowance shall not be payable under this section with respect to any drug entity that (as determined in accordance with regulations) is furnished as an incident to a physician's professional service, and is of a kind commonly furnished in physicians' offices and commonly either rendered without charge or included in the physicians' bills.

"REASONABLE ALLOWANCE FOR ELIGIBLE DRUGS

"SEC. 1823. (a) For purposes of this part, the term 'reasonable allowance' when used in reference to an eligible drug (as defined in subsection (h) of this section) means the following:

"(1) When used with respect to a prescription legend drug entity, in a given dosage form and strength, such term means the lesser of—

"(A) an amount equal to the customary charge at which the participating pharmacy sells or offers such drug entity, in a given dosage form and strength, to the general public, or

"(B) the price determined by the Secretary, in accordance with subsection (b) of this section, plus the professional fee or dispensing charges determined in accordance with subsection (c) of this section.

"(2) When used with respect to insulin such term means the charge not in excess of the reasonable customary price at which the participating pharmacy offers or sells the product to the general public, plus a reasonable billing allowance.

"(b)(1) For purposes of establishing the reasonable allowance in accordance with subsection (a) the price shall be (A) in the case of a drug entity (in any given dosage form and strength) available from and sold by only one supplier, the price at which such drug entity is generally sold (to establishments dispensing drugs), and (B) in any case in which a drug entity (in any given dosage form and strength) is available and sold by more than one supplier, only each of the lower prices at which the products of such drug entity are generally sold (and such lower prices shall consist of only those prices of different suppliers sufficient to assure actual and adequate availability of the drug entity, in a given dosage form and strength, at such prices in a region).

"(2) If a particular drug entity (in a given dosage form and strength) in the Formulary is available from more than one supplier, and the product of such drug entity as available from one supplier possesses demonstrated distinct therapeutic advantages over other products of such drug entity as determined by the Committee on the basis of its scientific and professional appraisal of information available to it, including information and other evidence furnished to it by the supplier of such drug entity, then the reasonable allowance for such supplier's drug product shall be based upon the price at which it is generally sold to establishments dispensing drugs.

"(3) If the prescriber, in his handwritten order, has specifically designated a particular product of a drug entity (and dosage form and strength) included in the Formulary by its established name together with the name of the supplier of the final dosage form thereof, the reasonable allowance for such drug product shall be based upon the price at which it is generally sold to establishments dispensing drugs.

"(c)(1) For the purpose of establishing the reasonable allowance (in accordance with subsection (a)) a participating pharmacy, shall, in the form and manner prescribed by the Secretary, file with the Secretary, at such times as he shall specify, a statement of its professional fee or other dispensing charges.

"(2) A participating pharmacy, which has agreed with the Secretary to serve as a provider of services under this part, shall, except for subsection (a)(1)(A), be reimbursed, in addition to any price provided for in subsection (b), the amount of the fee or charges filed in paragraph (1), except that no fee or charges shall exceed the highest fee or charges filed by 75 per centum of participating pharmacies (with such pharmacies classified on the basis of (A) lesser dollar volume of prescriptions and (B) all others) in a census region which were customarily charged to the general public as of June 1, 1972. Such prevailing professional fees or dispensing charges may be modified by the Secretary in accordance with criteria and types of data comparable to those applicable to recognition of increases in reasonable charges for services under section 1842.

"(3) A participating pharmacy shall agree to certify that, whenever such pharmacy is required to submit its usual professional fee or dispensing charge for a prescription, such charge does not exceed its customary charge."

(h) Section 1861(t) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by inserting ", or as are approved by the Formulary Committee" after "for use in such hospital"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The term 'eligible drug' means a drug or biological which (A) can be self-administered, (B) requires a physician's prescription (except for insulin), (C) is prescribed when the individual requiring such drug is not an inpatient in a hospital or extended care facility, during a period of covered care, (D) is included by strength and dosage forms among the drugs and biologicals approved by the Formulary Committee, (E) is dispensed (except as provided by section 1814(j)), by a pharmacist from a participating pharmacy, and (F) is dispensed in quantities consistent with proper medical practice and reasonable professional discretion."

(i) Section 1861(u) of the Social Security Act (as amended by section 227(d)(1) of this Act) is further amended by striking out "or home health agency" and inserting in lieu thereof "home health agency, or pharmacy".

(j) Section 1861 of the Social Security Act is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"Participating Pharmacy

"(dd) The term 'participating pharmacy' means a pharmacy, or other establishment (including the outpatient department of a hospital) providing pharmaceutical services, (1) which is licensed as such under the laws of the State (where such State requires such licensure) or which is otherwise lawfully providing pharmaceutical services in which such drug is provided or otherwise dispensed in accordance with this title, (2) which has agreed with the Secretary to act as a provider of services in accordance with the requirements of this section, and which complies with such other requirements as may be established by the Secretary in regulations to assure the proper, economical, and efficient administration of this title, (3) which has agreed to submit, at such frequency and in such form as may be prescribed in regulations, bills for amounts payable under this title for eligible drugs furnished under part A of this title, and (4) which has agreed not to charge beneficiaries under this title any amounts in excess of those allowable under this title with respect to eligible drugs except as is provided under section 1813(a)(4), and except for so much of the charge for a prescription (in the case of a drug product prescribed by a physician, of a drug entity in a strength and dosage form included in the Formulary where the price at which such product is sold by the supplier thereof exceeds the reasonable allowance) as is in excess of the reasonable allowance established for such drug entity in accordance with section 1823."

of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "and (ii)" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "(ii) the amount of any copayment obligation and excess above the reasonable allowance consistent with section 1861(dd)(4) and (iii)".

fied the person proposing such expenditure that the expenditure would not be in conformity with the standards, criteria, or plans developed by such agency or any other agency described in clause (ii) for adequate health care facilities in such State or in the area for which such other agency has responsibility, and

"(ii) the planning agency so designated had, prior to submitting to the Secretary the findings referred to in subsection (b)—

"(I) consulted with, and taken into consideration the findings and recommendations of, the State planning agencies established pursuant to sections 314(a) and 604(a) of the Public Health Service Act (to the extent that either such agency is not the agency so designated) as well as the public or nonprofit private agency or organization responsible for the comprehensive regional, metropolitan area, or other local area plan or plans referred to in section 314(b) of the Public Health Service Act and covering the area in which the health care facility or health maintenance organization proposing such capital expenditure is located (where such agency is not the agency designated in the agreement), or, if there is no such agency, such other public or nonprofit private agency or organization

(if any) as performs, as determined in accordance with criteria included in regulations, similar functions, and

"(II) granted to the person proposing such capital expenditure an opportunity for a fair hearing with respect to such findings;

then, for such period as he finds necessary in any case to effectuate the purpose of this section, he shall, in determining the Federal payments to be made under titles V, XVIII, and XIX with respect to services furnished in the health care facility for which such capital expenditure is made, not include any amount which is attributable to depreciation, interest on borrowed funds, a return on equity capital (in the case of proprietary facilities), or other expenses related to such capital expenditure. With respect to any organization which is reimbursed on a per capita basis, in determining the Federal payments to be made under titles V, XVIII, and XIX, the Secretary shall exclude an amount which in his judgment is a reasonable equivalent to the amount which would otherwise be excluded under this subsection if payment were to be made on other than a per capita basis.

"(2) If the Secretary, after submitting the matters involved to the advisory council established or designated under subsection (i), determines that an exclusion of expenses related to any capital expenditure of any health care facility or health maintenance organization would discourage the operation or expansion of such facility or organization, or of any facility of such organization, which has demonstrated to his satisfaction proof of capability to provide comprehensive health care services (including institutional services) efficiently, effectively, and economically, or would otherwise be inconsistent with the effective organization and delivery of health services or the effective administration of title V, XVIII, or XIX, he shall not exclude such expenses pursuant to paragraph (1).

"(e) Where a person obtains under lease or comparable arrangement any facility or part thereof, or equipment for a facility, which would have been subject to an exclusion under subsection (d) if the person had acquired it by purchase, the Secretary shall (1) in computing such person's rental expense in determining the Federal payments to be made under titles V, XVIII, and XIX with respect to services furnished in such facility, deduct the amount which in his judgment is a reasonable equivalent of the amount that would have been excluded if the person had acquired such facility or such equipment by purchase, and (2) in computing such person's return on equity capital deduct any amount deposited under the terms of the lease or comparable arrangement.

"(f) Any person dissatisfied with a determination by the Secretary under this section may within six months following notification of such determination request the Secretary to reconsider such determination. A determination by the Secretary under this section shall not be subject to administrative or judicial review.

"(g) For the purposes of this section, a 'capital expenditure' is an expenditure which, under generally accepted accounting principles, is not properly chargeable as an expense of operation and maintenance and which (1) exceeds $100,000, (2) changes the bed capacity of the facility with respect to which such expenditure is made, or (3) substantially changes the services of the facility with respect to which such expenditure is made. For purposes of clause (1) of the preceding sentence, the cost of the studies, surveys, designs, plans, working drawings, specifications, and other activities essential to the acquisition, improvement, expansion, or replacement of the plant and equipment with respect to which such expenditure is made shall be included in determining whether such expenditure exceeds $100,000.

"(h) The provisions of this section shall not apply to Christian Science sanatoriums operated, or listed and certified, by the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Massachusetts.

"(i) (1) The Secretary shall establish a national advisory council, or designate an appropriate existing national advisory council, to advise and assist him in the preparation of general regulations to carry out the purposes of this section and on policy matters arising in the administration of this section, including the coordination of activities under this section with those under other parts of this Act or under other Federal or federally assisted health programs.

"(2) The Secretary shall make appropriate provision for consultation between and coordination of the work of the advisory council established or designated under paragraph (1) and the Federal Hospital Council, the National Advisory Health Council, the Health Insurance Benefits Advisory Council, ~~the Medical Assistance Advisory Council,~~ and other appropriate national advisory councils with respect to matters bearing on the purposes and administration of this section and the coordination of activities under this section with related Federal health programs.

"(3) If an advisory council is established by the Secretary under paragraph (1), it shall be composed of members who are not otherwise in the regular full-time employ of the United States, and who shall be appointed by the Secretary without regard to the civil service laws from among leaders in the fields of the fundamental sciences, the medical sciences, and the organization, delivery, and financing of health care, and persons who are State or local officials or are active in community affairs or public or civic affairs or who are representative of minority groups. Members of such advisory council, while attending meetings of the council or otherwise serving on business of the council, shall be entitled to receive compensation at rates fixed by the Secretary, but not exceeding the maximum rate specified at the time of such service for grade GS–18 in section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, including traveltime, and while away from their homes or regular places of business they may also be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by section 5703 (b) of such title 5 for persons in the Government service employed intermittently."

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply only with respect to a capital expenditure the obligation for which is incurred by or on behalf of a health care facility or health maintenance organization subsequent to whichever of the following is earlier: (A) ~~June 30, 1972,~~ December 31, 1972, or (B) with respect to any State or any part thereof specified by such State, the last day of the calendar quarter in which the State requests that the amendment made by subsection (a) of this section apply in such State or such part thereof.

(c) (1) Section 505 (a) (6) of such Act (as amended by section 232 (b) of this Act) is further amended by inserting ", consistent with section 1122," after "standards" where it first appears.

(2) Section 506 of such Act (as amended by sections 224 (d), 229 (d), 233 (d), and 237 (b) of this Act) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) For limitation on Federal participation for capital expenditures which are out of conformity with a comprehensive plan of a State or areawide planning agency, see section 1122."

(3) Clause (2) of the second sentence of section 509 (a) of such Act is amended by inserting ", consistent with section 1122," after "standards".

(4) Section 1861 (v) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) For limitation on Federal participation for capital expenditures which are out of conformity with a comprehensive plan of a State or areawide planning agency, see section 1122."

(5) Section 1902(a)(13)(D) of such Act (as amended by section 232(a) of this Act) is further amended by inserting ", consistent with section 1122," after "standards" where it first appears.

(6) Section 1903(b) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

(d) In the case of a health care facility providing health care services as of December 18, 1970, which on such date is committed to a formal plan of expansion or replacement, the amendments made by the preceding provisions of this section shall not apply with respect to such expenditures as may be made or obligations incurred for capital items included in such plan where preliminary expenditures toward the plan of expansion or replacement (including payments for studies, surveys, designs, plans, working drawings, specifications, and site acquisition, essential to the acquisition, improvement, expansion, or replacement of the health care facility or equipment concerned) of $100,000 or more, had been made during the three-year period ended December 17, 1970.

~~REPORT ON PLAN FOR PROSPECTIVE REIMBURSEMENT; EXPERIMENTS AND DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS TO DEVELOP INCENTIVES FOR ECONOMY IN THE PROVISION OF HEALTH SERVICES~~

DEMONSTRATIONS AND REPORTS; PROSPECTIVE REIMBURSEMENT; EXTENDED CARE; INTERMEDIATE CARE AND HOMEMAKER SERVICES; AMBULATORY SURGICAL CENTERS; PHYSICIANS' ASSISTANTS; PERFORMANCE INCENTIVE CONTRACTS

SEC. 222. (a) (1) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, directly or through contracts ~~with~~ with, or grants to, public or private agencies or organizations, shall develop and carry out experiments and demonstration projects designed to determine the relative advantages and disadvantages of various alternative methods of making payment on a prospective basis to hospitals, ~~extended care~~ skilled nursing facilities, and other providers of services for care and services provided by them under title XVIII of the Social Security Act and under State plans approved under titles XIX and V of such Act, including alternative methods for classifying providers, for establishing prospective rates of payment, and for implementing on a gradual, selective, or other basis the establishment of a prospective payment system, in order to stimulate such providers through positive (or negative) financial incentives to use their facilities and personnel more efficiently and thereby to reduce the total costs of the health programs involved without adversely affecting the quality of services by containing or lowering the rate of increase in provider costs that has been and is being experienced under the existing system of retroactive cost reimbursement.

(2) The experiments and demonstration projects developed under paragraph (1) shall be of sufficient scope and shall be carried out on a wide enough scale to permit a thorough evaluation of the alternative methods of prospective payment under consideration while giving assurance that the results derived from the experiments and projects will obtain generally in the operation of the programs involved (without committing such programs to the adoption of any prospective payment system either locally or nationally).

(3) In the case of any experiment or demonstration project under paragraph (1), the Secretary may waive compliance with the requirements of titles XVIII, XIX, and V of the Social Security Act insofar as such requirements relate to methods of payment for services provided; and costs incurred in such experiment or project in excess of those which would otherwise be reimbursed or paid under such titles may be reimbursed or paid to the extent such waiver applies to them (with such excess being borne by the Secretary). No experiment or demonstration project shall be developed or carried out under paragraph (1) until the Secretary obtains the advice and recommendations of specialists who are competent to evaluate the proposed experiment or project as to the soundness of its objectives, the possibilities of securing productive results, the adequacy of resources to conduct it, and its relationship to other similar experiments or projects already completed or in process*; and no such experiment or project shall be actually placed in operation unless at least 30 days prior thereto a written report, prepared for purposes of notification and information only, containing a full and complete description thereof has been transmitted to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and to the Committee on Finance of the Senate.*

(4) Grants, payments under contracts, and other expenditures made for experiments and demonstration projects under this subsection shall be made in appropriate part from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund (established by section 1817 of the Social Security Act) and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund (established by section 1841 of the Social Security Act) and from funds appropriated under titles V and XIX of such Act. Grants and payments under contracts may be made either in advance or by way of reimbursement, as may be determined by the Secretary, and shall be made in such installments and on such conditions as the Secretary finds necessary to carry out the purpose of this subsection. With respect to any such grant, payment, or other expenditure, the amount to be paid from each of such trust funds (and from funds appropriated under such titles V and XIX) shall be determined by the Secretary, giving due regard to the purposes of the experiment or project involved.

(5) The Secretary shall submit to the Congress no later than July 1, ~~1973,~~ 1974, a full report on the experiments and demonstration projects carried out under this subsection and on the experience of other programs with respect to prospective reimbursement together with any related data and materials which he may consider appropriate. Such report shall include detailed recommendations with respect to the specific methods which could be used in the full implementation of a system of prospective payment to providers of services under programs involved.

(b) (1) Section 402 (a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 is amended to read as follows:

"(a) (1) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is authorized, either directly or through grants to public or nonprofit private agencies, institutions, and organizations or contracts with public or private agencies, institutions, and organizations, to develop and engage in experiments and demonstration projects for the following purposes:

"(A) to determine whether, and if so which, changes in methods of payment or reimbursement (other than those dealt with in section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of ~~1971~~ 1972) for health care and services under health programs established by the Social Security Act, including a change to methods based on negotiated rates, would have the effect of increasing the efficiency and economy of health services under such programs through the creation of additional incentives to these ends without adversely affecting the quality of such services;

"(B) to determine whether payments for services other than those for which payment may be made under such programs (and which are incidental to services for which payment may be made under such programs) would, in the judgment of the Secretary, result in more economical provision and more effective utilization of services for which payment may be made under such program, where such services are furnished by organizations and institutions which have the capability of providing—

"(i) comprehensive health care services,

"(ii) mental health care services (as defined by section 401(c) of the Mental Retardation Facilities and Community Health Centers Construction Act of 1963),

"(iii) ambulatory health care services (including surgical services provided on an outpatient basis), or

"(iv) institutional services which may substitute, at lower cost, for hospital ~~care;~~ care;

"(C) to determine whether the rates of payment or reimbursement for health care services, approved by a State for purposes of the administration of one or more of its laws, when utilized to determine the amount to be paid for services furnished in such State under the health programs established by the Social Security Act, would have the effect of reducing the costs of such programs without adversely affecting the quality of such services;

"(D) to determine whether payments under such programs based on a single combined rate of reimbursement or charge for the teaching activities and patient care which residents, interns, and supervising physicians render in connection with a graduate medical education program in a patient facility would result in more equitable and economical patient care arrangements without adversely affecting the quality of such care;

~~"(E) to determine whether peer review, utilization review, and medical review mechanisms established on an areawide or communitywide basis would have a beneficial effect in helping to assure that services provided conform to appropriate professional standards for the provision of health care and that payment for such services will be made—~~

~~"(i) only when, and to the extent, medically necessary, as determined in the exercise of reasonable limits of professional discretion, and~~

~~"(ii) in the case of services provided by a hospital or other health care facility on an inpatient basis, only when and for such period as such services cannot, consistent with professionally recognized health care standards, effectively be provided on an outpatient basis or more economically in an inpatient health care facility of a different type; as determined in the exercise of reasonable limits of professional discretion; and~~

"(E) to determine whether coverage of intermediate care facility services and homemaker services would provide suitable alternatives to posthospital benefits presently provided under title XVIII of the Social Security Act; such experiment and demonstration projects may include:

"(i) counting each day of care in an intermediate care facility as one day of care in a skilled nursing facility, if such care was for a condition for which the individual was hospitalized,

"(ii) covering the services of homemakers for a maximum of 21 days, if institutional services are not medically appropriate,

"(iii) determining whether such coverage would reduce long-range costs by reducing the lengths of stay in hospitals and skilled nursing facilities, and

"(iv) establishing alternative eligibility requirements and determining the probable cost of applying each alternative, if the project suggests that such extension of coverage would be desirable;

"(F) to determine whether, and if so which type of, fixed price or performance incentive contract would have the effect of inducing to the greatest degree effective, efficient, and economical performance of agencies and organizations making payment under agreements or contracts with the Secretary for health care and services under health programs established by the Social Security ~~Act.~~ Act; and

"(G) to determine under what circumstances payment for services would be appropriate and the most appropriate, equitable, and noninflationary methods and amounts of reimbursement under health care programs established by the Social Security Act for services, which are performed independently by an assistant to a physician, including a nurse practitioner (whether or not performed in the office of or at a place at which such physician is physically present), and—

"(i) which such assistant is legally authorized to perform by the State or political subdivision wherein such services are performed; and

"(ii) for which such physician assumes full legal and ethical responsibility as to the necessity, propriety, and quality thereof.

For purposes of this subsection, 'health programs established by the Social Security Act' means the program established by title XVIII of such Act, a program established by a plan of a State approved under title XIX of such Act, and a program established by a plan of a State approved under title V of such Act.

"(2) Grants, payments under contracts, and other expenditures made for experiments and demonstration projects under paragraph (1) shall be made in appropriate part from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund (established by section 1817 of the Social Security Act) and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund (established by section 1841 of the Social Security Act) and from funds appropriated under titles V and XIX of such Act. Grants and payments under contracts may be made either in advance or by way of reimbursement, as may be determined by the Secretary, and shall be made in such installments and on such conditions as the Secretary finds necessary to carry out the purpose of this section. With respect to any such grant, payment, or other expenditure, the amount to be paid from each of such trust funds (and from funds appropriated under such titles V and XIX) shall be determined by the Secretary, giving due regard to the purposes of the experiment or project involved."

(2) Section 402(b) of such amendments is amended—

(A) by striking out "experiment" each time it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "experiment or demonstration project";

(B) by striking out "experiments" and inserting in lieu thereof "experiments and projects"; and

(C) by striking out "reasonable charge" and inserting in lieu thereof "reasonable charge, or to reimbursement or payment only for such services or items as may be specified in the experiment".

necessary in the efficient delivery of needed health services, but only if—

"(I) the Secretary has provided notice to the public of any charges being imposed on individuals entitled to benefits under this title on account of costs substantially in excess of the costs determined to be necessary in the efficient delivery of needed health services under this title by particular providers of services in the area in which such items or services are furnished, and

PAYMENTS TO HEALTH MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATIONS

SEC. 226. (a) Title XVIII of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"PAYMENTS TO HEALTH MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATIONS

"SEC. 1876. (a) (1) In lieu of amounts which would otherwise be payable pursuant to sections 1814(b) and 1833(a), the Secretary is authorized to determine, by actuarial methods, as provided in this section, but only with respect to a health maintenance organization with which he has entered into a contract under subsection (i), a ~~prospective~~ per capita rate of payment—

"(A) for services provided under parts A and B for individuals enrolled with such organization pursuant to subsection (e) who are entitled to hospital insurance benefits under part A and enrolled for medical insurance benefits under part B, and

"(B) for services provided under part B for individuals enrolled with such organization pursuant to subsection (e) who are not entitled to benefits under part A but who are enrolled for benefits under part B.

~~"(2) (A) Each such rate of payment shall be determined annually in accordance with regulations and shall be equal to 95 per centum of the amount that the Secretary estimates (with appropriate adjustments to assure actuarial equivalence) would be payable for services covered under this title (including administrative costs incurred by organizations described in sections 1816 and 1842) if such serv-~~ ices were to be furnished by other than health maintenance organizations.

"(B) In order to assure that health maintenance organizations will not be permitted to retain revenues in excess of expenses with respect to such individuals at a rate greater than that applicable to their other enrollees, any contract with a health maintenance organization under this title shall provide that the Secretary shall require, at such time following the expiration of each accounting period of a health maintenance organization (and in such form and in such detail) as he may prescribe:

"(i) that such organization report to him in a certified public statement the amount retained (as herein defined) and the rate of retention (as herein defined) for the preceding accounting period with respect to (I) individuals enrolled with such organization under this section, considered as a group, and (II) all other individuals enrolled with such organization, considered as a group;

"(ii) that an audit (meeting requirements prescribed by the Secretary) be conducted with respect to any such organization which has a rate of retention with respect to individuals enrolled under this section which is in excess of 90 per centum of such organization's rate of retention with respect to all other individuals enrolled with such organization;

"(iii) that such part of the amount retained by any health maintenance organization with respect to individuals enrolled under this section which is attributable to an excessive rate of retention (as herein defined) shall be repaid by such organization unless used by it to provide benefits to enrollees under this section in addition to those specified in subsection (c) or to reduce the premium rates charged by such organization to such enrollees pursuant to subsection (g).

For purposes of this section—

"(iv) the term 'amount retained' means the difference between (I) the revenues (irrespective of the source of such revenues) of any health maintenance organization (for any accounting period as defined in regulations) with respect to any group of individuals who are enrolled with such organization and (II) the expenses of such organization (for such accounting period) with respect to such group of individuals;

"(v) the term 'rate of retention' means the ratio of such amount retained to such revenues, expressed as a percentage; and

"(vi) the term 'excessive rate of retention' means (I) any rate of retention of any health maintenance or~~ganization with respect to individuals enrolled under this section which is greater than such organization's rate of retention with respect to all other individuals enrolled with such organization, or (II) with respect to any health maintenance organization to which subsection (h) applies, any rate of retention with respect to individuals enrolled under this section which is greater than a reasonable rate of retention as determined in accordance with regulations, taking into account the rate of retention experienced by comparable organizations with respect to other individuals enrolled with such comparable organizations.~~

"(2) An interim per capita rate of payment for each health maintenance organization shall be determined annually by the Secretary on the basis of each organization's annual operating budget and enrollment forecast which shall be submitted (in such form and in such detail as the Secretary may prescribe) at least 90 days before the beginning of each contract year. Each interim rate shall be equal to the estimated per capita cost (based upon types and components of expenses otherwise reimbursable under this title) of providing services defined in paragraph (3)(A)(iv). In the event that the data requested to be furnished by a health maintenance organization are not furnished timely, such reduction in interim payments may be made by the Secretary as is appropriate, until such time as a reasonable estimate of per capita costs can be made. Each month, the Secretary shall pay each such organization its interim per capita rate, in advance, for each individual enrolled with it pursuant to subsection (e). Each such organization shall submit interim estimated cost reports and enrollment data on a quarterly basis in such form and manner satisfactory to the Secretary, and the Secretary shall adjust each interim per capita rate to the extent necessary to maintain interim payments at the level of current costs. Interim payments made under this paragraph shall be subject to retroactive adjustment at the end of each contract year as provided in paragraph (3).

"(3)(A) With respect to any health maintenance organization which has entered into a risk sharing contract with the Secretary pursuant to subsection (i)(2)(A), payments made to such organization shall be subject to the following adjustments at the end of each contract year:

"(i) if the Secretary determines that the per capita incurred cost of any such organization in any contract year for providing services described in paragraph (1) is less than the adjusted average per capita incurred cost (as defined herein) of providing such services, the resulting difference (hereinafter referred to as 'savings') shall be apportioned following the close of a contract year for such year between such organization and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund (hereinafter collectively referred to as the 'Medicare Trust Funds') as follows:

"(I) savings up to 10 percent of the adjusted average per capita costs shall be apportioned equally between such organization and the Medicare Trust Funds;

"(II) savings between 10 and 20 percent shall be apportioned one-quarter to such organization and three-quarters to such Trust Funds;

"(III) savings in excess of 20 percent of the adjusted average per capita cost shall be apportioned entirely to such Trust Funds;

"(ii) if the Secretary determines that the per capita incurred cost of any such organization in any contract year for providing services described in paragraph (1) is greater than the adjusted average per capita incurred cost of providing such services, the resulting difference (hereinafter referred to as 'losses') shall be apportioned between such organization and the Medicare Trust Funds as follows:

"(I) losses up to 10 percent over the adjusted average per capita cost shall be borne equally by such organization and such Trust Funds;

"(II) losses between 10 and 20 percent over the adjusted average per capita cost shall be borne three-quarters by such Trust Funds and one-quarter by such organization;

"(III) losses in excess of 20 percent over the adjusted average per capita cost shall be borne entirely by such Trust Funds;

"(iii) losses absorbed by such organization or by the Medicare Trust Funds in any year shall be carried forward and shall be offset from savings realized in later years, with the apportionment of savings being proportional to the losses absorbed and not yet offset;

"(iv) determination of any amounts payable at the close of the contract year to such organization or to the Trust Funds shall be made as follows:

"(I) within 90 days after close of a contract year, interim determination of the amount of estimated savings or losses and apportionment thereof shall be made, actuarially, on the basis of interim reports of costs incurred by an organization, and adjusted average per capita costs incurred (as defined herein), and other evidence acceptable to the Secretary and one-half of any amounts deemed payable to such organization or the Trust Funds shall be paid by such organization or the Secretary as appropriate; and

"(II) final settlement and payment by the Secretary or organization, as appropriate, of any additional amounts due on basis of such final settlement will be made where adequate data for actuarial computation are available, in timely fashion following submission by such organization of reports specified in subparagraph (C) of this paragraph;

"(III) where such final settlement is reached more than 90 days following submission of reports specified in subparagraph (C) of this paragraph, any amount payable by the Secretary or organization shall be increased by an interest amount, accruing from the 91st day following submission of such report, equal to the average rate of interest payable on Federal obligations if issued on such 91st day for purchase by the Trust Funds.

"(v) The term 'adjusted average per capita cost' means the average per capita amount that the Secretary determines (on the basis of actual experience, or retrospective actuarial equivalent based upon an adequate sample and other information and data, in the geographic area served by a health maintenance organization or in a similar area, with appropriate adjustment to assure actuarial equivalence, including adjustments relating to age distribution, sex, race, institutional status, disability status, and any other relevant factors) would be payable in any contract year for services covered under this title and types of expenses otherwise reimbursable under this title (including administrative costs incurred by organizations described in sections 1816 and 1842) if such services were to be furnished by other than such health maintenance organization.

"(B) With respect to any health maintenance organization which has entered into a reasonable cost reimbursement contract with the Secretary pursuant to subsection (i)(2)(B), payments made to such organization shall be subject to suitable retroactive corrective adjustments at the end of each contract year so as to assure that such organization is paid for the reasonable cost actually incurred (excluding therefrom any part of incurred cost found to be unnecessary in the efficient delivery of health services) for the types of expenses otherwise reimbursable under this title for providing services covered under this title to individuals described in paragraph (1).

"(C) Any contract with a health maintenance organization under this title shall provide that the Secretary shall require, at such time following the expiration of each accounting period of a health maintenance organization (and in such form and in such detail) as he may prescribe:

"(i) that such health maintenance organization report to him in an independently certified financial statement its per capita incurred cost based on the types and components of expenses otherwise reimbursable under this title for providing services described in paragraph (1), including therein, in accordance with accounting procedures prescribed by the Secretary, its methods of allocating costs between individuals enrolled under this section and other individuals enrolled with such organization;

"(ii) that failure to report such information as may be required may be deemed to constitute evidence of likely overpayment on the basis of which appropriate collection action may be taken;

"(iii) that in any case in which a health maintenance organization is related to another organization by common ownership or control, a consolidated financial statement shall be filed and that the allowable costs for such organization may not include costs for the types of expense otherwise reimbursable under this title, in excess of those which would be determined to be reasonable in accordance with regulations (providing for limiting reimbursement to costs rather than charges to the health maintenance organization by related organizations and owners) issued by the Secretary in accordance with section 1861(v) of the Social Security Act; and

"(iv) that in any case in which compensation is paid by a health maintenance organization substantially in excess of what is normally paid for similar services by similar practitioners (regardless of method of compensation), such compensation may as appropriate be considered to constitute a distribution of profits.

"~~(3)~~ (4) The payments to health maintenance organizations under this subparagraph with respect to individuals described in subsection (a) (1) (A) shall be made from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund. The portion of such payment to such an organization for a month to be paid by the latter trust fund shall be equal to 200 percent of the sum of—

"(A) the product of (i) the number of covered enrollees of such organization for such month (as described in paragraph (1)), who have attained age 65, and (ii) the monthly actuarial rate for supplementary medical insurance for such month as determined under section 1839(c)(1), and

"(B) the product of (i) the number of covered enrollees of such organization for such month (as described in paragraph (1)) who have not attained age 65, and (ii) the monthly actuarial rate for supplementary medical insurance for such month as determined under section 1839(c)(4).

The remainder of such payment shall be paid by the former trust fund. For limitation on Federal participation for capital expenditures which are out of conformity with a comprehensive plan of a State or areawide planning agency, see section 1122.

"(b) The term 'health maintenance organization' means a public or private organization which—

"(1) provides, either directly or through arrangements with others, health services to individuals enrolled with such organization ~~under subsection (c) on a per capita prepayment basis~~ on the basis of a predetermined periodic rate without regard to the frequency or extent of services furnished to any particular enrollee;

"(2) provides, either directly or through arrangements with others, to the extent applicable in subsection (c) (through institutions, entities, and persons meeting

"(3) provides physicians' services primarily (A) directly through physicians who are either employees or partners of such organization, or (B) under arrangements with one or more groups of physicians (organized on a group practice or individual practice basis) under which each such group is reimbursed for its services primarily on the basis of an aggregate fixed sum or on a per capita basis, regardless of whether the individual physician members of any such group are paid on a fee-for-service or other basis;

"(4) provides either directly or under arrangements with others, the services of a sufficient number of primary care and specialty care physicians to meet the health needs of its members; for purposes of this section the term 'specialty care physician' means a physician who is either board certified or eligible for board certification, except that the Secretary may by regulation prescribe conditions under which physicians who have a record of demonstrated proficiency but who are not eligible for board certification may, on the basis of training and experience, be recognized as specialty care physicians;

"(5) has effective arrangements to assure that its members have access to qualified practitioners in those specialties which are generally available in the geographic area served by the health maintenance organization;

"~~(7)~~ (9) has an open enrollment period at least every year under which it accepts up to the limits of its capacity and without restrictions, except as may be authorized in regulations, individuals who are eligible to enroll under subsection (d) in the order in which they apply for enrollment unless to do so would result in failure to meet the requirements of paragraph ~~(5)~~ (7) or would result in enrollment of enrollees substantially nonrepresentative, as determined in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, of the population in the geographic area served by such health maintenance organization.

"(c) The benefits provided under this section to enrollees of an organization which has entered into a risk sharing contract with the Secretary pursuant to subsection (i)(2)(A) shall consist of—

"(1) in the case of an individual who is entitled to hospital insurance benefits under part A and enrolled for medical insurance benefits under part B—

"(2) in the case of an individual who is not entitled to hospital insurance benefits under part A but who is enrolled for medical insurance benefits under part B, entitlement to have payment made for services described in paragraph (1), but only to the extent that such services are also described in section 1832.

"(d) Subject to the provisions of subsection (e), every individual described in subsection (c) (1) and (2) shall be eligible to enroll with any health maintenance organization (as defined in subsection (b)) which serves the geographic area in which such individual resides.

"(e) An individual may enroll with a health maintenance organization under this section, and may terminate such enrollment, as may be prescribed by regulations.

"(f) Any individual enrolled with a health maintenance organization under this section who is dissatisfied by reason of his failure to receive without additional cost to him any health service to which he believes he is entitled, shall, if the amount in controversy is $100 or more, be entitled to a hearing before the Secretary to the same extent as is provided in section 205(b) and in any such hearing the Secretary shall make such health maintenance organization a party thereto. If the amount in controversy is $1,000 or more, such individual or health maintenance organization shall be entitled to judicial review of the Secretary's final decision after such hearing as is provided in section 205(g).

"(g) (1) If the health maintenance organization provides its enrollees under this section only the services described in subsection (c), its premium rate or other charges for such enrollees shall not exceed the actuarial value of the deductible and coinsurance which would otherwise be applicable to such enrollees under part A and part B, if they were not enrolled under this section.

"(2) If the health maintenance organization provides to its enrollees under this section services in addition to those described in subsection (c), ~~it~~ election of coverage for such additional services shall be optional for such enrollees and such organization shall furnish such enrollees with information on the portion of its premium rate or other charges applicable to such additional services. The portion applicable to the services described in subsection (c) may not exceed (i) the actuarial value of the deductible and coinsurance which would otherwise be applicable to such enrollees under part A and part B if they were not enrolled under this section less (ii) the actuarial value of other charges made in lieu of such deductible and coinsurance.

"(h) The provisions of paragraph ~~(5)~~ (7) of subsection (b) shall not apply with respect to any health maintenance organization for such period not to exceed three years from the date such organization enters into an agreement with the Secretary pursuant to subsection (i), as the Secretary may permit, but only so long as such organization demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary by the submission of its plans for each year that it is making continuous efforts and progress toward achieving compliance with the provisions of such paragraph ~~(5)~~ (7) within such three-year period.

"(i) (1) ~~The Secretary~~ Subject to the limitations contained in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (2), the Secretary is authorized to enter into a contract with any health maintenance organization which undertakes to provide, on ~~a~~ an interim per capita prepayment basis, the services described in section 1832 (and section 1812, in the case of individuals who are entitled to hospital insurance benefits under part A) to individuals enrolled with such organization pursuant to subsection (e).

"(2)(A) If the health maintenance organization (i) has a current enrollment of not less than 25,000 members on a prepaid capitation basis and has been the primary source of health care of at least 8,000 persons in each of the two years immediately preceding the contract year, or (ii) serves a nonurban geographic area, has a current enrollment of not less than 5,000 members on a prepaid capitation basis and has been the primary source of health care for at least 1,500 persons in each of the three years immediately preceding the contract year, the Secretary may enter into a risk sharing contract with such organization pursuant to which any savings and losses, as determined pursuant to subsection (a)(3)(A), are shared between such organization and the Medicare Trust Funds in the manner prescribed in such subsection. For purposes of this subparagraph, a health maintenance organization shall be considered to serve a nonurban geographic area if it is located in a nonmetropolitan county (that is, a county with fewer than 50,000 inhabitants), or if it has at least one such county in its normal service area, or if it is located outside of a metropolitan area and its facilities are within reasonable travel distance (as defined by the Secretary) of fewer than 50,000 individuals. No health maintenance organization which has entered into a risk sharing contract with the Secretary under this subparagraph and has voluntarily terminated such contract may again enter into such a contract.

"(B) If the health maintenance organization does not meet the requirements of subparagraph (A), or if the Secretary is not satisfied that the health maintenance organization has the capacity to bear its proportionate share of risk of potential losses as determined under clause (ii) of subsection (a)(3)(A), or if the health maintenance organization meeting the requirements of subparagraph (A) so elects, or if an organization does not fully meet the requirements of section 1876(b) but has demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Secretary that it is making reasonable efforts to meet, and is developing the capability to fully meet, such requirements, and that it fully meets such basic requirements as the Secretary shall prescribe in regulations, the Secretary may, if he is otherwise satisfied that the health maintenance organization or other organization is able to perform its contractual obligations effectively and efficiently, enter into a contract with such organization pursuant to which such organization is reimbursed on the basis of its reasonable cost (as defined in section 1861(v)) in the manner prescribed in subsection (a)(3)(B).

"(3) Such contract may, at the option of such organization, provide that the Secretary (A) will reimburse hospitals and extended care facilities for the reasonable cost (as determined under section 1861(v)) of services furnished to individuals enrolled with such organization pursuant to subsection (e), and (B) will deduct the amount of such reimbursement from payments which would otherwise be made to such organization. If a health maintenance organization pays a hospital or extended care facility directly, the amount paid shall not exceed the reasonable cost of the services (as determined under section 1861(v)) unless such organization demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary that such excess payments are justified on the basis of advantages gained by the organization.

"~~(2)~~ (4) Each contract under this section shall be for a term of at least one year, as determined by the Secretary, and may be made automatically renewable from term to term in the absence of notice by either party of intention to terminate at the end of the current term; except that the Secretary may terminate any such contract at any time (after such reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the health maintenance organization involved as he may provide in regulations), if he finds that the organization (A) has failed substantially to carry out the contract, (B) is carrying out the contract in a manner inconsistent with the efficient and effective administration of this section, or (C) no longer substantially meets the applicable conditions of subsection (b).

"~~(3)~~ (5) The effective date of any contract executed pursuant to this subsection shall be specified in such contract pursuant to the regulations.

"~~(4)~~ (6) Each contract under this section—

"(A) shall provide that the Secretary, or any person or organization designated by him—

"(i) shall have the right to inspect or otherwise evaluate the quality, appropriateness, and timeliness of services performed under such contract; and

"(ii) shall have the right to audit and inspect any books and records of such health maintenance organization which pertain to services performed and determinations of amounts payable under such contract; ~~and~~

"(B) shall provide that no reinsurance costs (other than those with respect to out-of-area services), including any underwriting of risk relating to costs in excess of adjusted average per capita cost, as defined in clause (iv) of subsection (a)(3)(A), shall be allowed for purposes of determining payments authorized under this section; and

"~~(B)~~ (C) shall contain such other terms and conditions not inconsistent with this section as the Secretary may find necessary.

"(j) The function vested in the Secretary by subsection (i) may be performed without regard to such provisions of law or of other regulations relating to the making, performance, amendment, or modification of contracts of the United States as the Secretary may determine to be inconsistent with the furtherance of the purposes of this title."

(b) (1) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 1814 and section 1833 of the Social Security Act, any health maintenance organization which has entered into a contract with the Secretary pursuant to section 1876 of such Act shall, for the duration of such contract (except as provided in paragraph (2)), be entitled to reimbursement only as provided in section 1876 of such Act for individuals who are members of such organizations~~; except that with respect to individuals who were members of such organization prior to January 1, 1972, and who, although eligible to have payment made pursuant to section 1876 of such Act for services rendered to them, chose (in accordance with regulations) not to have such payment made pursuant to such section, the Secretary shall, for a period not to exceed three years commencing on January 1, 1972, pay such organization on the basis of a per capita rate, determined in accordance with the provisions of~~

(2) With respect to individuals who are members of organizations which have entered into a risk-sharing contract with the Secretary pursuant to subsection (i)(2)(A) prior to July 1, 1973, and who, although eligible to have payment made pursuant to section 1876 of such Act for services rendered to them, chose (in accordance with regulations) not to have such payment made pursuant to such section, the Secretary shall, for a period not to exceed three years commencing on July 1, 1973, pay to such organization on the basis of an interim per capita rate, determined in accordance with the provisions of section 1876(a)(2) of such Act, with appropriate actuarial adjustments to reflect the difference in utilization of out-of-plan services, which would have been considered sufficiently reasonable and necessary under the rules of the health maintenance organization to be provided by that organization, between such individuals and individuals who are enrolled with such organization pursuant to section 1876 of such Act. Payments under this paragraph shall be subject to retroactive adjustment at the end of each contract year as provided in paragraph (3).

(3) If the Secretary determines that the per capita cost of any such organization in any contract year for providing services to individuals described in paragraph (2), when combined with the cost of the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund in such year for providing out-of-plan services to such individuals, is less than or greater than the adjusted average per capita cost (as defined in section 1876 (a)(3) of such Act) of providing such services, the resulting savings or losses (as the case may be) shall be apportioned between such organization and such Trust Funds in the manner prescribed in section 1876(a)(3) of such Act.

(c) (1) Section 1814 (a) of such Act is amended by striking out "Except as provided in subsection (d)," and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Except as provided in subsection (d) and in section 1876,".

(2) Section 1833 (a) of such Act is amended by striking out "Subject to" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Except as provided in section 1876, and subject to".

(d) Section 1875(b) of the Social Security Act, as amended by section 222(c) of this Act, is further amended—

"(k) The Secretary is authorized to provide at the request of any State (and without cost to such State) such technical and actuarial assistance as may be necessary to assist such State to contract with any health maintenance organization which meets the requirements of section 1876 for the purpose of providing medical care and services to individuals who are entitled to medical assistance under this title."

~~(d)~~ (f) The amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to services provided on or after ~~January~~ July 1,~~1972.~~ 1973.

"PART A—GENERAL PROVISIONS"

(b) Title XI of such Act is further amended by adding the following:

"PART B—PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS REVIEW

"DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

"SEC. 1151. In order to promote the effective, efficient, and ecomonical delivery of health care services of proper quality for which payment may be made (in whole or in part) under this Act and in recognition of the interests of patients, the public, practitioners, and providers in improved health care services, it is the purpose of this part to assure, through the application of suitable procedures of professional standards review, that the services for which payment may be made under the Social Security Act will conform to appropriate professional standards for the provision of health care and that payment for such services will be made -

"(1) only when, and to the extent, medically necessary, as determined in the exercise of reasonable limits of professional discretion; and

"(2) in the case of services provided by a hospital or other health care facility on an inpatient basis, only when and for such period as such services cannot, consistent with professionally recognized health care standards, effectively be provided on an outpatient basis or more economically in an inpatient health care facility of a different type, as determined in the exercise of reasonable limits of professional discretion.

"DESIGNATION OF PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS REVIEW ORGANIZATIONS

"SEC. 1152. (a) The Secretary shall (1) not later than January 1, 1974, establish throughout the United States appropriate areas with respect to which Professional Standards Review Organizations may be designated, and (2) at the earliest practicable date after designation of an area enter into an agreement with a qualified orgnization whereby such an organization shall be conditionally designated as the Professional Standards Review Organization for such area. If, on the basis of its performance during such period of conditional designation, the Secretary determines that such organization is capable of fulfilling, in a satisfactory manner, the obligations and requirements for a Professional Standards Review Organization under this part, he shall enter into an agreement with such organization designating it as the Professional Standards Review Organization for such area.

"(b) For purposes of subsection (a), the term 'qualified organization' means—

"(1) when used in connection with any area—

"(A) an organization (i) which is a nonprofit professional association (or a component organization thereof), (ii) which is composed of licensed doctors of medicine or osteopathy engaged in the practice of medicine or surgery in such area, (iii) the membership of which includes a substantial proportion of all such physicians in such area, (iv) which is organized in a manner which makes available professional competence to review health care services of the types and kinds with respect to which Professional Standards Review Organizations have review responsibilities under this part, (v) the membership of which is voluntary and open to all doctors of medicine or osteopathy licensed to engage in the practice of medicine or surgery in such area without requirement of membership in or payment of dues to any organized medical society or association, and (vi) which does not restrict the eligibility of any member for service as an officer of the Professional Standards Review Organization or eligibility for and assignment to duties of such Professional Standards Review Organization, or, subject to subsection (c)(i),

"(B) such other public, nonprofit private, or other agency or organization, which the Secretary determines, in accordance with criteria prescribed by him in regulations, to be of professional competence and otherwise suitable; and

"(2) an organization which the Secretary, on the basis of his examination and evaluation of a formal plan submitted to him by the association, agency, or organization (as well as on the basis of other relevant data and information), finds to be willing to perform and capable of performing, in an effective, timely, and objective manner and at reasonable cost, the duties, functions, and activities of a Professional Standards Review Organization required by or pursuant to this part.

"(c)(1) The Secretary shall not enter into any agreement under this part under which there is designated as the Professional Standards Review Organization for any area any organization other than an organization referred to in subsection (b)(1)(A) unless, in such area, there is no organization referred to in subsection (b)(1)(A) which meets the conditions specified in subsection (b)(2).

"(2) Whenever the Secretary shall have entered into an agreement under this part under which there is designated as the Professional Standards Review Organization for any area any organization other than an organization referred to in subsection (b)(1)(A), he shall not renew such agreements with such organization if he determines that—

"(A) there is in such area an organization referred to in subsection (b)(1)(A) which (i) has not been previously designated as a Professional Standards Review Organization. and (ii) is willing to enter into an agreement under this part under which such organization would be designated as the Professional Standards Review Organization for such area;

"(B) such organization meets the conditions specified in subsection (b)(2); and

"(C) the designation of such organization as the Professional Standards Review Organization for such area is anticipated to result in substantial improvement in the performance in such area of the duties and functions required of such organizations under this part.

"(d) Any such agreement under this part with an organization (other than an agreement established pursuant to section 1154) shall be for a term of 12 months; except that, prior to the expiration of such term such agreement may be terminated—

"(1) by the organization at such time and upon such notice to the Secretary as may be prescribed in regulations (except that notice of more than 3 months may not be required); or

"(2) by the Secretary at such time and upon such reasonable notice to the organization as may be prescribed in regulations, but only after the Secretary has determined (after providing such organization with an opportunity for a formal hearing on the matter) that such organization is not substantially complying with or effectively carrying out the provisions of such agreement.

"(e) In order to avoid duplication of functions and unnecessary review and control activities, the Secretary is authorized to waive any or all of the review, certification, or similar activities otherwise required under or pursuant to any provision of this Act (other than this part) where he finds, on the basis of substantial evidence of the effective performance of review and control activities by Professional Standards Review Organizations, that the review, certification, and similar activities otherwise so required are not needed for the provision of adequate review and control.

"REVIEW PENDING DESIGNATION OF PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS REVIEW ORGANIZATION

"SEC. 1153. Pending the assumption by a Professional Standards Review Organization for any area, of full review responsibility, and pending a demonstration of capacity for improved review effort with respect to matters involving the provision of health care services in such area for which payment (in whole or in part) may be made, under this Act, any review with respect to such services which has not been designated by the Secretary as the full responsibility of such organization, shall be reviewed in the manner otherwise provided for under law.

"TRIAL PERIOD FOR PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS REVIEW ORGANIZATIONS

"SEC. 1154. (a) The Secretary shall initially designate an organization as a Professional Standards Review Organization for any area on a conditional basis with a view to determining the capacity of such organization to perform the duties and functions imposed under this part on Professional Standards Review Organizations. Such designation may not be made prior to receipt from such organization and approval by the Secretary of a formal plan for the orderly assumption and implementation of the responsibilities of the Professional Standards Review Organization under this part.

"(b) During any such trial period (which may not exceed 24 months), the Secretary may require a Professional Standards Review Organization to perform only such of the duties and functions required under this part of Professional Standards Review Organization as he determines such organization to be capable of performing. The number and type of such duties shall, during the trial period, be progressively increased as the organization becomes capable of added responsibility so that, by the end of such period, such organization shall be considered a qualified organization only if the Secretary finds that it is substantially carrying out in a satisfactory manner, the activities and functions required of Professional Standards Review Organizations under this part with respect to the review of health care services provided or ordered by physicians and other practitioners and institutional and other health care facilities, agencies, and organizations. Any of such duties and functions not performed by such organization during such period shall be performed in the manner and to the extent otherwise provided for under law.

"(c) Any agreement under which any organization is conditionally designated as the Professional Standards Review Organization for any area may be terminated by such organization upon 90 days notice to the Secretary or by the Secretary upon 90 days notice to such organization.

"DUTIES AND FUNCTIONS OF PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS REVIEW ORGANIZATIONS

"SEC. 1155. (a)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, but consistent with the provisions of this part, it shall be the duty and function of each Professional Standards Review Organization for any area to assume, at the earliest date practicable, responsibility for the review of the professional activities in such area of physicians and other health care practitioners and institutional and noninstitutional providers of health care services in the provision of health care services and items for which payment may be made (in whole or in part) under this Act for the purpose of determining whether—

"(A) such services and items are or were medically necessary;

"(B) the quality of such services meets professionally recognized standards of health care; and

"(C) in case such services and items are proposed to be provided in a hospital or other health care facility on an inpatient basis, such services and items could, consistent with the provision of appropriate medical care, be effectively provided on an out-patient basis or more economically in an inpatient health care facility of a different type.

"(2) Each Professional Standards Review Organization shall have the authority to determine, in advance, in the case of—

"(A) any elective admission to a hospital, or other health care facility, or

"(B) any other health care service which will consist of extended or costly courses of treatment, whether such service, if provided, or if provided by a particular health care practitioner or by a particular hospital or other health care facility, organization, or agency, would meet the criteria specified in clauses (A) and (C) of paragraph (1).

"(3) Each Professional Standards Review Organization shall, in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, determine and publish, from time to time, the types and kinds of cases (whether by type of health care or diagnosis involved, or whether in terms of other relevant criteria relating to the provision of health care services) with respect to which such organization will, in order most effectively to carry out the purposes of this part, exercise the authority conferred upon it under paragraph (2).

"(4) Each Professional Standards Review Organization shall be responsible for the arranging for the maintenance of and the regular review of profiles of care and services received and provided with respect to patients, utilizing to the greatest extent practicable in such patient profiles, methods of coding which will provide maximum confidentiality as to patient identity and assure objective evaluation consistent with the purposes of this part. Profiles shall also be regularly reviewed on an ongoing basis with respect to each health care practitioner and provider to determine whether the care and services ordered or rendered are consistent with the criteria specified in clauses (A), (B), and (C) of paragraph (1).

"(5) Physicians assigned responsibility for the review of hospital care may be only those having active hospital staff privileges in at least one of the participating hospitals in the area served by the Professional Standards Review Organization and (except as may be otherwise provided under subsection (e)(1) of this section) such physicians ordinarily should not be responsible for, but may participate in the review of care and services provided in any hospital in which such physicians have active staff privileges.

"(6) No physician shall be permitted to review—

"(A) health care services provided to a patient if he was directly or indirectly involved in providing such services, or

"(B) health care services provided in or by an institution, organization, or agency, if he or any member of his family has, directly or indirectly, any financial interest in such institution, organization, or agency.

For purposes of this paragraph, a physician's family includes only his spouse (other than a spouse who is legally separated from him under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance), children (including legally adopted children), grandchildren, parents, and grandparents.

"(b) To the extent necessary or appropriate for the proper performance of its duties and functions, the Professional Standards Review Organization serving any area is authorized in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary to—

"(1) make arrangements to utilize the services of persons who are practitioners of or specialists in the various areas of medicine (including dentistry), or other types of health care, which persons shall, to the maximum extent practicable, be individuals engaged in the practice of their profession within the area served by such organization;

"(2) undertake such professional inquiry either before or after, or both before and after, the provision of services with respect to which such organization has a responsibility for review under subsection (a)(1);

"(3) examine the pertinent records of any practitioner or provider of health care services providing services with respect to which such organization has a responsibility for review under subsection (a)(1); and

"(4) inspect the facilities in which care is rendered or services provided (which are located in such area) of any practitioner or provider.

"(c) No Professional Standards Review Organization shall utilize the services of any individual who is not a duly licensed doctor of medicine or osteopathy to make final determinations in accordance with its duties and functions under this part with respect to the professional conduct of any other duly licensed doctor of medicine or osteopathy, or any act performed by any duly licensed doctor of medicine or osteopathy in the exercise of his profession.

"(d) In order to familiarize physicians with the review functions and activities of Professional Standards Review

Organizations and to promote acceptance of such functions and activities by physicians, patients, and other persons, each Professional Standards Review Organization, in carrying out its review responsibilities, shall (to the maximum extent consistent with the effective and timely performance of its duties and functions)—

"(1) encourage all physicians practicing their profession in the area served by such Organization to participate as reviewers in the review activities of such Organizations;

"(2) provide rotating physician membership of review committees on an extensive and continuing basis;

"(3) assure that membership on review committees have the broadest representation feasible in terms of the various types of practice in which physicians engage in the area served by such Organization; and

"(4) utilize, whenever appropriate, medical periodicals and similar publications to publicize the functions and activities of Professional Standards Review Organizations.

"(e)(1) Each Professional Standards Review Organization shall utilize the services of, and accept the findings of, the review committees of a hospital or other operating health care facility or organization located in the area served by such organization, but only when and only to the extent and only for such time that such committees in such hospital or other operating health care facility or organization have demonstrated to the satisfaction of such organization their capacity effectively and in timely fashion to review activities in such hospital or other operating health care facility or organization (including the medical necessity of admissions, types and extent of services ordered, and lengths of stay) so as to aid in accomplishing the purposes and responsibilities described in subsection (a)(1), except where the Secretary disapproves, for good cause, such acceptance.

"(2) The Secretary may prescribe regulations to carry out the provisions of this subsection.

"(f)(1) An agreement entered into under this part between the Secretary and any organization under which such organization is designated as the Professional Standards Review Organization for any area shall provide that such organization will—

"(A) perform such duties and functions and assume such responsibilities and comply with such other requirements as may be required by this part or under regulations of the Secretary promulgated to carry out the provisions of this part; and

"(B) collect such data relevant to its functions and such information and keep and maintain such records in such form as the Secretary may require to carry out the purposes of this part and to permit access to and use of any such records as the Secretary may require for such purposes.

"(2) Any such agreement with an organization under this part shall provide that the Secretary make payments to such organization equal to the amount of expenses reasonably and necessarily incurred, as determined by the Secretary, by such organization in carrying out or preparing to carry out the duties and functions required by such agreement.

"NORMS OF HEALTH CARE SERVICES FOR VARIOUS ILLNESSES OR HEALTH CONDITIONS

"SEC. 1156. (a) Each Professional Standards Review Organization shall apply professionally developed norms of care, diagnosis, and treatment based upon typical patterns of practice in its regions (including typical lengths-of-stay for institutional care by age and diagnosis) as principal points of evaluation and review. The National Professional Standards

Review Council and the Secretary shall provide such technical assistance to the organization as will be helpful in utilizing and applying such norms of care, diagnosis, and treatment. Where the actual norms of care, diagnosis, and treatment in a Professional Standards Review Organization area are significantly different from professionally developed regional norms of care, diagnosis, and treatment approved for comparable conditions, the Professional Standards Review Organization concerned shall be so informed, and in the event that appropriate consultation and discussion indicate reasonable basis for usage of other norms in the area concerned, the Professional Standards Review Organization may apply such norms in such area as are approved by the National Professional Standards Review Council.

"(b) Such norms with respect to treatment for particular illnesses or health conditions shall include (in accordance with regulations of the Secretary)—

"(1) the types and extent of the health care services which, taking into account differing, but acceptable, modes of treatment and methods of organizing and delivering care are considered within the range of appropriate diagnosis and treatment of such illness or health condition, consistent with professionally recognized and accepted patterns of care;

"(2) the type of health care facility which is considered, consistent with such standards, to be the type in which health care services which are medically appropriate for such illness or condition can most economically be provided.

"(c)(1) The National Professional Standards Review Council shall provide for the preparation and distribution, to each Professional Standards Review Organization and to each other agency or person performing review functions with respect to the provision of health care services under this Act, of appropriate materials indicating the regional norms to be utilized pursuant to this part. Such data concerning norms shall be reviewed and revised from time to time. The approval of the National Professional Standards Review Council of norms of care, diagnosis, and treatment shall be based on its analysis of appropriate and adequate data.

"(2) Each review organization, agency, or person referred to in paragraph (1) shall utilize the norms developed under this section as a principal point of evaluation and review for determining, with respect to any health care services which have been or are proposed to be provided, whether such care and services are consistent with the criteria specified in section 1155(a)(1).

"(d)(1) Each Professional Standards Review Organization shall—

"(A) in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, specify the appropriate points in time after the admission of a patient for inpatient care in a health care institution, at which the physician attending such patient shall execute a certification stating that further inpatient care in such institution will be medically necessary effectively to meet the health care needs of such patient; and

"(B) require that there be included in any such certification with respect to any patient such information as may be necessary to enable such organization properly to evaluate the medical necessity of the further institutional health care recommended by the physician executing such certification.

"(2) The points in time at which any such certification will be required (usually, not later than the 50th percentile of lengths-of-stay for patients in similar age groups with similar diagnoses) shall be consistent with and based on professionally developed norms of care and treatment and data developed with respect to length of stay in health care institutions of patients having various illnesses, injuries, or health conditions, and requiring various types of health care services or procedures.

"SUBMISSION OF REPORTS BY PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS REVIEW ORGANIZATIONS

"SEC. 1157. If, in discharging its duties and functions under this part, any Professional Standards Review Organization determines that any health care practitioner or any hospital, or other health care facility, agency, or organization has violated any of the obligations imposed by section 1160, such organization shall report the matter to the Statewide professional Standards Review Council for the State in which such organization is located together with the recommendations of such Organization as to the action which should be taken with respect to the matter. Any Statewide Professional Standards Review Council receiving any such report and recommendation shall review the same and promptly transmit such report and recommendation to the Secretary together with any additional comments or recommendations thereon as it deems appropriate. The Secretary may utilize a Professional Standards Review Organization, in lieu of a program review team as specified in sections 1862 and 1866, for purposes of subparagraph (C) of section 1862(d)(1) and subparagraph (F) of section 1866(b)(2).

"REQUIREMENT OF REVIEW APPROVAL AS CONDITION OF PAYMENT OF CLAIMS

"SEC. 1158. (a) Except as provided for in section 1159, no Federal funds appropriated under any title of this Act (other than title V) for the provision of health care services or items shall be used (directly or indirectly) for the payment, under such title or any program established pursuant thereto, of any claim for the provision of such services or items, unless the Secretary, pursuant to regulation determines that the claimant is without fault if—

"(1) the provision of such services or items is subject to review under this part by any Professional Standards Review Organization, or other agency; and

"(2) such organization or other agency has, in the proper exercise of its duties and functions under or consistent with the purposes of this part, disapproved of the services or items giving rise to such claim, and has notified the practitioner or provider who provided or proposed to provide such services or items and the individual who would receive or was proposed to receive such services or items of its disapproval of the provision of such services or items.

"(b) Whenever any Professional Standards Review Organization, in the discharge of its duties and functions as specified by or pursuant to this part, disapproves of any health care services or items furnished or to be furnished by any practitioner or provider, such organization shall, after notifying the practitioner, provider, or other organization or agency of its disapproval in accordance with subsection (a), promptly notify the agency or organization having responsibility for acting upon claims for payment for or on account of such services or items.

"HEARINGS AND REVIEW BY SECRETARY

"SEC. 1159. (a) Any beneficiary or recipient who is entitled to benefits under this Act (other than title V) or a provider or practitioner who is dissatisfied with a determination with respect to a claim made by a Professional Standards Review Organization in carrying out its responsibilities for the review of professional activities in accordance with paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 1155(a) shall, after being notified of such determination, be entitled to a reconsideration thereof by the Professional Standards Review Organization and, where the Professional Standards Review

Organization reaffirms such determination in a State which has established a Statewide Professional Standards Review Council, and where the matter in controversy is $100 or more, such determination shall be reviewed by professional members of such Council and, if the Council so determined, revised.

"(b) Where the determination of the Statewide Professional Standards Review Council is adverse to the beneficiary or recipient (or, in the absence of such Council in a State and where the matter in controversy is $100 or more), such beneficiary or recipient shall be entitled to a hearing thereon by the Secretary to the same extent as is provided in section 205(b), and, where the amount in controversy is $1,000 or more, to judicial review of the Secretary's final decision after such hearing as is provided in section 205(g). The Secretary will render a decision only after appropriate professional consultation on the matter.

"(c) Any review or appeals provided under this section shall be in lieu of any review, hearing, or appeal under this Act with respect to the same issue.

"OBLIGATIONS OF HEALTH CARE PRACTITIONERS AND PROVIDERS OF HEALTH CARE SERVICES; SANCTIONS AND PENALTIES; HEARINGS AND REVIEW

"SEC. 1160. (a)(1) It shall be the obligation of any health care practitioner and any other person (including a hospital or other health care facility, organization, or agency) who provides health care services for which payment may be made (in whole or in part) under this Act, to assure that services or items ordered or provided by such practitioner or person to beneficiaries and recipients under this Act—

"(A) will be provided only when, and to the extent, medically necessary; and

"(B) will be of a quality which meets professionally recognized standards of health care; and

"(C) will be supported by evidence of such medical necessity and quality in such form and fashion and at such time as may reasonably be required by the Professional Standards Review Organization in the exercise of its duties and responsibilities; and it shall be the obligation of any health care practitioner, in ordering, authorizing, directing, or arranging for the provision by any other person (including a hospital or other health care facility, organization, or agency) of health care services for any patient of such practitioner, to exercise his professional responsibility with a view to assuring (to the extent of his influence or control over such patient, such person, or the provision of such services) that such services or items will be provided—

"(D) only when, and to the extent, medically necessary; and

"(E) will be of a quality which meets professionally recognized standards of health care.

"(2) Each health care practitioner, and each hospital or other provider of health care services, shall have an obligation, within reasonable limits of professional discretion, not to take any action, in the exercise of his profession (in the case of any health care practitioner), or in the conduct of its business (in the case of any hospital or other such provider), which would authorize any individual to be admitted as an inpatient in or to continue as an inpatient in any hospital or other health care facility unless—

"(A) in-patient care is determined by such practitioner and by such hospital or other provider, consistent with professionally recognized health care standards, to be medically necessary for the proper care of such individual; and

"(B)(i) the inpatient care required by such individual cannot, consistent with such standards, be provided more economically in a health care facility of a different type; or

"(ii) (in the case of a patient who requires care which can, consistent with such standards, be provided more economically in a health care facility of a different type) there is, in the area in which such individual is located, no such facility or no such facility which is available to provide care to such individual at the time when care is needed by him.

"(b)(1) If after reasonable notice and opportunity for discussion with the practitioner or provider concerned, any Professional Standard Review Organization submits a report and recommendations to the Secretary pursuant to section 1157 (which report and recommendations shall be submitted through the Statewide Professional Standards Review Council, if such Council has been established, which shall promptly transmit such report and recommendations together with any additional comments and recommendations thereon as it deems appropriate) and if the Secretary determines that such practitioner or provider, in providing health care services over which such organization has review responsibility and for which payment (in whole or in part) may be made under this Act has—

"(A) by failing, in a substantial number of cases, substantially to comply with any obligation imposed on him under subsection (a), or

"(B) by grossly and flagrantly violating any such obligation in one or more instances, demonstrated an unwillingness or a lack of ability substantially to comply with such obligations, he (in addition to any other sanction provided under law) may exclude (permanently or for such period as the Secretary may prescribe) such practitioner or provider from eligibility to provide such services on a reimbursable basis.

"(2) A determination made by the Secretary under this subsection shall be effective at such time and upon such reasonable notice to the public and to the person furnishing the services involved as may be specified in regulations. Such determination shall be effective with respect to services furnished to an individual on or after the effective date of such determination (except that in the case of institutional health care services such determination shall be effective in the manner provided in title XVIII with respect to terminations of provider agreements), and shall remain in effect until the Secretary finds and gives reasonable notice to the public that the basis for such determination has been removed and that there is reasonable assurance that it will not recur.

"(3) In lieu of the sanction authorized by paragraph (1), the Secretary may require that (as a condition to the continued eligibility of such practitioner or provider to provide such health care services on a reimbursable basis) such practitioner or provider pay to the United States, in case such acts or conduct involved the provision or ordering by such practitioner or provider of health care services which were medically improper or unnecessary, an amount not in excess of the actual or estimated cost of the medically improper or unnecessary services so provided, or (if less) $5,000. Such amount may be deducted from any sums owing by the United States (or any instrumentality thereof) to the person from whom such amount is claimed.

"(4) Any person furnishing services described in paragraph (1) who is dissatisfied with a determination made by the Secretary under this subsection shall be entitled to reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing thereon by the Secretary to the same extent as is provided in section 205(b), and to judicial review of the Secretary's final decision after such hearing as is provided in section 205(g).

"(c) It shall be the duty of each Professional Standards Review Organization and each Statewide Professional Standards Review Council to use such authority or influence it may possess as a professional organization, and to enlist the support of any other professional or governmental organization having influence or authority over health care practitioners and any other person (including a hospital or other health care facility, organization, or agency) providing health care services in the area served by such review organization, in assuring that each practitioner or provider (referred to in subsection (a)) providing health care services in such area shall comply with all obligations imposed on him under subsection (a).

"NOTICE TO PRACTITIONER OR PROVIDER

"SEC. 1161. Whenever any Professional Standards Review Organization takes any action or makes any determination—

"(a) which denies any request, by a health care practitioner or other provider of health care services, for approval of a health care service or item proposed to be ordered or provided by such practitioner or provider; or

"(b) that any such practitioner or provider has violated any obligation imposed on such practitioner or provider under section 1160, such organization shall, immediately after taking such action or making such determination, give notice to such practitioner or provider of such determination and the basis therefor, and shall provide him with appropriate opportunity for discussion and review of the matter.

"(b) The membership of any such Council for any State shall be appointed by the Secretary and shall consist of—

"(1) one representative from and designated by each Professional Standards Review Organization in the State;

"(2) four physicians, two of whom may be designated by the State medical society and two of whom may be designated by the State hospital association of such State to serve as members on such Council; and

"(3) four persons knowledgeable in health care from such State whom the Secretary shall have selected as representatives of the public in such State (at least two of whom shall have been recommended for membership on the Council by the Governor of such State).

"(c) It shall be the duly and function of the Statewide Professional Standards Review Council for any State, in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, (1) to coordinate the activities of, and disseminate information and data among the various Professional Standards Review Organizations within such State including assisting the Secretary in development of uniform data gathering procedures and operating procedures applicable to the several areas in a State (including, where appropriate, common data processing operations serving several or all areas) to assure efficient operation and objective evaluation of comparative performance of the several areas and, (2) to assist the Secretary in evaluating the performance of each Professional Standards Review Organization, and (3) where the Secretary finds it necessary to replace a Professional Standards Review Organization, to assist him in developing and arranging for a qualified replacement Professional Standards Review Organization.

"(d) The Secretary is authorized to enter into an agreement with any such Council under which the Secretary shall make payments to such Council equal to the amount of expenses reasonably and necessarily incurred, as determined by the Secretary, by such Council in carrying out the duties and functions provided in this section.

"(e)(1) The Statewide Professional Standards Review Council for any State (or in a State which does not have such Council, the Professional Standards Review Organizations in such State which have agreements with the Secretary) shall be advised and assisted in carrying out its functions by an advisory group (of not less than seven nor more than eleven members) which shall be made up of representatives of health care practitioners (other than physicians) and hospitals and other health care facilities which provide within the State health care services for which payment (in whole or in part) may be made under any program established by or pursuant to this Act.

Until he is so satisfied he shall make no further payments to such State (or shall limit payments to categories under or parts of the State plan not affected by such failures).

"RECOVERY OF OVERPAYMENTS TO DRUG ADDICTS AND ALCOHOLICS

"SEC. 1508. In any case in which a State agency has notified the Secretary that it cannot recover from an individual overpayments to drug addicts and alcoholics, and that payments (if any) made to such individual, subsequent to the determination of the overpayment, are insufficient to permit adjustments to recoup such overpayment, the Secretary shall recover the amount of such overpayment from any amounts (other than lump-sum death benefits payable under section 202(i)) otherwise due such individual or becoming due such individual from any officer or agency of the United States or under any Federal program. An appropriate portion of amounts recovered under the preceding sentence shall be credited to the State which made such overpayment."

"MEANING OF TERMS

"Aged, Blind, or Disabled Individual

"SEC. 2014. (a) (1) For purposes of this title, the term 'aged, blind, or disabled individual' means an individual who—

"(A) is 65 years of age or older, is blind (as determined under paragraph (2)), or is disabled (as determined under paragraph (3)), and

"(B) is a resident of the United States, and is either (i) a citizen or (ii) an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence.

"(2) An individual shall be considered to be blind for purposes of this title if he has central visual acuity of 20/200 or less in the better eye with the use of a correcting lens. An eye which is accompanied by a limitation in the fields of vision such that the widest diameter of the visual field subtends an angle no greater than 20 degrees shall be considered for purposes of the first sentence of this subsection as having a central visual acuity of 20/200 or less. An individual shall also be considered to be blind for purposes of this title if he is blind as defined under a State plan approved under title X or XVI as in effect prior to the enactment of this subsection and received aid under such plan (on the basis of blindness) for June 1972, so long as he is continuously blind as so defined.

"(3)(A) An individual shall be considered to be disabled for purposes of this title if he is unable to engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of any medically determinable physical or mental impairment which can be expected to result in death or which has lasted or can be expected to last for a continuous period of not less than twelve months (or, in the case of a child under the age of 18 if he suffers from any medically determinable physical or mental impairment of comparable severity). An individual shall also be considered to be disabled for purposes of this title if he is permanently and totally disabled as defined under a State plan approved under title XIV or XVI as in effect prior to the enactment of this subsection and received aid under such plan (on the basis of disability) for June 1972, so long as he is continuously disabled as so defined.

"(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A) (except with respect to a child under the age of 18), an individual shall be determined to be under a disability only if his physical or mental impairment or impairments are of such severity that he is not only unable to do his previous work but cannot, considering his age, education, and work experience, engage in any other kind of substantial gainful work which exists in the national economy, regardless of whether such work exists in the immediate area in which he lives, or whether a specific job vacancy exists for him, or whether he would be hired if he applied for work. For purposes of the preceding sentence (with respect to any individual), 'work which exists in the national economy' means work which exists in significant numbers either in the region where such individual lives or in several regions of the country.

"(C) For purposes of this paragraph, a physical or mental impairment is an impairment that results from anatomical, physiological, or psychological abnormalities which are demonstrable by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques.

"(D) The Secretary shall by regulations prescribe the criteria for determining when services performed or earnings derived from services demonstrate an individual's ability to engage in substantial gainful activity. Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (B), an individual whose services or earnings meet such criteria, except for purposes of paragraph (4), shall be found not to be disabled.

under paragraph (3) of this subsection) shall be deemed not to have been rendered by such individual in determining whether his disability has ceased in a month during such period. As used in this paragraph, the term 'services' means activity which is performed for remuneration or gain or is determined by the Secretary to be of a type normally performed for remuneration or gain.

"(B) The term 'period of trial work', with respect to an individual who is an aged, blind, or disabled individual solely by reason of disability (as determined under paragraph (3) of this subsection), means a period of months beginning and ending as provided in subparagraphs (C) and (D).

"(C) A period of trial work for any individual shall begin with the month in which he becomes eligible for benefits under this title on the basis of his disability; but no such period may begin for an individual who is eligible for benefits under this title on the basis of a disability if he has had a previous period of trial work while eligible for benefits on the basis of the same disability.

"(D) A period of trial work for any individual shall end with the close of whichever of the following months is the earlier:

"(i) the ninth month, beginning on or after the first day of such period, in which the individual renders services (whether or not such nine months are consecutive); or

"(ii) the month in which his disability (as determined under paragraph (3) of this subsection) ceases (as determined after the application of subparagraph (A) of this paragraph).

"Eligible Spouse

"(b) For purposes of this title, the term 'eligible spouse' means an aged, blind, or disabled individual who is the husband or wife of another aged, blind, or disabled individual. If two aged, blind, or disabled individuals are husband and wife as described in the preceding sentence, only one of them may be an 'eligible individual' within the meaning of section 2011(a).

"Definition of Child

"(c) For purposes of this title, the term 'child' means an individual who is neither married nor (as determined by the Secretary) the head of a household, and who is (1) under the age of eighteen, or (2) under the age of twenty-two and (as determined by the Secretary) a student regularly attending a school, college, or university, or a course of vocational or technical training designed to prepare him for gainful employment.

"Determination of Marital Relationships

"(d) In determining whether two individuals are husband and wife for purposes of this title, appropriate State law shall be applied; except that—

"(1) if a man and woman have been determined to be husband and wife under section 216(h)(1) for purposes of title II they shall be considered (from and after the date of such determination or the date of their application for benefits under this title, whichever is later) to be husband and wife for purposes of this title, or

"(2) if a man and woman are found to be holding themselves out to the community in which they reside as husband and wife, they shall be so considered for purposes of this title notwithstanding any other provision of this section.

"United States

"(e) For purposes of this title, the term 'United States', when used in a geographical sense, means the States and the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

"Income and Resources of Individuals Other Than Eligible Individuals and Eligible Spouses

"(f)(1) For purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of benefits for any individual who is married and whose spouse is living with him in the same household but is not an eligible spouse, such individual's income and resources shall be deemed to include any income and resources of such spouse, whether or not available to such individual, except to the extent determined by the Secretary to be inequitable under the circumstances.

"(2) For purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of benefits for any individual who is a child under age 21, such individual's income and resources shall be deemed to include any income and resources of a parent of such individual (or the spouse of such a parent) who is living in the same household as such individual, whether or not available to such individual, except to the extent determined by the Secretary to be inequitable under the circumstances.

"REHABILITATION SERVICES FOR BLIND AND DISABLED INDIVIDUALS

"SEC. 2015. (a) In the case of any blind or disabled individual who—

"(1) has not attained age 65, and

"(2) is receiving benefits (or with respect to whom benefits are paid) under this title, the Secretary shall make provision for referral of such individual to the appropriate State agency administering the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, and (except in such cases as he may determine) for a review not less often than quarterly of such individual's blindness or disability and his need for and utilization of the rehabilitation services made available to him under such plan.

"(b) Every individual with respect to whom the Secretary is required to make provision for referral under subsection (a) shall accept such rehabilitation services as are made available to him under the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act; and the Secretary is authorized to pay to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of such State plan the costs incurred in the provision of such services to individuals so referred.

"(c) No individual shall be an eligible individual or eligible spouse for purposes of this title if he refuses without good cause to accept vocational rehabilitation services for which he is referred under subsection (a).

"OPTIONAL STATE SUPPLEMENTATION

"SEC. 2016. (a) Any cash payments which are made by a State (or political subdivision thereof) on a regular basis to individuals who are receiving benefits under this title or who would but for their income be eligible to receive benefits under this title, as assistance based on need in supplementation of such benefits (as determined by the Secretary), shall be excluded under section 2012(b)(4) in determining the income of such individuals for purposes of this title only if

(1) the Secretary and such State enter into an agreement which satisfies subsection (b) and which may at the option of the State provide that the Secretary will, on behalf of such State (or subdivision), make such supplementary payments to all such individuals, and (2) such supplementary payments are made to such individuals in accordance with such agreement.

"(b) Any agreement between the Secretary and a State entered into under subsection (a) shall provide—

"(1) that in determining the eligibility of any individual for supplementary payments on the basis of his income, all the provisions of section 2012(b) will apply, except that with respect to any quarter—

"(A) if benefits are paid to such individual for such quarter under this title, such benefits will not be excluded from income in applying paragraph (4) of such section, and

"(B) if no benefits are paid to such individual for such quarter under this title, the requirement of this paragraph shall not apply with respect to such individual; except that the supplementary payment shall not be reduced, on account of income in excess of the maximum amount which such individual could have and still receive such a benefit, by an amount greater than such excess, and, if the agreement provides that the Secretary will, on behalf of the State (or political subdivision), make the supplementary payments to individuals receiving benefits under this title, shall also provide—

"(2) that such payments will be made (subject to subsection (c) (2)) to all individuals residing in such State (or subdivision) who are receiving benefits under this title, and

"(3) such other rules with respect to eligibility for or amount of the supplementary payments, and such procedural or other general administrative provisions, as the Secretary finds necessary (subject to subsection (c)) to achieve efficient and effective administration of both the program which he conducts under this title and the optional State supplementation.

"(c) (1) Any State (or political subdivision), in determining the eligibility of any individual for supplementary payments described in subsection (a), may disregard up to $7.50 of any income in addition to other amounts which it is required or permitted to disregard under this section in determining such eligibility, and may include a provision to that effect in the State's agreement with the Secretary under subsection (a).

"(2) Any State (or political subdivision) making supplementary payments described in subsection (a) may at its

"(d) Any State which has entered into an agreement with the Secretary under this section which provides that the Secretary will, on behalf of the State (or political subdivision), make the supplementary payments to individuals who are receiving benefits under this title (or who would but for their income be eligible to receive such benefits), shall, subject to section 503 of the Social Security Amendments of 1971, at such times and in such installments as may be agreed upon between the Secretary and such State, pay to the Secretary an amount equal to the expenditures made by the Secretary as such supplementary payments.

"PART B—PROCEDURAL AND GENERAL PROVISIONS

"PAYMENTS AND PROCEDURES

"Payment of Benefits

"SEC. 2031. (a)(1) Benefits under this title shall be paid at such time or times and in such installments as will best effectuate the purposes of this title, as determined under regulations (and may in any case be paid less frequently than monthly where the amount of the monthly benefit would not exceed $10).

"(2) Payments of the benefit of any individual may be made to any such individual or to his eligible spouse (if any) or partly to each, or, if the Secretary deems it appropriate, to any other person (including an appropriate public or private agency) who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of such individual (or spouse).

"(3) The Secretary may by regulation establish ranges of incomes within which a single amount of benefits under this title shall apply.

"(4) The Secretary—

"(A) may make, to any individual initially applying for benefits under this title who is presumptively eligible for such benefits and who is faced with financial emergency, a cash advance against such benefits in an amount not exceeding $100; and

be considered overpayments for purposes of subsection (b).

"(5) Payment of the benefit of any individual who is an aged, blind, or disabled individual solely by reason of blindness (as determined under section 2014(a)(2)) or disability (as determined under section 2014(a)(3)), and who ceases to be blind or to be under such disability, shall continue (so long as such individual is otherwise eligible) through the second month following the month in which such blindness or disability ceases.

"Overpayments and Underpayments

"(b) Whenever the Secretary finds that more or less than the correct amount of benefits has been paid with respect to any individual, proper adjustment or recovery shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this subsection, be made by appropriate adjustments in future payments to such individual or by recovery from or payment to such individual or his eligible spouse (or by recovery from the estate of either). The Secretary shall make such provision as he finds appropriate in the case of payment of more than the correct amount of benefits with respect to an individual with a view to avoiding penalizing such individual or his eligible spouse who was without fault in connection with the overpayment, if adjustment or recovery on account of such overpayment in such case would defeat the purposes of this title, or be against equity or good conscience, or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration of this title.

"Hearings and Review

"(c)(1) The Secretary shall provide reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing to any individual who is or claims to be an eligible individual or eligible spouse and is in disagreement with any determination under this title with respect to eligibility of such individual for benefits, or the amount of such individual's benefits, if such individual requests a hearing on the matter in disagreement within thirty days after notice of such determination is received.

"(2) Determination on the basis of such hearing, except to the extent that the matter in disagreement involves the existence of a disability (within the meaning of section 2014 (a)(3)), shall be made within ninety days after the individual requests the hearing as provided in paragraph (1).

"(3) The final determination of the Secretary after a hearing under paragraph (1) shall be subject to judicial review as provided in section 205(g) to the same extent as the Secretary's final determinations under section 205; except that the determination of the Secretary after such hearing as to any fact shall be final and conclusive and not subject to review by any court.

"Procedures; Prohibition of Assignments; Representation of Claimants

"(d) (1) The provisions of section 207 and subsections (a), (d), (e), and (f) of section 205 shall apply with respect to this part to the same extent as they apply in the case of title II.

"(2) To the extent the Secretary finds it will promote the achievement of the objectives of this title, qualified persons may be appointed to serve as hearing examiners in hearings under subsection (c) without meeting the specific standards prescribed for hearing examiners by or under subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code.

"(3) The Secretary may prescribe rules and regulations governing the recognition of agents or other persons, other than attorneys, as hereinafter provided, representing claimants before the Secretary under this title, and may require of such agents or other persons, before being recognized as representatives of claimants, that they shall show that they are of good character and in good repute, possessed of the necessary qualifications to enable them to render such claimants valuable service, and otherwise competent to advise and assist such claimants in the presentation of their cases. An attorney in good standing who is admitted to practice before the highest court of the State, Territory, District, or insular possession of his residence or before the Supreme Court of the United States or the inferior Federal courts, shall be entitled to represent claimants before the Secretary. The Secretary may, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, suspend or prohibit from further practice before him any such person, agent, or attorney who refuses to comply with the Secretary's rules and regulations or who violates any provision of this paragraph for which a penalty is prescribed. The Secretary may, by rule and regulation, prescribe the maximum fees which may be charged for services performed in connection with any claim before the Secretary under this title, and any agreement in violation of such rules and regulations shall be void. Any person who shall, with intent to defraud, in any manner willfully and knowingly deceive, mislead, or threaten any claimant or prospective claimant or beneficiary under this title by word, circular, letter, or advertisement, or who shall knowingly charge or collect directly or indirectly any fee in excess of the maximum fee, or make any agreement directly or indirectly to charge or collect any fee in excess of the maximum fee, prescribed by the Secretary, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall for each offense be punished by a fine not exceeding $500 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

"Applications and Furnishing of Information

"(c)(1) The Secretary shall prescribe such requirements with respect to the filing of applications, the suspension or termination of assistance, the furnishing of other data and material, and the reporting of events and changes in circumstances, as may be necessary for the effective and efficient administration of this title.

"(2) In case of the failure by any individual to submit a report of events and changes in circumstances relevant to eligibility for or amount of benefits under this title as required by the Secretary under paragraph (1), or delay by any individual in submitting a report as so required, the Secretary (in addition to taking any other action he may consider appropriate under paragraph (1)) shall reduce any benefits which may subsequently become payable to such individual under this title by—

"(A) $25 in the case of the first such failure or delay,

"(B) $50 in the case of the second such failure or delay, and

"(C) $100 in the case of the third or a subsequent such failure or delay, except where the individual was without fault or good cause for such failure or delay existed.

"(3) having knowledge of the occurrence of any event affecting (A) his initial or continued right to any such benefit, or (B) the initial or continued right to any such benefit of any other individual in whose behalf he has applied for or is receiving such benefit, conceals or fails to disclose such event with an intent fraudulently to secure such benefit either in a greater amount or quantity than is due or when no such benefit is authorized, or

"(4) having made application to receive any such benefit for the use and benefit of another and having received it, knowingly and willfully converts such benefit or any part thereof to a use other than for the use and benefit of such other person, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

"ADMINISTRATION

"SEC. 2033. The Secretary may make such administrative and other arrangements (including arrangements for the determination of blindness and disability under section 2014 (a) (2) and (3) in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as provided with respect to disability determinations under section 221) as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out his functions under this title.

(a) (1) The Secretary shall provide for the continuing evaluation of the program conducted under this title, including its effectiveness in achieving its goals and its impact on other related programs. The Secretary may conduct research regarding, and demonstrations of, ways to improve the effectiveness of the program conducted under this title, and in so doing may waive any requirement or limitation imposed by or pursuant to this title to the extent he deems appropriate. The Secretary may, for these purposes, contract for evaluations of and research regarding such program.

"(2) Of the sums authorized by section 2001 to be

Any portion of the individual's benefits paid for any such period shall be conditioned upon such disposal; and any benefits so paid shall (at the time of the disposal) be considered overpayments to the extent they would not have been paid had the disposal occurred at the beginning of the period for which such benefits were paid.

"MEANING OF TERMS

"Aged, Blind, or Disabled Individual

"SEC. 1614. (a)(1) For purposes of this title, the term 'aged, blind, or disabled individual' means an individual who—

"(A) is 65 years of age or older, is blind (as determined under paragraph (2)), or is disabled (as determined under paragraph (3)), and

"(B) is a resident of the United States, and is either (i) a citizen or (ii) an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence.

"(2) An individual shall be considered to be blind for purposes of this title if he has central visual acuity of 20/200 or less in the better eye with the use of a correcting lens. An eye which is accompanied by a limitation in the fields of vision such that the widest diameter of the visual field subtends an angle no greater than 20 degrees shall be considered for purposes of the first sentence of this subsection as having a central visual acuity of 20/200 or less. An individual shall also be considered to be blind for purposes of this title if he is blind as defined under a State plan approved under title X or XVI as in effect for October 1972 and received aid under such plan (on the basis of blindness) for December 1973, so long as he is continuously blind as so defined.

"(3)(A) An individual shall be considered to be disabled for purposes of this title if he is unable to engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of any medically determinable physical or mental impairment which can be expected to result in death or which has lasted or can be expected to last for a continuous period of not less than twelve months. An individual shall also be considered to be disabled for purposes of this title if he is permanently and totally disabled as defined under a State plan approved under title XIV or XVI as in effect for October 1972 and received aid under such plan (on the basis of disability) for December 1973, so long as he is continuously disabled as so defined.

"(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), an individual shall be determined to be under a disability only if his physical or mental impairment or impairments are of such severity that he is not only unable to do his previous work but cannot, considering his age, education, and work experience, engage in any other kind of substantial gainful work which exists in the national economy, regardless of whether such work exists in the immediate area in which he lives, or whether a specific job vacancy exists for him, or whether he would be hired if he applied for work. For purposes of the preceding sentence (with respect to any individual), 'work which exists in the national economy' means work which exists in significant numbers either in the region where such individual lives or in several regions of the country.

"(C) For purposes of this paragraph, a physical or mental impairment is an impairment that results from anatomical, physiological, or psychological abnormalities which are demonstrable by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques.

"(D) The Secretary shall by regulations prescribe the criteria for determining when services performed or earnings derived from services demonstrate an individual's ability to engage in substantial gainful activity. Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (B), an individual whose services or earnings meet such criteria, except for purposes of paragraph (4), shall be found not to be disabled.

"(4)(A) For purposes of this title, any services rendered during a period of trial work (as defined in subparagraph (B)) by an individual who is an aged, blind, or disabled individual solely by reason of disability (as determined under paragraph (3) of this subsection) shall be deemed not to have been rendered by such individual in determining whether his disability has ceased in a month during such period. As used in this paragraph, the term 'services' means activity which is performed for remuneration or gain or is determined by the Secretary to be of a type normally performed for remuneration or gain.

"(B) The term 'period of trial work', with respect to an individual who is an aged, blind, or disabled individual solely by reason of disability (as determined under paragraph (3) of this subsection), means a period of months beginning and ending as provided in subparagraphs (C) and (D).

"(C) A period of trial work for any individual shall begin with the month in which he becomes eligible for benefits under this title on the basis of his disability; but no such period may begin for an individual who is eligible for benefits under this title on the basis of a disability if he has had a previous period of trial work while eligible for benefits on the basis of the same disability.

"(D) A period of trial work for any individual shall end with the close of whichever of the following months is the earlier:

"(i) the ninth month, beginning on or after the first day of such period, in which the individual renders services (whether or not such nine months are consecutive); or

"Eligible Spouse

"(b) For purposes of this title, the term 'eligible spouse' means an aged, blind, or disabled individual who is the husband or wife of another aged, blind, or disabled individual and who has not been living apart from such other aged, blind, or disabled individual for more than six months. If two aged, blind, or disabled individuals are husband and wife as described in the preceding sentence, only one of them may be an 'eligible individual' within the meaning of section 1611(a).

"Definition of Child

"(c) For purposes of this title, the term 'child' means an individual who is neither married nor (as determined by the Secretary) the head of a household, and who is (1) under the age of eighteen, or (2) under the age of twenty-one and (as determined by the Secretary) a student regularly attending a school, college, or university, or a course of vocational or technical training designed to prepare him for gainful employment.

"Determination of Marital Relationships

"(d) In determining whether two individuals are husband and wife for purposes of this title, appropriate State law shall be applied; except that—

"(1) if a man and woman have been determined to be husband and wife under section 216(h)(1) for purposes of title II they shall be considered (from and after the date of such determination or the date of their application for benefits under this title, whichever is later) to be husband and wife for purposes of this title, or

"(2) if a man and woman are found to be holding themselves out to the community in which they reside as husband and wife, they shall be so considered for purposes of this title notwithstanding any other provision of this section.

"United States

"(e) For purposes of this title, the term 'United States', when used in a geographical sense, means the 50 States and the District of Columbia.

"Income and Resources of Individuals Other Than Eligible Individuals and Eligible Spouses

"(f)(1) For purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of benefits for any individual who is married and whose spouse is living with him in the same household but is not an eligible spouse, such individual's income and resources shall be deemed to include any income and resources of such spouse, whether or not available to such individual, except to the extent determined by the Secretary to be inequitable under the circumstances.

"(2) For purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of benefits for any individual who is a child under age 21, such individual's income and resources shall be deemed to include any income and resources of a parent of such individual (or the spouse of such a parent) who is living in the same household as such individual, whether or not available to such individual, except to the extent determined by the Secretary to be inequitable under the circumstances.

"REHABILITATION SERVICES FOR BLIND AND DISABLED INDIVIDUALS

"SEC. 1615. (a) In the case of any blind or disabled individual who—

"(2) is receiving benefits (or with respect to whom benefits are paid) under this title,

the Secretary shall make provision for referral of such individual to the appropriate State agency administering the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, and (except in such cases as he may determine) for a review not less often than quarterly of such individual's blindness or disability and his need for and utilization of the rehabilitation services made available to him under such plan.

"(b) Every individual with respect to whom the Secretary is required to make provision for referral under subsection (a) shall accept such rehabilitation services as are made available to him under the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act; and the Secretary is authorized to pay to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of such State plan the costs incurred in the provision of such services to individuals so referred.

"(c) No individual shall be an eligible individual or eligible spouse for purposes of this title if he refuses without good cause to accept vocational rehabilitation services for which he is referred under subsection (a).

"OPTIONAL STATE SUPPLEMENTATION

"SEC. 1616. (a) Any cash payments which are made by a State (or political subdivision thereof) on a regular basis to individuals who are receiving benefits under this title or who would but for their income be eligible to receive benefits under this title, as assistance based on need in supplementation of such benefits (as determined by the Secretary), shall be excluded under section 1612(b)(6) in determining the income of such individuals for purposes of this title and the Secretary and such State may enter into an agreement which satisfies subsection (b) under which the Secretary will, on behalf of such State (or subdivision), make such supplementary payments to all such individuals,

"(b) Any agreement between the Secretary and a State entered into under subsection (a) shall provide—

"(2) such other rules with respect to eligibility for or amount of the supplementary payments, and such procedural or other general administrative provisions, as the Secretary finds necessary (subject to subsection (c)) to achieve efficient and effective administration of both the program which he conducts under this title and the optional State supplementation.

"(c) Any State (or political subdivision) making supplementary payments described in subsection (a) may at its option impose as a condition of eligibility for such payments, and include in the State's agreement with the Secretary under such subsection, a residence requirement which excludes individuals who have resided in the State (or political subdivision) for less than a minimum period prior to application for such payments.

"(d) Any State which has entered into an agreement with the Secretary under this section which provides that the Secretary will, on behalf of the State (or political subdivision), make the supplementary payments to individuals who are receiving benefits under this title (or who would but for their income be eligible to receive such benefits), shall, at such times and in such installments as may be agreed upon between the Secretary and such State, pay to the Secretary an amount equal to the expenditures made by the Secretary as such supplementary payments.

"PART B—PROCEDURAL AND GENERAL PROVISIONS

"PAYMENTS AND PROCEDURES

"Payment of Benefits

"SEC. 1631. (a)(1) Benefits under this title shall be paid at such time or times and in such installments as will best effectuate the purposes of this title, as determined under regulations (and may in any case be paid less frequently than monthly where the amount of the monthly benefit would not exceed $10).

"(2) Payments of the benefit of any individual may be made to any such individual or to his eligible spouse (if any) or partly to each, or, if the Secretary deems it appropriate to any other person (including an appropriate public or private agency) who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of such individual (or spouse).

"(3) The Secretary may by regulation establish ranges of incomes within which a single amount of benefits under this title shall apply.

"(4) The Secretary—

"(A) may make to any individual initially applying for benefits under this title who is presumptively eligible for such benefits and who is faced with financial emergency a cash advance against such benefits in an amount not exceeding $100; and

"(B) may pay benefits under this title to an individual applying for such benefits on the basis of disability for a period not exceeding 3 months prior to the determination of such individual's disability, if such individual is presumptively disabled and is determined to be otherwise eligible for such benefits, and any benefits so paid prior to such determination shall in no event be considered overpayments for purposes of subsection (b).

"(5) Payment of the benefit of any individual who is an aged, blind, or disabled individual solely by reason of blindness (as determined under section 1614(a)(2)) or disability (as determined under section 1614(a)(3)), and who ceases to be blind or to be under such disability, shall continue (so long as such individual is otherwise eligible) through the second month following the month in which such blindness or disability ceases.

"Overpayments and Underpayments

"(b) Whenever the Secretary finds that more or less than the correct amount of benefits has been paid with respect to any individual, proper adjustment or recovery shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this subsection, be made by appropriate adjustments in future payments to such individual or by recovery from or payment to such individual or his eligible spouse (or by recovery from the estate of either). The Secretary shall make such provision as he finds appropriate in the case of payment of more than the correct amount of benefits with respect to an individual with a view to avoiding penalizing such individual or his eligible spouse who was without fault in connection with the overpayment, if adjustment or recovery on account of such overpayment in such case would defeat the purposes of this title, or be against equity or good conscience, or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration of this title.

"Hearings and Review

"(c)(1) The Secretary shall provide reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing to any individual who is or claims to be an eligible individual or eligible spouse and is in disagreement with any determination under this title with respect to eligibility of such individual for benefits, or the amount of such individual's benefits, if such individual requests a hearing on the matter in disagreement within thirty days after notice of such determination is received.

"(2) Determination on the basis of such hearing, except to the extent that the matter in disagreement involves the existence of a disability (within the meaning of section 1614 (a)(3)), shall be made within ninety days after the individual requests the hearing as provided in paragraph (1).

"(3) The final determination of the Secretary after a hearing under paragraph (1) shall be subject to judicial review as provided in section 205(g) to the same extent as the Secretary's final determinations under section 205; except that the determination of the Secretary after such hearing as to any fact shall be final and conclusive and not subject to review by any court.

"Procedures; Prohibitions of Assignments; Representation of Claimants

"(d)(1) The provisions of section 207 and subsections (a), (d), (e), and (f) of section 205 shall apply with respect to this part to the same extent as they apply in the case of title II.

"(2) To the extent the Secretary finds it will promote the achievement of the objectives of this title, qualified persons may be appointed to serve as hearing examiners in hearings under subsection (c) without meeting the specific standards prescribed for hearing examiners by or under subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code.

"(3) The Secretary may prescribe rules and regulations governing the recognition of agents or other persons, other than attorneys, as hereinafter provided, representing claimants before the Secretary under this title, and may require of such agents or other persons, before being recognized as representatives of claimants, that they shall show that they are of good character and in good repute, possessed of the necessary qualifications to enable them to render such claimants valuable service, and otherwise competent to advise and assist such claimants in the presentation of their cases. An attorney in good standing who is admitted to practice before the highest court of the State, Territory, District, or insular possession of his residence or before the Supreme Court of the United States or the inferior Federal courts, shall be entitled to represent claimants before the Secretary. The Secretary may, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, suspend or prohibit from further practice before him any such person, agent, or attorney who refuses to comply with the Secretary's rules and regulations or who violates any provision of this paragraph for which a penalty is prescribed. The Secretary may, by rule and regulation, prescribe the maximum fees which may be charged for services performed in connection with any claim before the Secretary under this title, and any agreement in violation of such rules and regulations shall be void. Any person who shall, with intent to defraud, in any manner willfully and knowingly deceive, mislead, or threaten any claimant or prospective claimant or beneficiary under this title by word, circular, letter, or advertisement, or who shall knowingly charge or collect directly or indirectly any fee in excess of the maximum fee, or make any agreement directly or indirectly to charge or collect any fee in excess of the maximum fee, prescribed by the Secretary, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall for each offense be punished by a fine not exceeding $500 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

"Applications and Furnishing of Information

"(e) (1) (A) The Secretary shall, subject to subparagraph (B), prescribe such requirements with respect to the filing of applications, the suspension or termination of assistance, the furnishing of other data and material, and the reporting of events and changes in circumstances, as may be necessary for the effective and efficient administration of this title.

"(B) The requirements prescribed by the Secretary pursuant to subparagraph (A) shall require that eligibility for benefits under this title will not be determined solely on the basis of declarations by the applicant concerning eligibility factors or other relevant facts, and that relevant information will be verified to the maximum extent feasible from independent or collateral sources and additional information obtained as necessary in order to assure that such benefits are only provided to eligible individuals (or eligible spouses) and that the amounts of such benefits are correct.

"(2) In case of the failure by any individual to submit a report of events and changes in circumstances relevant to eligibility for or amount of benefits under this title as required by the Secretary under paragraph (1), or delay by any individual in submitting a report as so required, the Secretary (in addition to taking any other action he may consider appropriate under paragraph (1)) shall reduce any benefits which may subsequently become payable to such individual under this title by—

"(A) $25 in the case of the first such failure or delay,

"(B) $50 in the case of the second such failure or delay, and

"(C) $100 in the case of the third or a subsequent such failure or delay, except where the individual was without fault or good cause for such failure or delay existed.

"Furnishing of Information by Other Agencies

"(f) The head of any Federal agency shall provide such information as the Secretary needs for purposes of determining eligibility for or amount of benefits, or verifying other information with respect thereto.

"PENALTIES FOR FRAUD

"(1) knowingly and willfully makes or causes to be made any false statement or representation of a material fact in any application for any benefit under this title,

"(2) at any time knowingly and willfully makes or causes to be made any false statement or representation of a material fact for use in determining rights to any such benefit,

"(3) having knowledge of the occurrence of any event affecting (A) his initial or continued right to any such benefit, or (B) the initial or continued right to any such benefit of any other individual in whose behalf he has applied for or is receiving such benefit, conceals or fails to disclose such event with an intent fraudulently to secure such benefit either in a greater amount or quantity than is due or when no such benefit is authorized, or

"(4) having made application to receive any such benefit for the use and benefit of another and having received it, knowingly and willfully converts such benefit or any part thereof to a use other than for the use and benefit of such other person, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

"ADMINISTRATION

"SEC. 1633. The Secretary may make such administrative and other arrangements (including arrangements for the determination of blindness and disability under section 1614 (a) (2) and (3) in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as provided with respect to disability determinations under section 221) as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out his functions under this title.

"DETERMINATIONS OF MEDICAID ELIGIBILITY

"SEC. 1634. The Secretary may enter into an agreement with any State which wishes to do so under which he will determine eligibility for medical assistance in the case of aged, blind, or disabled individuals under such State's plan approved under title XIX. Any such agreement shall provide for payments by the State, for use by the Secretary in carrying out the agreement, of an amount equal to one-half of the cost of carrying out the agreement, but in computing such cost with respect to individuals eligible for benefits under this title, the Secretary shall include only those costs which are additional to the costs incurred in carrying out this title."

SEC. 302. The Social Security Act is amended, effective January 1, 1974, by adding after title V the following new title:

"TITLE VI—GRANTS TO STATES FOR SERVICES TO THE AGED, BLIND, OR DISABLED

"APPROPRIATION

"SEC. 601. For the purpose of encouraging each State, as far as practicable under the conditions in such State, to furnish rehabilitation and other services to help needy indi- viduals who are 65 years of age or over, are blind, or are disabled to attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year, subject to section 1130, a sum sufficient to carry out the purposes of this title. The sums made available under this section shall be used for making payments to States which have submitted, and had approved by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, State plans for services to the aged, blind, or disabled.

"STATE PLANS FOR SERVICES TO THE AGED, BLIND, OR DISABLED

"SEC. 602. (a) A State plan for services to the aged, blind, or disabled, must—

"(1) except to the extent permitted by the Secretary, provide that it shall be in effect in all political subdivisions of the State, and if administered by them, be mandatory upon them;

"(2) provide for financial participation by the State;

"(3) either provide for the establishment or designation of a single State agency to administer the plan, or provide for the establishment or designation of a single State agency to supervise the administration of the plan;

"(4) provide (A) such methods of administration (including methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis, except that the Secretary shall exercise no authority with respect to the selection, tenure of office, and compensation of any individual employed in accordance with such methods) as are found by the Secretary to be necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan, and (B) for the training and effective use of paid subprofessional staff, with particular emphasis on the full-time or part-time employment of persons of low income, as community service aides, in the administration of the plan and for the use of nonpaid or partially paid volunteers in a social service volunteer program in providing services under the plan and in assisting any advisory committees established by the State agency;

"(5) provide that the State agency will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may from time to time require, and comply with such provisions as the Secretary may from time to time find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports;

"(6) provide safeguards which permit the use or disclosure of information concerning applicants or recipients only (A) to public officials who require such information in connection with their official duties, or (B) to other persons for purposes directly connected with the administration of the State plan;

"(7) provide, if the plan includes services to individuals in private or public institutions, for the es-

"(8) provide a description of the services which the State agency makes available under the plan including a description of the steps taken to assure, in the provision of such services, maximum utilization of other agencies providing similar or related services;

"(9) provide that, in determining whether an individual is blind, there shall be an examination by a physician skilled in the diseases of the eye or by an optometrist, whichever the individual may select;

"(10) include reasonable standards, consistent with the objectives of this title, for determining eligibility for and the extent of services under the plan;

"(11) if the State plan includes services to individuals 65 years of age or older who are patients in institutions for mental diseases—

"(A) provide for having in effect such agreements or other arrangements with State authorities concerned with mental diseases, and where appropriate, with such institutions, as may be necessary for carrying out the State plan, including arrangements for joint planning and for development of alternate methods of care, arrangements providing assurance of immediate readmittance to institutions where needed for individuals under alternate plans of care, and arrangements providing for access to patients and facilities, for furnishing information, and for making reports;

"(B) provide for an individual plan for each such patient to assure that the institutional care provided to him is in his best interests, including, to that end, assurances that there will be initial and periodic review of his medical and other needs, that he will be given appropriate medical treatment within the institution, and that there will be a periodic determination of his need for continued treatment in the institution; and

"(C) provide for the development of alternate plans of care, making maximum utilization of available resources, for persons receiving services under the State plan who are 65 years of age or older and who would otherwise need care in such institutions; for services referred to in section 603(a)(1)(A)(i) and (ii) which are appropriate for such persons receiving services and for such patients; and for methods of administration necessary to assure that the responsibilities of the State agency under the State plan with respect to such persons receiving services and such patients will be effectively carried out;

"(12) if the State plan includes services to individuals 65 years of age or older who are patients in public institutions for mental diseases, show that the State is making satisfactory progress toward developing and implementing a comprehensive mental health program, including provision for utilization of community mental health centers, nursing homes, and other alternatives to care in public institutions for mental diseases.

Notwithstanding paragraph (3), if on October 1, 1972, the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title X (or so much of the plan of such State approved under title XVI as applies to the blind) was different from the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title I and the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title XIV (or so much of the plan of such State approved under title XVI as applies to the aged and disabled), the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of such plan approved under title X (or so much of the plan of such State approved under title XVI as applies to the blind) may be designated to administer or supervise the administration of the portion of the State plan for services to the aged, blind, or disabled which relates to blind individuals and a separate State agency may be established or designated to administer or supervise the administration of the rest of such plan; and in such case the part of the plan which each such agency administers, or the administration of which each such agency supervises, shall be regarded as a separate plan for purposes of this title.

"(b) The Secretary shall approve any plan which fulfills the conditions specified in subsection (a), except that he shall not approve any plan which imposes, as a condition of eligibility for services under the plan—

"(1) an age requirement of more than sixty-five years; or

"(2) any residence requirement which excludes any individual who resides in the State; or

"(3) any citizenship requirement which excludes any citizen of the United States.

"PAYMENTS TO STATES

"SEC. 603. (a) From the sums appropriated therefor, the Secretary shall, subject to section 1130, pay to each State which has a plan approved under this title, for each quarter—

"(1) in the case of any State whose State plan approved under section 602 meets the requirements of subsection (c)(1), an amount equal to the sum of the following proportions of the total amounts expended during such quarter as found necessary by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan—

"(A) 75 per centum of so much of such expenditures as are for—

"(b)(1) Prior to the beginning of each quarter, the Secretary shall estimate the amount to which a State will be entitled under subsection (a) for such quarter, such estimates to be based on (A) a report filed by the State containing its estimate of the total sum to be expended in such quarter in accordance with the provisions of such subsection, and stating the amount appropriated or made available by the State and its political subdivisions for such expenditures in such quarter, and if such amount is less than the State's pro-

"(2) In the case of any State whose State plan included a provision meeting the requirements of paragraph (1), but with respect to which the Secretary finds, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency, administering or supervising the administration of such plan, that—

"(A) the provision has been so changed that it no longer complies with the requirements of paragraph (1), or

"(B) in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with such provision,

the Secretary shall notify such State agency that further payments will not be made to the State under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) until he is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure to comply. Until the Secretary is so satisfied further payments with respect to the administration of such State plan shall not be made under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) but shall instead be made, subject to the other provisions of this title, under paragraph (2) of such subsection.

"(d) Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this section, the amount determined under such provisions for any State for any quarter which is attributable to expenditures with respect to individuals 65 years of age or older who are patients in institutions for mental diseases shall be paid only to the extent that the State makes a showing satisfactory to the Secretary that total expenditures in the State from Federal, State, and local sources for mental health services (including payments to or in behalf of individuals with mental health problems) under State and local public health and public welfare programs for such quarter exceed the average of the total expenditures in the State from such sources for such services under such programs for each quarter of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1965. For purposes of this subsection, expenditures for such services for each quarter in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1965, in the case of any State shall be determined on the basis of the latest data, satisfactory to the Secretary, available to him at the time of the first determination by him under this subsection for such State; and expenditures for such services for any quarter beginning after December 31, 1965, in the case of any State shall be determined on the basis of the latest data, satisfactory to the Secretary, available to him at the time of the determination under this subsection for such State for such quarter; and determinations so made shall be conclusive for purposes of this subsection.

a failure to comply substantially with any such provision; the Secretary shall notify such State agency that further payments will not be made to the State (or, in his discretion, that payments will be limited to categories under or parts of the State plan not affected by such failure), until the Secretary is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure to comply. shall not exceed 50 percent of the cost of providing such employment to such individual during such third year.

"(d) In order to assure an adequate supply of information concerning opportunities for employment by States and their political subdivisions, any State or political subdivision receiving Federal assistance, through a grant-in-aid or contract under this title or any other provision of law, shall provide the Secretary of Labor with complete, up-to-date listings of all employment vacancies that the State or political subdivision may have in positions or programs wholly or partially supported through such Federal assistance. "SEC. 2132. (a) In the case of any individual who is a member of a family receiving benefits under this part and who is not required to register pursuant to section 2111(a) solely because of his incapacity under section 2111(b)(1), the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall make provision for referral of such individual to the appropriate State agency administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, and (except in such cases involving permanent incapacity as he may determine) for a review not less often than quarterly of such individual's incapacity and his need for and utilization of the rehabilitation services made available to him under such plan.

"(b) Every individual with respect to whom the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is required to make provision for referral under subsection (a) shall accept such rehabilitation services as are made available to him under the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, except where good cause exists for failure to accept such services; and the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is authorized to pay to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of such State plan the costs incurred in the provision of such services to such individuals.

"(c) (1) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall pay to each family member with respect to whom the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is required to make provision for referral under subsection (a) and who is receiving vocational rehabilitation services pursuant to such provision an incentive allowance of $30 per month.

"(2) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall also pay, to any member of an eligible family with respect to whom the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is required to make provision for referral under subsection (a) and who is receiving vocational rehabilitation services pursuant to such provision, allowances for transportation and other costs to such member which are reasonably necessary to and directly related to such member's participation in such services.

"(3) Allowances under this subsection shall be in lieu of allowances provided for participants in vocational rehabilitation services under any other Act.

"CHILD CARE AND OTHER SUPPORTIVE SERVICES

"SEC. 2133. (a)(1) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall make provision for the furnishing of child care services in such cases and for so long as he deems appropriate (subject to section 2179) for individuals who are currently referred pursuant to section 2132(a) for vocational rehabilitation (or who have been so referred within such period or periods of time as the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may prescribe) and who need child care services in order to be able to participate in the vocational rehabilitation program.

"(2) In making provision for the furnishing of child care services under this subsection, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall arrange for and purchase, from whatever sources may be available, all such necessary child care services, including necessary transportation, placing priority on the use of facilities developed pursuant to section 2134.

"(3) Where child care services cannot as a practical matter be made available in facilities developed pursuant to section 2134, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may provide such services, by grants to public or nonprofit private agencies or contracts with public or private agencies or other persons, through such public or private facilities as may be available and appropriate (except that no such funds may be used for the construction of facilities (as defined in section 2134(b)(2))). In addition to other grants and contracts made under the preceding sentence, grants or contracts under such sentence may be made to or with any agency which is designated by the appropriate elected or appointed official or officials in such area and which demonstrates a capacity to work effectively with the manpower agency in such area (including provision for the stationing of personnel with the manpower team in appropriate cases). To the extent appropriate, such care for children attending school which is provided on a group or institutional basis shall be provided through arrangements with the appropriate local educational agency.

"(4) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may require individuals receiving child care services made available under paragraph (2) or provided under paragraph (3) to pay (in accordance with the schedule or schedules prescribed under section 2134(a)) for part or all of the cost thereof, and may require (as a condition of benefits under this part) that individuals receiving child care services otherwise furnished pursuant to provision made by him under paragraph (1) shall pay for the cost of such services if such cost will be excludable under section 2153 (b) (3).

"(b) In addition, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall make provision for the offering, to all appropriate members of families receiving benefits under this part, of family planning services, the acceptance of which by any such member shall be voluntary on the part of such member and shall not be a prerequisite to eligibility for or receipt of benefits under this part or otherwise affect the amount of such benefits.

"STANDARDS FOR CHILD CARE; DEVELOPMENT OF FACILITIES

"SEC. 2134. (a) In order to promote the effective provision of child care services, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall (1) establish, with the concurrence of the Secretary of Labor, standards assuring the quality of child care services provided under this title, (2) prescribe such schedule or schedules as may be appropriate for determining the extent to which families are to be required (in the light of their ability) to pay the costs of child care for which provision is made under section 2112 (a) (1) or section 2133 (a) (1), and (3) coordinate the provision of child care services under this title with other child care and social service programs which are available.

"(b) (1) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, taking into account the requirement of section 2112(a)(7), is authorized to provide for (and pay part or all of the cost of) the construction of facilities, through grants to or contracts made with public or private nonprofit agencies or organizations, in or through which child care services are to be provided under this title.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'construction' means acquisition, alteration, remodeling, or renovation of facilities, and includes, where the Secretary finds it is not feasible to use or adapt existing facilities for use for the provision of child care, construction (including acquisition of land therefor) of facilities for such care.

"(3) If within twenty years of the completion of any construction for which Federal funds have been paid under this subsection—

"(A) the owner of the facility shall cease to be a public or nonprofit private agency or organization, or

"(B) the facility shall cease to be used for the purposes for which it was constructed, unless the Secretary determines in accordance with regulations that there is good cause for releasing the owner of the facility from the obligation to do so.

the United States shall be entitled to recover from the owner of the facility an amount which bears to the then value of the facility (or so much thereof as constituted an approved project or projects) the same ratio as the amount of such Federal funds bore to the cost of construction of the facility financed with the aid of such funds. Such value shall be determined by agreement of the parties or by action brought in the United States district court for the district in which the facility is situated.

"(4) All laborers and mechanics employed by contractors or subcontractors on all construction projects assisted under this subsection shall be paid wages at rates not less than those prevailing on similar construction in the locality as determined by the Secretary of Labor in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act, as amended (40 U.S.C. 276(a)-276(a)-5). The Secretary of Labor shall have with respect to the labor standards specified in this subsection the authority and functions set forth in Reorganization Plan Numbered 14 of 1950 (15 F.R. 3176) and section 2 of the Act of June 13, 1934, as amended (40 U.S.C. 276(c)).

"(5) Of the sums authorized by section 2101 to be appropriated for any fiscal year, not more than $50,000,000 shall be appropriated for purposes of the provisions of this subsection.

"(c) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is authorized to make grants to any public or nonprofit private agency or organization, and contracts with any public or private agency or organization, for part or all of the cost of planning; establishment of new child care facilities or improvement of existing child care facilities, and operating costs (for periods not in excess of 24 months or for such longer periods as the Secretary finds necessary to insure continued operation) of such new or improved facilities; evaluation; training of personnel, especially the training of individuals receiving benefits pursuant to part A and registered pursuant to section 2111; technical assistance; and research or demonstration projects to determine more effective methods of providing any such care.

"EVALUATION AND RESEARCH; REPORTS

"SEC. 2135. (a) (1) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall provide for the continuing evaluation of the program conducted under this part and of activities conducted under parts C and D insofar as they involve or are related to such program, including the effectiveness of such program in achieving its goals and its impact on other related programs. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may conduct research regarding, and demonstrations of, ways to improve the effectiveness of the program conducted under this part, and in so doing may waive any requirement or limitation imposed by or pursuant to this title to the extent he deems appropriate. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may, for these purposes, contract for evaluations of and research regarding such program.

"(2) Of the sums authorized by section 2101 to be appropriated for any fiscal year, not more than $10,000,000 shall be appropriated for purposes of paragraph (1).

"(b) The Secretary shall, in conducting the activities provided for in subsection (a)(1), utilize the data collection, processing, and retrieval system established for use in the operation and administration of the program under this part.

"(c) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall make an annual report to the President and the Congress on the operation and administration of the program under this part, including an evaluation thereof in carrying out the purposes of this title and recommendations with respect thereto.

"PART C—DETERMINATION OF BENEFITS

"DETERMINATIONS; REGULATIONS

"SEC. 2151. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this title, determinations under this part and part D shall be made—

"(1) by the Secretary of Labor with respect to benefits payable under part A and families claiming or receiving such benefits (and the term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of Labor when used in this part and part I with respect to such benefits and families), and

"(2) by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare with repect to benefits payable under part B and families claiming or receiving such benefits (and the term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare when used in this part and part D with respect to such benefits and families);

but in either case such determinations shall be made under and in accordance with regulations which shall be prescribed by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare with the concurrence of the Secretary of Labor and which shall be designed to assure that such determinations will be made uniformly by the two Secretaries, so that to the maximum extent feasible any such determination made by either such Secretary (including any interpretation of law or application of fact made by either such Secretary as a basis for such a determination) will be the same as the determination which would be made by the other such Secretary on the same facts and under the same circumstances.

"ELIGIBILITY FOR AND AMOUNT OF BENEFITS

"Definition of Eligible Family

"SEC. 2152. (a) Each family (as defined in section 2155)—

"(1) whose income, other than income excluded pursuant to section 2153(b), is at a rate of not more than—

"(A) $800 per year for each of the first two members of the family, plus

"(B) $400 per year for each of the next three members, plus

"(C) $300 per year for each of the next two members, plus

"(D) $200 for the next member, and

"(2) whose resources, other than resources excluded pursuant to section 2154, are not more than $1,500, shall be an eligible family for purposes of this title.

"Amount of Benefits

"(b) The benefit for a family under part A or part B shall be payable at the rate of—

"(1) $800 per year for each of the first two members of the family, plus

"(2) $400 per year for each of the next three members, plus

"(3) $300 per year for each of the next two members, plus

"(4) $200 for the next member, reduced by the amount of income, not excluded pursuant to section 2153(b), of the members of the family; except that no such benefit shall be payable to any family if the rate of payment (as otherwise determined under this part) would be less than $10 a month.

"Exclusion of Certain Family Members

"(c) The amount of benefits which is payable to a family as determined in accordance with subsection (b) shall, with respect to each family member (whether or not taken into account under subsection (b) in determining such amount) who is available for employment and fails to register as required by section 2111(a), or fails to accept manpower services or accept or continue in employment or participate in training as required by section 2111(c), or refuses to accept or continue to participate in rehabilitation services as required by section 2117(b) or 2132(b), be reduced by—

"(1) $800 per year in the case of each of the first two such members,

"(2) $400 per year in the case of each of the next three such members,

"(3) $300 per year in the case of the next two such members, and

"(4) $200 per year in the case of the next such member, or by proportionately smaller amounts for shorter periods.

"Payment of Benefits; Period for Determination of Benefits

"(d)(1) Payment of benefits (prior to determination under paragraph (2) of the amount of the benefits payable) shall be made during any quarter of a calendar year on the basis of the Secretary's estimate of the family's income for such quarter, after taking into account income from preceding quarters and any modifications which are likely to occur on the basis of changes in circumstances or conditions. Eligibility for benefits or the amount of payments shall be redetermined at any time within the quarter that the Secretary receives notice or otherwise has reason to believe that a material change in circumstances has occurred.

"(2) The amount of the benefits payable to any family for any quarter of a calendar year shall be determined in the quarter immediately following such quarter; and, to the extent that the amount actually paid to such family for such quarter as provided in paragraph (1) was more or less than the amount so determined, proper adjustment or recovery shall be made as provided in section 2171(b). The benefits payable to a family for the quarter for which such determination is made shall be reduced by any income received in such quarter and in any one or more of the three quarters immediately preceding such quarter by any individual who was a member of the family both at the time such income was received and in the quarter for which such determination is made, if and to the extent that such amount was not counted as income of the family for the purpose of reducing the amounts described in subsection (b) or excluded pursuant to section 2153(b) or (if the family was not an eligible family for purposes of this title in any one or more of such preceding quarters) to the extent that such amount would not have been so counted for such purpose even if the family had then been an eligible family for purposes of this title.

"(3) For purposes of paragraph (2), income not excluded under section 2153(b) with respect to the quarter for which a determination is made shall be considered first, to reduce the amounts described in subsection (b); if benefits are payable thereafter, they shall be reduced by applying income not so excluded with respect to the first preceding quarter, then with respect to the second such quarter, and then with respect to the third such quarter, in that order. In the case of a family which did not receive benefits in each of the preceding three quarters the Secretary may estimate (in the absence of satisfactory evidence) any amount which is needed for the determination of benefits under paragraph (2).

"(4) The Secretary shall by regulation prescribe the cases in which and extent to which the amount of a family assistance benefits for any quarter shall be reduced by reason of the time elapsing since the beginning of such quarter and before the date of filing of the application for the benefit.

"(5) For purposes of this subsection an application shall be considered to have been filed on the first day of the month in which it was actually filed.

"Biennial Reapplication

"(e) After a family has made application for benefits under this title and has been paid benefits (pursuant to such application) for 24 consecutive months, no further benefits shall be paid to such family under part A or part B except on the basis of a new application which shall be filed and processed as though it were such family's initial application for benefits under this title.

"Special Limits on Gross Income

"(f) The Secretary may prescribe the circumstances under which, consistently with the purposes of this title, the gross income from a trade or business (including farming) will be considered sufficiently large to make such family ineligible for such benefits. For purposes of this subsection, the term 'gross income' has the same meaning as when used in chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

"Certain Individuals Ineligible

"(g)(1) Notwithstanding subsection (a), no family shall be an eligible family for purposes of this title if, after notice by the Secretary that it is likely that any member of such family is eligible for any payments of the type enumerated in section 2153(a)(2)(A), such member fails within 30 days to take all appropriate steps (excluding acceptance of any employment offered under any of the conditions specified in subparagraphs (A) through (D) of section 2111 (c)(2)) to apply for and (if eligible) obtain any such payments.

"(2)(A) No individual shall be considered a member of a family for purposes of determining the amount of such family's benefits if such individual is exempt under section 2111(b)(1) from the requirement of registration pursuant to section 2111(a) solely because of an incapacity which is determined by the Secretary to be the result in whole or in part of drug abuse or alcohol abuse unless such individual is undergoing any treatment that may be appropriate for such abuse at an institution or facility approved for purposes of this section by the Secretary (so long as such treatment is available) and demonstrates that he is complying with the terms, conditions, and requirements of such treatment and with requirements imposed by the Secretary under subparagraph (B).

"(B) The Secretary shall provide for the monitoring and testing of all individuals who are members of families for purposes of this title and who as a condition of being considered as such are required to be undergoing treatment and complying with the terms, conditions, and requirements thereof as described in subparagraph (A), in order to assure such compliance and to determine the extent to which the imposition of such requirement is contributing to the achievement of the purposes of this title. The Secretary shall annually submit to the Congress a full and complete report on his activities under this subsection.

"(C) As used in subparagraph (A), the term 'drug abuse' means abuse of a controlled substance within the meaning of section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act; and the term 'alcohol abuse' means alcohol abuse or alcoholism within the meaning of section 247 of the Community Mental Health Centers Act.

"Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam

"(h) For special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, see section 1108(c).

"INCOME

"Meaning of Income

"SEC. 2153. (a) For purposes of this part, income means both earned income and unearned income; and—

"(1) earned income means only—

"(A) wages as determined under section 203(f)(5)(C);

"(B) net earnings from self-employment, as defined in section 211 (without the application of the second and third sentences following clause (C) of subsection (a)(9), and the last paragraph of subsection (a)), including earnings for services described in paragraphs (4), (5), and (6) of subsection (c); and

"(2) unearned income means all other income, including support and maintenance furnished in cash or otherwise, and including—

"(B) prizes and awards;

"(C) the proceeds of any life insurance policy to the extent that they exceed the amount expended by family members for expenses of the insured individual's last illness and burial or $1,500, whichever is less;

"(D) gifts (cash or otherwise), support and alimony payments, and inheritances; and

"(E) rents, dividends, interest, and royalties.

"Exclusions From Income

"(b) In determining the income of a family there shall be excluded—

"(1) subject to limitations (as to amount or otherwise) prescribed by the Secretary, the earned income of each child in the family who is, as determined by the Secretary under regulations, a student regularly attending a school, college, or university, or a course of vocational or technical training designed to prepare him for gainful employment;

"(2)(A) the total unearned income of all members of a family in a calendar quarter which, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, is received too infrequently or irregularly to be included, if such income so received does not exceed $60 in such quarter, and (B) the total earned income of all members of a family in a calendar quarter which, as determined in accordance with such criteria, is received too infrequently or irregularly to be included, if such income so received does not exceed $30 in such quarter;

"(3) an amount of earned income of a member of the family equal to all, or such part (and according to such schedule) as the Secretary may prescribe, of the cost incurred by such member for child care which the Secretary deems necessary to securing or continuing in manpower training, vocational rehabilitation, employment, or self-employment;

"(4) the first $720 per year (or proportionately smaller amounts for shorter periods) of the total of earned income (not excluded by the preceding paragraphs of this subsection) of all members of the family plus one-third of the remainder thereof;

"(5) subject to section 2156, any assistance (except veterans' pensions) which is based on need and furnished by any State or political subdivision of a State or any Federal agency (including relocation assistance under section 2114(b)(3)), or by any private agency or organization exempt from taxation under section 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 as an organization described in section 501(c) (3) or (4) of such Code;

"(6)(A) allowances under section 2115(a), 2117(c), or 2132(c);

"(B) allowances of the types described in such sections which are paid by a State or political subdivision thereof to a member of a family receiving benefits under this title, to the extent that such allowances do not exceed $30 per month;

"(7) any portion of any grant, scholarship, or fellowship received for use in paying the cost of tuition and fees at any educational (including technical or vocational education) institution;

"(8) home produce of a member of the family utilized by the household for its own consumption;

"(9) one-third of any payments received for the support of children who are family members, or as alimony paid to family members; and

"(10) any amounts received for the foster care of a child who is not a member of the family but who is living in the same home as the family and was placed in such home by a public or nonprofit private child-placement or child-care agency.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this part, the total amount which may be excluded under paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) in determining the income of any family for any year shall not exceed the lesser of—

"(i) $2,000 plus $200 for each member of the family in excess of four, or

"(ii) $3,000, or a proportionately smaller amount for a shorter period.

"RESOURCES

"Exclusions From Resources

"SEC. 2154. (a) In determining the resources of a family there shall be excluded—

"(1) the home, to the extent that its value does not exceed such amount as the Secretary determines to be reasonable;

"(2) household goods and personal effects, to the extent that their total value does not exceed such amount as the Secretary determines to be reasonable; and

"(3) other property which, as determined in accordance with and subject to limitations prescribed by the Secretary, is so essential to the family's means of self-support as to warrant its exclusion.

In determining the resources of a family an insurance policy shall be taken into account only to the extent of its cash surrender value; except that if the total face value of all life insurance policies on any person is $1,500 or less, no part of the value of any such policy shall be taken into account.

"Disposition of Resources

"(b) The Secretary shall prescribe the period or periods of time within which, and the manner in which, various kinds of property must be disposed of in order not to be included in determining a family's eligibility for benefits. Any portion of the family's benefits paid for any such period shall be conditioned upon such disposal; and any benefits so paid shall (at the time of the disposal) be considered overpayments to the extent they would not have been paid had the disposal occurred at the beginning of the period for which such benefits were paid.

"MEANING OF FAMILY AND CHILD

"Meaning of Family

"SEC. 2155. (a) Two or more individuals—

"(1) who are related by blood, marriage, or adoption,

"(2) who are living in a place of residence maintained by one or more of them as his or their own home,

"(3) all of whom are residents of the United States, and at least one of whom is either (A) a citizen or (B) an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, and

"(4) at least one of whom is a child who is in the care of or dependent upon another of such individuals, shall be regarded as a family for purposes of this title and part A of title IV. A parent (of a child living in a place of residence referred to in paragraph (2)), or a spouse of such a parent, who is determined by the Secretary to be temporarily absent from such place of residence for the purpose of engaging in or seeking employment or self-employment (including military service) shall nevertheless be considered (for purposes of paragraph (2)) to be living in such place of residence. Notwithstanding any other provision of this title—

"(A) no two or more individuals in any household shall be considered a family for purposes of this title if the individual who is the head of such household is a full-time undergraduate or graduate student at a college or university; and

"(B) no individual shall (except as provided in the preceding sentence) be considered a member of a family for any of the purposes of this title with respect to any month during all of which such individual is outside the United States; and for purposes of this clause after an individual has been outside the United States for any period of 30 consecutive days, he shall be treated as remaining outside the United States until he has been in the United States for a period of 30 consecutive days.

"Meaning of Child

"(b) For purposes of this title, the term 'child' means an individual who is neither married nor (as determined by the Secretary) the head of a household, and who is (1) under the age of eighteen, or (2) under the age of twenty-two and (as determined by the Secretary) a student regularly attending a school, college, or university, or a course of vocational or technical training designed to prepare him for gainful employment.

"Determination of Family Relationships

"(c) In determining whether an individual is related to another individual by blood, marriage, or adoption, appropriate State law shall be applied.

"Income and Resources of Noncontributing Individual

"(d) For purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of benefits for any family there shall be excluded the income and resources of any individual, other than a parent of a child, or a spouse of a parent, who is a family member, which, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, is not available to other members of the family; and for such purposes such individual—

"(1) in the case of a child, shall be regarded as a member of the family for purposes of determining the family's eligibility for such benefits but not for purposes of determining the amount of such benefits, and

"(2) in any other case, shall not be considered a member of the family for any purpose.

"United States

"(c) For purposes of this title, the term 'United States', when used in a geographical sense, means the States and the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

"Recipients of Assistance for the Aged, Blind, and Disabled Ineligible

"(f) If an individual is receiving benefits under title XX, then, for the period for which such benefits are received, such individual shall not be regarded as a member of a family for purposes of determining the amount of the benefits of the family under this title and his income and resources shall not be counted as income and resources of a family under this title.

"OPTIONAL STATE SUPPLEMENTATION

"SEC. 2156. (a) Any cash payments which are made by a State (or political subdivision thereof) on a regular basis to individuals who are receiving benefits under this title or who would but for their income be eligible to receive benefits under this title, as assistance based on need in supplementation of such benefits (as determined by the Secretary), shall be excluded under section 2153(b)(5) in determining the income of such individuals for purposes of this title only if (1) the Secretary and such State enter into an agreement which satisfies subsection (b) and which may at the option of the State provide that the Secretary will, on behalf of such State (or subdivision), make such supplementary payments to all such individuals, and (2) such supplementary payments are made to such individuals in accordance with such agreement.

"(b) Any agreement between the Secretary and a State entered into under subsection (a) shall provide—

"(1) that in determining the eligibility of any family for supplementary payments on the basis of the income of the family, all the provisions of section 2153(b) will apply, except that with respect to any quarter—

"(A) if benefits are paid to such family for such quarter under part A or part B, such benefits will not be excluded from income in applying paragraph (5) of such section, and

"(B) if no benefits are paid to such family for such quarter under part A or part B, the requirement of this paragraph shall not apply with respect to such family; except that the supplementary payment shall not be reduced, on account of income in excess of the maximum amount which such family could have and still receive such a benefit, by an amount greater than such excess, and, if the agreement provides that the Secretary will, on behalf of the State (or political subdivision), make the supplementary payments to individuals receiving benefits under this title, shall also provide—

"(2) that such payments will be made (subject to subsection (c)) to all families residing in such State (or subdivision) who are receiving benefits under this title except that the State may, at its option, exclude—

"(A) families in which both parents of the child or children are present, neither parent is incapacitated, and the male parent is not unemployed, or

"(B) families described in subparagraph (A) and families in which both parents of the child or children are present, neither parent is incapacitated, and the male parent is unemployed, and

cedural or other general administrative provisions, as the Secretary finds necessary (subject to subsection (c)) to achieve efficient and effective administration of both the program which he conducts under this title and the optional State supplementation.

"(c) Any State (or political subdivision) making supplementary payments described in subsection (a) may at its option impose as a condition of eligibility for such payments, and include in the State's agreement with the Secretary under such subsection, a residence requirement which excludes individuals who have resided in the State (or political subdivision) for less than a minimum period prior to application for such payments.

"(d) Any State which has entered into an agreement with the Secretary under this section which provides that the Secretary will, on behalf of the State (or political subdivision), make the supplementary payments to individuals who are receiving benefits under this title (or who would but for their income be eligible to receive such benefits), shall, subject to section 503 of the Social Security Amendments of 1971, at such times and in such installments as may be agreed upon between the Secretary and such State, pay to the Secretary an amount equal to the expenditures made by the Secretary as such supplementary payments.

"PART D—PROCEDURAL AND GENERAL PROVISIONS

"PAYMENTS AND PROCEDURES

"Payment of Benefits

"SEC. 2171. (a)(1) Benefits under this title shall be paid at such time or times and in such installments as will best effectuate the purposes of this title.

"(2)(A) Payment of the benefit of any family may be made to any one or more members of the family, or, if the Secretary finds, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing (which shall be held in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as a hearing under subsections (c)(1) and (2)) to the family member or members to whom the benefits are (or, but for this provision, would be) paid, that such member or members have such inability to manage funds that making payment to such member or members would be contrary to the welfare of the child or children in such family, he may make payment to any person other than a member of such family (including an appropriate public or private agency) who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family. The Secretary shall investigate each case in which he has reason to believe that a family receiving payments under this title is unable to manage such payments in accordance with its best interests.

"(B) If the Secretary makes payment under subparagraph (A) to a person who is not a member of the family, he shall review his finding under the preceding sentence periodically to determine whether the conditions justifying such finding still exist, and, if they do not, he shall discontinue making payments to any person who is not a member of the family. If it appears to the Secretary that such conditions are likely to continue beyond a period specified by him, he shall attempt to secure the appointment of a guardian or other legal representative for the family member with respect to whom such finding is made, and take any other steps he may find appropriate to protect the welfare of the child or children in the family.

"(C) No part of the benefits of any family may be paid to any member of such family who has failed to register as required by section 2111(a), or who fails to accept services or employment or participate in training as required by section 2111(c), or who refuses to accept rehabilitation services as required by section 2117(b) or section 2132(b); and the Secretary may, if he deems it appropriate, provide for the payment of such benefits during the period of such failure to any person other than a member of such family (including an appropriate public or private agency) who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family, without making the finding required by subparagraph (A) and without regard to subparagraph (B).

"(3) The Secretary may establish ranges of incomes within which a single amount of benefits under this title shall apply.

"(4) The Secretary may make, to any family initially applying for benefits under this title which is presumptively eligible for such benefits and which is faced with financial emergency, a cash advance against such benefits in an amount not exceeding $100.

The Secretary shall make such provision as he finds appropriate in the case of payment of more than the correct amount of benefits with respect to a family with a view to avoiding penalizing members of the family who were without fault in connection with the overpayment, if adjustment or recovery on account of such overpayment in such case would defeat the purposes of this title, or be against equity or good conscience, or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration of this title.

"Hearings and Review

"(c) (1) The Secretary shall provide reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing to any individual who is or claims to be a member of a family and is in disagreement with any determination under this title with respect to—

"(A) eligibility of the family for benefits, the number of members of the family, or the amount of the family's benefits, or

"(3) The final determination of the Secretary after a hearing under paragraph (1) shall be subject to judicial review as provided in section 205(g) to the same extent as the Secretary's final determination under section 205; except that the determination of the Secretary after such hearing as to any fact shall be final and conclusive and not subject to review by any court.

"Procedures; Prohibition of Assignments; Representation of Claimants—

"(d) (1) The provisions of section 207 and subsections (a), (d), (e), and (f) of section 205 shall apply with respect to this part to the same extent as they apply in the case of title II.

"(3) The Secretary may prescribe rules and regulations governing the recognition of agents or other persons, other than attorneys as hereinafter provided, representing claimants before the Secretary under this part, and may require of such agents or other persons, before being recognized as representatives of claimants, that they shall show that they are of good character and in good repute, possessed of the necessary qualifications to enable them to render such claimants valuable service, and otherwise competent to advise and assist such claimants in the presentation of their cases. An attorney in good standing who is admitted to practice before the highest court of the State, Territory, District, or insular possession of his residence or before the Supreme Court of the United States or the inferior Federal courts, shall be entitled to represent claimants before the Secretary. The Secretary may, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, suspend or prohibit from further practice before him any such person, agent, or attorney who refuses to comply with the Secretary's rules and regulations or who violates any provision of this paragraph for which a penalty is prescribed. The Secretary may, by rule and regulation, prescribe the maximum fees which may be charged for services performed in connection with any claim before the Secretary under this part, and any agreement in violation of such rules and regulations shall be void. "Applications and Furnishing of Information by Families

ments in the case of families or members thereof for the filing of applications, the suspension or termination of benefits, the furnishing of other data and material, and the reporting of events and changes in circumstances, as may be necessary to determine eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits.

"(2) Each family who received benefits under part A or part B in a quarter shall be required, not later than 30 days after the close of such quarter, to submit a report to the Secretary containing such information and in such form as he may prescribe in order to enable him to determine eligibility for and the amount of the benefits payable to such family with respect to such quarter as provided in section 2152(d). In case of failure by any family to submit the report within such 30 days, no payment of benefits under part A or part B shall be made to such family so long as such failure continues.

"(3) In case of the failure by any family to submit any other data, material, or report required under paragraph (1), or delay by any individual in submitting such data, material, or report as so required, the Secretary shall reduce any benefits which may subsequently become payable to such family under this title by—

"(4) having made application to receive any such benefit for the use and benefit of another and having received it, knowingly and willfully converts such benefit or any part thereof to a use other than for the use and benefit of such other person;

except that in any case where an order for the support and maintenance of such spouse or any such child has been issued by a court of competent jurisdiction, the obligation of such individual under this subsection (with respect to such spouse or child) for any period shall not exceed the amount specified in such order less any amount actually paid by such individual (to or for the support and maintenance of such spouse or child) during such period. "(2) provide for the training and effective use of paid subprofessional staff, with particular emphasis on the full-time or part-time employment of recipients of public assistance and other persons of low income, as community services aides, in the administration of the plan and for the use of nonpaid or partially paid volunteers in a social service volunteer program in providing services to applicants and recipients;

"(e) provide that the State agency will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may from time to time require, and comply with such provisions as the Secretary may from time to time find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports;

"(f) provide for prompt notice (including the transmittal of all relevant information) to the Attorney General of the United States (or the appropriate State official or agency (if any) designated by him pursuant to part D) of the furnishing of aid to families with dependent children with respect to a child who has been deserted or abandoned by a parent (including a child born out of wedlock without regard to whether the paternity of such child has been established);

"(g) provide (1) that, as a condition of eligibility under the plan, each applicant for or recipient of aid shall furnish to the State agency his social security account number (or numbers, if he has more than one such number), and (2) that such State agency shall utilize such account numbers, in addition to any other means of identification it may determine to employ, in the administration of such plan;

"(h)(1) provide that, as a condition of eligibility for aid, each applicant or recipient will be required to assign to the United States any rights to support from any other person he may have—

"(i) in his own behalf or in behalf of any other family members for whom he is applying for or receiving aid, and

"(ii) which have accrued at the time such assignment is executed, and which will have accrued during the period ending with the third month following the last month in which he (or such other family members) will have received aid under the plan or with such later month as may be determined under section 455(b); and

"(2) contain such provisions pertaining to determining paternity and securing support and locating absent parents as are prescribed by the Attorney General of the United States in order to comply with the requirements of part D;

State regardless of whether he has terminated his residence in such State, (B) was receiving aid under such State plan in the month before the month in which he moved out of such State, (C) continues to meet the eligibility requirements of such State plan except for residency, and (D) is not receiving aid to families with dependent children under a plan of the State in which he is present solely because he does not meet the duration of residency requirements imposed under subclause (1);

"(3) that for the purpose of furnishing aid under the State plan to any individual described in subclause (2), appropriate agreements (including provisions for reimbursement) will be made with the State agency administering or supervising the administration of the plan approved under this part of the other State so that the agency of such other State will determine the continuing eligibility of and make payments to such individual; and

"(4) that the State agency will enter into agreements with the State agency administering or supervising the administration of the plan under this part of other States to carry out for them the functions described in subclause (3); and

"(j) provide that, if the State plan contains provi-

At the option of the State, the State plan for aid to families with dependent children may provide that manuals and other policy issuances will be furnished to persons without charge for the reasonable cost of such materials, but such provision shall not be required by the Secretary as a condition for the approval of such plan under this part.

"(2) $133.33, in the case of a family with two members,

"(3) $166.67, in the case of a family with three members, and

"(4) $200.00, in the case of a family with four or more members,

(or, if less, the amount which a family of such size with no other income would have received for June 1972 under the State plan approved under this part) reduced by all income not required to be disregarded by clause (d);

"(b) must provide that eligibility for aid to families with dependent children will not be determined solely on the basis of declarations concerning eligibility factors and other relevant facts by an applicant for or recipient of such aid, and that relevant information will be verified to the maximum extent feasible from independent or collateral sources and additional information obtained as necessary in order to insure that such aid is only provided to eligible persons and that the amounts of such aid are correct;

"(c) except as otherwise provided in clause (d), must provide that the State agency shall, in determining need, take into consideration any other income or resources of any child or relative claiming aid to families with dependent children or of any other individual whose needs the State determines should be considered in determining the need of the child or relative claiming such aid, but in no event will the needs of any other individual be considered for purposes of making the determination under this clause (c) unless such individual is—

"(1) living in the same home as such child and relative, and

"(2) one of the relatives of such child specified in section 411(a)(1)(A) (but not including a brother, sister, step-brother, or step-sister of such child who does not meet the requirements of section 411(a)(1)(A)(ii));

"(d) must provide that, in making the determination under clause (c), the State agency—

"(1) shall with respect to any month disregard—

"(B) in the case of the earned income of a dependent child not included in subclause (1)(A), a relative receiving such aid, and any other individual (living in the same home as such relative and child) whose needs are taken into account in making such determination, the first $60 (or, if such individual is not working at least 40 hours per week, or at least 35 hours per week and earning per week an amount at least equal to 40 times the hourly minimum wages specified in section 6(a)(1) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, the first $30) of such earned income for such month, plus one-third of the next $300 of such income for such month, plus one-fifth of the remainder of such income for such month, except that (i) reasonable child care expenses (subject to such limitations as the Secretary may prescribe in regulations) will first be deducted before computing such individual's earned income and (ii) the provisions of this subclause (1)(B) shall not apply to earned income derived from participation on a project maintained under the program established by section 408 or by clause (2) or (3) of section 432(b), and

"(C) $20 per month, with respect to the dependent child (or children), relative with whom the child (or children) are living, and other individual (living in the same home as such child (or children)) whose needs are taken into account in making such determination, of all income derived from support payments collected pursuant to part D; and

"(2)(A) may, subject to the limitations prescribed by the Secretary, permit all or any portion of the earned or other income to be set aside for future identifiable needs of a dependent child, and (B) may, before disregarding the amounts referred to in subclause (1) and subclause (2)(A), disregard not more than $5 per month of any income; except that, with respect to any month, the State agency shall not disregard any earned income (other than income referred to in subclause (2)) of—

"(3) any one of the persons specified in subclause (1)(B) if such person—

"(A) terminated his employment or reduced his earned income without good cause within such period (of not less than 30 days)

preceding such month as may be prescribed by the Secretary; or

"(B) refused without good cause, within such period preceding such month as may be prescribed by the Secretary, to accept employment in which he is able to engage which is offered through the public employment offices of the State, or is otherwise offered by an employer if the offer of such employer is determined by the State or local agency administering the State plan, after notification by him, to be a bona fide offer of employment; or

"(4) any of such persons specified in subclause (1)(B) if with respect to such month the income of the persons so specified (within the meaning of clause (c)) was in excess of their need as determined by the State agency pursuant to clause (c) (without regard to this clause (d)) unless, for any one of the four months preceding such month, the needs of such person were met by the furnishing of aid under the plan;

"(e) may provide for the State agency to make rent payments for any month directly to a public housing agency on behalf of an individual or family receiving aid under the plan or on behalf of groups of such individuals or families, and that the State agency may make rent payments directly to any private person on behalf of an individual or family receiving aid under the plan, and that if the State plan provides for such payments to private persons, such payments will be made only if (1) such individual or family has failed without good cause under State law to make rent payments for which he was obligated, whether or not to his or their current landlord, for any two consecutive months within the twelve-month period immediately preceding the month for which the State agency commences to make such rent payments, (2) such rent payments with respect to such individual or family are for any month equal to the least of (A) the amount of aid under the plan for which such individual or family is eligible for such month, (B) the full rent owed by such individual or family for such month, or (C) the amount used by the State for such month to determine the need for rent of an individual or family (of the same size as such family) with no income other than aid under the State plan, and (3) such person agrees to accept the payment by the State agency of the amount described in subclause (2)(B) or (2)(C) as the full rent owed for such month; and

"(f) must provide that in any case in which more or less than the correct amount of aid for any month was paid with respect to a family under the plan,

"(1) in the case of underpayments, proper adjustment shall be made in future payments with respect to such family which are made within such maximum period of time as the State agency may prescribe, and

"(2) in the case of overpayments—

"(A) proper adjustment or recovery shall be made by adjustment in future payments with respect to such family or by recovery from such family in accordance with procedures of the State for collection of overpayments, or

"(B) if such adjustment or recovery cannot be made, the State agency will so notify the Secretary so that he may make appropriate adjustments to or recovery from other amounts which may be owed to any member of such family by the United States pursuant to section 414.

"STATUTORY RIGHTS OF APPLICANTS FOR RECIPIENTS OF AID TO FAMILIES WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN

"SEC. 405. A State plan for aid to families with dependent children must—

"(a) provide that all individuals wishing to make application for aid to families with dependent children shall have opportunity to do so, and that such aid will only be furnished to or with respect to eligible persons (as defined in section 411(f)) and will, subject to subsections (g), (h), and (i) of section 402, subsections (b) and (f) of section 404, and subsections (a) and (e) of section 409, be furnished with reasonable promptness;

"(b) provide (1) for granting an opportunity for an evidentiary hearing before the State agency or, if the State plan is administered in each of the political subdivisions of the State by a local agency, before such local agency, to any individual whose claim for aid to families with dependent children is denied, or is not acted upon with reasonable promptness or to any individual who is receiving aid under the plan which aid such State or local agency determines should be terminated or the amount of which should be reduced, (2) that any hearing held at the request of any individual to determine the matter of whether the aid provided to such individual (or to members of his family) under the State plan should be terminated or the amount thereof reduced shall be completed and the agency before which such hearing is held shall make a decision on the basis of such evidentiary hearing with respect to such matter not later than thirty days after the date such individual is notified of the intention of such agency to terminate or reduce the amount of such aid, (3) that the agency before which such hearing is held may put its decision into effect immediately upon its issuance, (4) that if the evidentiary hearing is held by a local agency administering the State plan in a political subdivision of such State, the individual will be provided an opportunity to appeal such decision to the State agency, and (5) if any individual (or family) is determined under a final decision of the State agency (or of the local agency if no appeal is taken therefrom) to have received, prior to such decision, aid under the plan in any amount to which he (or his family) was not entitled, appropriate adjustment or recovery of such amount will be made as required by section 404(f); except that no individual whose eligibility for aid under the State plan is terminated by reason of the provisions (referred to in section 402(j) and relating to limitation of duration of eligibility based on any approved application for aid) in a State plan shall be entitled to a hearing on account of termination of his eligibility arising from the application of such provisions; and

"(c) provide safeguards which permit the use or disclosure of information concerning applicants or recipients only (1) to public officials who require such information in connection with their official duties, or (2) to other persons for purposes directly connected with the administration of aid to families with dependent children.

"PROTECTION OF CHILDREN

"SEC. 406. (a) A State plan for aid to families with dependent children must—

"(1) provide that where the State agency has reason to believe that the home in which a relative and child receiving aid reside is unsuitable for the child because of the neglect, abuse, or exploitation of such child, it shall bring such condition to the attention of the appropriate court or law enforcement agencies in the State, and shall provide such data with respect to the situation as it may have;

"(2) provide that, whenever the State agency has reason to believe that any payments of aid to families with dependent children made with respect to a child are not being or may not be used in the best interests of the child, the State agency shall provide for such counseling and guidance services with respect to the use of such payments and the management of other funds by the relative receiving such payments as it deems advisable in order to assure use of such payments in the best interests of such child, and shall provide for advising such relative that continued failure to so use such payments will result in substitution therefor of protective payments as defined in subsection (b), or in seeking appointment of a guardian or legal representative as provided in section 1111, or in the imposition of criminal or civil penalties authorized under State law if it is determined by a court of competent jurisdiction that such relative is not using or has not used for the benefit of the child such payments made for that purpose; and the provision of such services or advice by the State agency (or the taking of the action specified in such advice) shall not serve as a basis for withholding funds from such State under section 413 and shall not prevent such payments with respect to such child from being considered aid to families with dependent children;

"(3) provide for aid to families with dependent children in the form of foster care, including provision for—

"(A) development of a plan for each such child (including periodic review of the necessity for the child's being in a foster family home or child-care institution) to assure that he receives proper care and that services are provided which are designed to improve the conditions in the home from which he was removed or to otherwise make possible his being placed in the home of a relative specified in section 411(a)(1), and

"(B) use by the State or local agency administering the State plan, to the maximum extent practicable, in placing such a child in a foster family home or child-care institution, of the services of employees of the State public-welfare agency referred to in section 421(a) (relating to allotments to States for child welfare services under part B) or of any local agency participating in the administration of the plan referred to in such section, who perform functions in the administration of such plan; and

"(4) provide that protective payments (as defined in subsection (b) but without regard to paragraphs (1) through (5) thereof) will be made to meet the needs of a dependent child in any case in which the relative with whom such child is living is not an eligible person by reason of—

"(A) his refusal to accept employment or to participate in any employment or training program if his acceptance or participation is otherwise required by this part,

"(B) her failure to cooperate with any official or agency of the State or of the United States in establishing the paternity of such child (where such relative is the mother of a dependent child born out of wedlock), or in obtaining support payments for herself or such child,

"(C) a medical determination that such relative is a drug addict or alcoholic if and for so long as he is not receiving payment directly under title XV, or

"(D) his failure to agree to permit inspection of the home in which such relative lives, at reasonable times and with reasonable notice, by a duly authorized person employed by or on behalf of such State in the administration of the State plan approved under this part.

"(b) For purposes of this part, the term 'protective payments' means payments with respect to any dependent child (including payments to meet the needs of the relative, and the relative's spouse, with whom such child is living, and the needs of any other individual living in the same home if such needs are taken into account in making the determination under section 404(c)) which are made to another individual who (as determined in accordance with standards prescribed by the Secretary) is interested in or concerned with the welfare of such child, relative, or other individual, or are made on behalf of such child or relative directly to a person furnishing food, living accommodations, or other goods, services, or items to or for such child, relative, or other individual, but only with respect to a State whose State plan approved under this part includes provision for—

"(1) determination by the State agency that the relative of the child with respect to whom such payments are made has such inability to manage funds that making payments to him would be contrary to the best interests of the child and, therefore, it is necessary to provide such aid with respect to such child and relative through payments described in this subsection (b);

"(2) undertaking and continuing special efforts to develop greater ability on the part of the relative to manage funds in such manner as to protect the welfare of the family;

"(3) periodic review by such State agency of the determination under clause (1) to ascertain whether conditions justifying such determination still exist, with provision for termination of such payments if they do not and for seeking judicial appointment of a guardian or other legal representative, as described in section 1111, if and when it appears that the need for such payments is continuing, or is likely to continue, beyond a period specified in regulations prescribed by the Secretary;

"(4) aid in the form of foster home care in behalf of children described in section 411(a)(3); and

"(5) opportunity for an evidentiary hearing before the State agency or, if the State plan is administered in each of the political subdivisions of the State by a local agency, before such local agency on the determination referred to in clause (1) for any individual with respect to whom it is made;

but such term does not include any amount to meet the needs of an individual who is not an eligible person.

"SOCIAL SERVICES

"SEC. 407. (a) A State plan for aid to families with dependent children must—

"(1) provide a description of the services to families with dependent children which the State agency (using whatever internal organizational arrangement it finds appropriate for this purpose) makes available to maintain and strengthen family life for children, including a description of the steps taken to assure, in the provision of such services, maximum utilization of other agencies providing similar or related services;

"(2) provide, in such cases as the State agency finds appropriate, for the development and application of a program for such services to families with dependent children, as defined in subsection (b), for each child and relative who receives aid to families with dependent children, and each appropriate individual (living in the same home as a relative and child receiving such aid whose needs are taken into account in making the determination under section 404(c)), as may be necessary in the light of the particular home conditions and other needs of such child, relative, and individual, in order to assist such child, relative, and individual to attain or retain capability for self-support and care and in order to maintain and strengthen family life and to foster child development;

"(3) provide for the development of a program for each appropriate relative and dependent child receiving aid under the plan, and each appropriate individual (living in the same home as a relative and child receiving such aid) whose needs are taken into account in making the determination under section 404(c), for preventing or reducing the incidence of births out of wedlock and otherwise strengthening family life, and for implementing such program by assuring that in all appropriate cases family planning services (including supplies) are offered them and are provided promptly to all individuals requesting such services, but acceptance by such child, relative, or individual of family planning services under the plan shall be voluntary on the part of such child, relative, or individual and shall not be a prerequisite to eligibility for or the receipt of any other service or aid under the plan;

"(4) provide that to the extent that services provided under the State plan are furnished by the staff of the State agency or the local agency administering the State plan in each of the political subdivisions of the State, for the establishment of a single organizational unit in such State or local agency, as the case may be, responsible for the furnishing of such services; and

"(5) provide for the referral to the State or appropriate local agency administering the plan of such State approved under title XV of any individual applying for aid to families with dependent children who is medically determined to be a drug addict or alcoholic but who otherwise would be eligible for such aid under the State plan approved under this part.

"(b) The term 'services to families with dependent children' means services to a family or any member thereof for the purpose of preserving, rehabilitating, reuniting, or strengthening the family, and such other services as will assist members of a family to attain or retain capability for the maximum self-support and personal independence.

"COMMUNITY WORK AND TRAINING PROGRAMS

"SEC. 408. (a) For the purpose of assisting the States in encouraging, through community work and training programs of a constructive nature, the conservation of work skills and the development of new skills for relatives with whom a dependent child is living and other individuals whose needs are taken into account in making the determination under section 404(c) and who are receiving aid to families with dependent children, under conditions which are designed to assure protection of the health and welfare of such individuals and the dependent children involved, expenditures (other than for medical or any other type of remedial care) for any month with respect to a dependent child (including payments to meet the needs of any relative or relatives, specified in section 411(a)(1)(A), with whom he is living) under a State plan approved under this part shall not be excluded from aid to families with dependent children because such expenditures are made in the form of payments for work performed in such month by any one or more of the relatives specified in section 411(a)(1)(A) with whom such child is living if such work is performed for the State agency or any other public agency under a program (which need not be in effect in all political subdivisions of the State) administered by or under the supervision of such State agency, if there is State financial participation in such expenditures, and if such State plan includes—

"(1) provisions which, in the judgment of the Secretary, provide reasonable assurance that—

"(A) appropriate standards for health safety, and other conditions applicable to the performance of such work by such relatives are established and maintained;

"(B) payments for such work are at rates not less than the minimum rate (if any) provided by or under State law for the same type of work and not less than the rates prevailing on similar work in the community;

"(C) such work is performed on projects which serve a useful public purpose, do not result either in displacement of regular workers or in the performance by such relatives of work that would otherwise be performed by employees of public or private agencies, institutions, or organizations, and (except in cases of projects which involve emergencies or which are generally of a nonrecurring nature) are of a type which has not normally been undertaken in the past by the State or community, as the case may be;

"(D) in determining the needs of any such relative, any additional expenses reasonably attributable to such work will be considered;

"(E) any such relative shall have reasonable opportunities to seek regular employment and to secure any appropriate training or retraining which may be available; and

"(F) aid under the plan will not be denied with respect to any such relative (or the dependent child) for refusal by such relative to perform any such work if he has good cause for such refusal;

"(2) provision for entering into cooperative arrangements with the system of public employment offices in the State looking toward employment or occupational training of any such relatives performing work under such program, including appropriate provision for registration and periodic reregistration of such relatives and for maximum utilization of the job placement services and other services and facilities of such offices;

"(3) provision for entering into cooperative arrangements with the State agency or agencies responsible for administering or supervising the administration of vocational education and adult education in the State, looking toward maximum utilization of available public vocational or adult education services and facilities in the State in order to encourage the training or retraining of any such relatives performing work under such program and otherwise assist them in preparing for regular employment;

"(4) provision for assuring appropriate arrangements for the care and protection of the child during the absence from the home of any such relative performing work under such program in order to assure that such absence and work will not be inimical to the welfare of the child;

"(5) provision that there will be no adjustment or recovery by the State or any political subdivision thereof on account of any payments which are correctly made for such work; and

"(6) such other provisions as the Secretary finds necessary to assure that the operation of such program will not interfere with achievement of the objectives set forth in section 401.

"(b) In the case of any State which makes expenditures in the form described in subsection (a) under its State plan approved under this part, the proper and efficient administration of the State plan, for purposes of section 412(a)(3) may not include the cost of making or acquiring materials or equipment in connection with the work performed under a program referred to in subsection (a) or the cost of supervision of work under such program, and may include only such other costs attributable to such programs as are permitted by the Secretary.

"RELATIONSHIP WITH WORK INCENTIVE PROGRAM

"SEC. 409. A State plan for aid to families with dependent children must provide—

"(a) that every individual, as a condition of eligibility for aid under this part, shall register for manpower services, training, and employment as provided by regulations of the Secretary of Labor, unless such individual is—

"(1) a child who is under age 16 or attending school full time;

"(2) a person who is ill, incapacitated, or of advanced age;

"(3) a person so remote from a work incentive project that his effective participation is precluded;

"(4) a person whose presence in the home is required because of illness or incapacity of another member of the household;

"(5) a mother or other relative of a child under the age of six who is caring for the child; or

"(6) the mother or other female caretaker of a child, if the father or another adult male relative is in the home and not excluded by subclause (1), (2), (3), or (4) of this clause (unless he has failed to register as required by this clause, or has been found by the Secretary of Labor under section 433(g) to have refused without good cause to participate under a work incentive program or accept employment as described in clause (e) of this section); and that any individual referred to in subclause (5) shall be advised of her option to register, if she so desires, pursuant to this paragraph, and shall be informed of the child care services (if any) which will be available to her in the event she should decide so to register;

"(b) that aid under the plan will not be denied by reason of such registration or the individual's certification to the Secretary of Labor under clause (f) of this section, or by reason of an individual's participation on a project under the program established by section 432 (b) (2) or (3) so long as, in making the determination required under section 404(c), the State agency finds that such individual (and his family) remain eligible for such aid;

"(c) for arrangements to assure that there will be made a non-Federal contribution to the work incentive programs established by part C by appropriate agencies of the State or private organizations of 10 per centum of the cost of such programs, as specified in section 435(b);

"(d) that (1) training incentives authorized under section 434 shall be disregarded in determining the needs of an individual under section 404(c), and (2) in determining such individual's needs the additional expenses attributable to his participation in a program established by section 432(b) (2) or (3) shall be taken into account;

"(e) that if and for so long as any child, relative, or individual (certified to the Secretary of Labor pursuant to clause (f)) has been found by the Secretary of Labor under section 433(g) to have refused without good cause to participate under a work incentive program established by part C with respect to which the Secretary of Labor has determined his participation is consistent with the purposes of such part C, or to have refused without good cause to accept employment in which he is able to engage which is offered through the public employment offices of the State, or is otherwise offered by an employer if the offer of such employer is determined, after notification by him, to be a bona fide offer of employment—

"(1) if the relative makes such refusal, such relative's needs shall not be taken into account in making the determination under section 404(c), and aid for any dependent child in the family in the form of protective payments as defined in section 406(b) (which in such a case shall be without regard to clauses (1) through (5) thereof) or section 406(a) (3) will be made;

"(2) aid with respect to a dependent child will be denied if a child who is the only child receiving aid in the family makes such refusal;

"(3) if there is more than one child receiving aid in the family, aid for any such child will be denied (and his needs will not be taken into account in making the determination under section 404(c)) if that child makes such refusal; and

"(4) if such individual makes such refusal, such individual's needs will not be taken into account in making the determination under section 404(c);

except that the State agency shall for a period of sixty days, make payments of the type described in section 406(b) (without regard to clauses (1) through (5) thereof) on behalf of the relative specified in subclause (1), or continue aid in the case of a child specified in subclause (2) or (3), or take the individual's needs into account in the case of an individual specified in subclause (4), but only if during such period such child, relative, or individual accepts counseling or other services (which the State agency shall make available to such child, relative, or individual) aimed at persuading such child, relative, or individual, as the case may be, to participate in such program in accordance with the determination of the Secretary of Labor; and

"(f) that the State agency will have in effect a special program which (1) will be administered by a separate administrative unit and the employees of which will, to the maximum extent feasible, perform services only in connection with the administration of such program, (2) will provide (through arrangements with others or otherwise) for individuals who have been registered pursuant to clause (a), in accordance with the order of priority listed in section 433(a), such health, vocational rehabilitation, counseling, child care, and other social and supportive services as are necessary to enable such individuals to accept employment or receive manpower training provided under part C, and will, when arrangements have been made to provide necessary supportive services, including child care, certify to the Secretary of Labor those individuals who are ready for employment or training under part C, (3) will participate in the development of operational and employability plans under section 433(b), and (4) will provide for purposes of clause (2), that, when more than one kind of child care is available, the mother may choose the type, but she may not refuse to accept child care services if they are available.

"(b) The term 'emergency assistance to needy families with children' means any of the following, furnished for a period not in excess of 30 days in any 12-month period, in the case of a needy child under age 21 who is (or, within such period as may be specified in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, has been) living with any of the relatives specified in section 411(a)(1)(A) in a place of residence maintained by one or more of such relatives as his or their own home, but only where such child is without available resources, the payments, care, or services involved are necessary to avoid destitution of such child or to provide living arrangements in a home for such child, and such destitution or need for living arrangements did not arise because such child or relative refused without good cause to accept employment or training for employment:

"(1) money payments, payments in kind, or such other payments as the State agency may specify with respect to, or medical care or any other type of remedial care recognized under State law on behalf of, such child or any other member of the household in which he is living, and

"(2) such services as may be specified in regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"SUBPART 2—DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 411. When used in this part—

"(a)(1)(A) The term 'dependent child' means a needy child who has been born and (i) who has been deprived of parental support or care by reason of the death, continued absence from the home, or physical or mental incapacity of a parent, and who is living with his father, mother, grandfather, grandmother, brother, sister, stepfather, stepmother, stepbrother, stepsister, uncle, aunt, first cousin, nephew, or niece, in a place of residence maintained by one or more of such relatives as his or their own home, and (ii) who is (I) under the age of eighteen or (II) under the age of twenty-one and (as determined by the State) a student regularly attending a school, college, or university, or (III) under the age of twenty-one and (as determined by the State) a student regularly attending a course of vocational or technical training designed to fit him for gainful employment.

"(B)(i) The term 'parent', when used with respect to any child, means such child's natural parent or his adoptive parent, and, at the option of the State, may also include (I) his stepparent, or (II) if such child's father or stepfather is deceased or continuously absent from the home, any other adult individual (regardless of whether such other individual is living in the same home as such child and the relative with whom the child is living) if and for so long as there exists a continuing parent-child type relationship between such child and such individual if such individual is not the grandfather, grandmother, brother, sister, stepbrother, stepsister, uncle, aunt, first cousin, nephew, or niece of such child, but no child shall be found to be deprived of parental support or care by reason of the continued absence from the home of such individual.

"(ii) For purposes of determining whether a continuing parent-child type relationship exists between a child and such an adult individual, only the following factors may be taken into account: (I) the frequency with which such child and such individual appear together in public, (II) whether such individual is the parent of a half brother or half sister of such child, (III) whether such individual exercises parental control over such child, (IV) whether substantial gifts are made by such individual to such child or to members of the family of such child, (V) whether such individual claims such child as a dependent for income tax purposes, (VI) whether such individual cares for or arranges for the care of such child when the relative with whom such child is living is ill or absent from home, (VII) whether such individual assumes responsibility for such child when a crisis occurs in such child's life, such as illness or detention of such child by public authorities, (VIII) whether such individual is listed as the parent or guardian of such child in school records which are designed to indicate the parents or guardians of children, (IX) whether such individual makes frequent visits to such household, (X) whether such individual gives or uses as his address the address of such household in dealing with his employer, his creditors, postal authorities, other public authorities, or others with whom he may have dealings, relationships, or obligations. Such a relationship may be determined to exist in any case only after an evaluation of the factors specified in the preceding sentence, as well as any evidence which may refute any inference supported by evidence related to such factors.

"(2)(A) At the option of the State, the term 'dependent child' may include a needy child who meets the requirements of section 411(a)(1)(A)(ii), who has been deprived of parental support or care by reason of the unemployment (as determined in accordance with standards prescribed by the Secretary) of his father, and who is living with any of the relatives specified in section 411(a)(1)(A) in a place of residence maintained by such relative (himself or together with any one or more of the other relatives so specified) as his (or their) own home; Provided, That for purposes of this subparagraph, an individual who is the father of a dependent child shall not be considered to be unemployed for any week in which his unemployment is on account of a labor dispute at the establishment where he was previously employed, unless such individual (1) is not directly interested in and has not participated in such dispute, and (2) is not a member of any group of employees which is directly interested in, financing or participating in, such dispute.

"(B) The provisions of subparagraph (A) shall be applicable to a State if the State's plan approved under this part—

"(i) requires the payment of aid to families with dependent children with respect to a dependent child as defined in subparagraph (A) when—

"(I) such child's father has not been employed (as determined in accordance with standards prescribed by the Secretary) for at least 30 days prior to the receipt of such aid,

"(II) such father has not without good cause, within such period (of not less than 30 days) as may be prescribed by the Secretary, refused a bona fide offer of employment or training, and

"(III) (a) such father has six or more quarters of work (as defined in subparagraph (D)(i)) in any 13-calendar-quarter period ending within one year prior to the application for such aid or (b) he received unemployment compensation under an unemployment compensation law of a State or of the United States, or he was qualified (within the meaning of subparagraph (D)(iii)) for unemployment compensation under the unemployment compensation law of the State, within 1 year prior to the application for such aid; and

"(ii) provides—

"(I) for such assurances as will satisfy the Secretary that fathers of dependent children as defined in subparagraph (A) will be certified to the Secretary of Labor as provided in section 409 within 30 days after the receipt of aid with respect to such children;

"(II) for entering into cooperative arrangements with the State agency responsible for administering or supervising the administration of vocational education in the State, designed to assure maximum utilization of available public vocational education services and facilities in the State in order to encourage the retraining of individuals capable of being retrained; and

"(III) for the denial of aid to families with dependent children to any child or relative specified in subparagraph (A) if, and for as long as, such child's father—

"(a) is not currently registered with the public employment offices in the State, or

"(b) receives unemployment compensation under an unemployment compensation law of a State or of the United States.

"(C) For purposes of this section—

"(i) the term 'quarter of work' with respect to any individual means a calendar quarter in which such individual received earned income of not less than $50 (or which is a 'quarter of coverage' as defined in section 213(a)(2)), or in which such individual participated in a community work and training program under section 408 or any other work and training program subject to the limitations in section 408, or the work incentive program established under part C;

"(ii) the term 'calendar quarter' means a period of 3 consecutive calendar months ending on March 31, June 30, September 30, or December 31; and

"(iii) an individual shall be deemed qualified for unemployment compensation under the State's unemployment compensation law if—

"(I) he would have been eligible to receive such unemployment compensation upon filing application, or

"(II) he performed work not covered under such law and such work, if it had been covered, would (together with any covered work he performed) have made him eligible to receive such unemployment compensation upon filing application.

"(3) The term 'dependent child' shall also include a child (A) who would meet the requirements of paragraph (1) or (2) except for his removal from the home of a relative (specified in such paragraph (1)) as a result of a judicial determination to the effect that continuation therein would be contrary to the welfare of such child, (B) whose placement and care are the responsibility of (i) the State or local agency administering the State plan approved under this part, or (ii) any other public agency with whom the State agency administering or supervising the administration of such State plan has made an agreement which is still in effect and which includes provision for assuring development of a plan, satisfactory to such State agency, for such child as provided in section 406(a)(3)(A) and such other provisions as may be necessary to assure accomplishment of the objectives of the State plan approved under this part, (C) who has been placed in a foster family home or child-care institution as a result of such determination, and

(D) who (i) received aid under such State plan in or for the month in which court proceedings leading to such determination were initiated, or (ii)(I) would have received such aid in or for such month if application had been made therefor, or (II) in the case of a child who had been living with a relative specified in paragraph (1)(A) within 6 months prior to the month in which such proceedings were initiated, would have received such aid in or for such month if in such month he had been living with (and removed from the home of) such a relative and application had been made therefor.

"(b) The term 'aid to families with dependent children'—

"(1) means money payments, rent payments meeting the requirements of section 404(e), and protective payments as defined in section 406(b), with respect to a dependent child or dependent children and includes any such payments to meet the needs of the relative with whom the child is living (and the spouse of such relative if living with him and if such relative is the child's parent and the child is a dependent child by reason of the physical or mental incapacity of a parent or is a dependent child under section 411(a)(2)); and

"(2) also includes foster care in behalf of a child described in paragraph (a)(3) of this section—

"(A) in the foster family home of any individual, whether the payment therefor is made to such individual or to a public or nonprofit private child-placement or child-care agency, or

"(B) in a child-care institution (other than one which meets the definition contained in section 2118), whether the payment therefor is made to such institution or to a public or nonprofit private child-placement or child-care agency, but subject to limitations prescribed by the Secretary with a view to including as 'aid to families with dependent children' in the case of such foster care in such institutions only those items which are included in such term in the case of foster care in the foster family home of an individual.

"(c) The term 'relative with whom any dependent child is living' means the individual who is one of the relatives specified in subsection (a)(1) and with whom such child is living (within the meaning of such subsection) in a place of residence maintained by such individual (himself or together with any one or more of the other relatives so specified) as his (or their) own home.

"(d) The term 'foster family home' means a foster family home for children which is licensed by the State in which it is situated or has been approved, by the agency of such

State responsible for licensing homes of this type, as meeting the standards established for such licensing; and the term 'child-care institution' means a nonprofit private child-care institution which is licensed by the State in which it is situated or has been approved, by the agency of such State responsible for licensing or approval of institutions of this type, as meeting the standards established for such licensing.

"(e) The term 'physical or mental incapacity' means the inability to engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of any medically determinable physical or mental impairment.

"(f) The term 'eligible person', in the case of any State, means a dependent child, a relative with whom any dependent child is living, or any other individual (living in the same home as such a child and relative) whose needs such State determines should be considered in determining the need of the child or relative claiming aid under the plan of such State approved under this part, except such term does not include any such child, relative, or individual who for any month—

"(1) (other than a member of a migrant family, for purposes of emergency assistance under section 410) has resided in such State for a period of less than 90 consecutive days or, in the case of a child born within three months immediately preceding the application for such aid, is living with a parent or other relative who has resided in such State for a period of less than 90 consecutive days;

"(2) is neither a citizen nor an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence (or otherwise permanently residing in the United States under color of law);

"(3) is outside the United States during all of such month (and an individual who has been outside the United States for any period of 30 consecutive days shall be treated as remaining outside the United States until he has been in the United States for a period of 30 consecutive days);

"(4) is a mother of a child born out of wedlock with respect to whom such aid is claimed and who fails to cooperate with the State agency or with the United States in establishing the paternity of such child;

"(5) is the parent of a child with respect to whom such aid is claimed who fails to cooperate with any agency or official of the State or of the United States in obtaining support payments for herself or such child or in obtaining any other payments or property due herself or such child;

"(6) is medically determined to be a drug addict or alcoholic;

"(7) is, prior to January 1, 1974, receiving aid under title XVI, or after December 31, 1973, is receiving supplemental security income benefits under such title;

"(8) has refused without good cause to participate in the work incentive program under part C, or who refuses without good cause as determined by the Secretary of Labor to accept employment,

"(9) within 1 year immediately preceding his application for aid to families with dependent children transferred property (of any type) to a relative for less than fair market value, if the retention of such property would have caused him to be found to be ineligible for such aid, and (but only if the State, at its option, so provides in its plan approved under this part) does not include any one or more of the following—

"(10) an individual who is absent from such State for a period in excess of 90 consecutive days (regardless of whether he maintains his residence in the State during such period) until he has been present in the State for 30 consecutive days in the case of such an individual who has maintained his residence in such State during such period or 90 consecutive days in the case of any other such individual;

"(11) an individual who will not agree, as a condition of initial or continuing eligibility for such aid, to permit inspection of his home, at reasonable times and with reasonable notice, by any duly authorized person employed by or on behalf of such State in the administration of such plan; or

"(12) a child and the relative with whom the child is living if—

"(A) such relative is not the child's natural or adoptive parent or legal guardian and would not himself be an eligible person if such child were not living with him, and

"(B) the child's natural or adoptive parent is receiving aid pursuant to a State plan approved under this part.

"SUBPART 3—PAYMENT TO STATES

"SEC. 412. (a)(1) (A) From the sums appropriated therefor, the Secretary shall, for the calendar year beginning January 1, 1973, pay to each State which has an approved plan for aid to families with dependent children an amount equal to the greater of—

"(i) an amount equal to 110 per centum of the Federal share (as defined in subparagraph (B)(i)) for such State for quarters in calendar year 1972; or

"(ii) an amount equal to whichever of the following is the lesser:

"(I) the Federal share for such State for quarters in calendar year 1972, plus one-half of the State's share (as defined in subparagraph (B)(ii)) for such quarters; or

"(II) an amount equal to the total expenditures as aid to families with dependent children (as defined in section 406(b), as such section was in effect during quarters in calendar year 1972) which would have been made in such quarters if, for each of such quarters, the State plan had provided (a) for the furnishing of such aid in the form of money payments to families with no other income, of $66.67 per month (in the case of a family with one member), $133.33 per month (in the case of a family with two members), $166.67 per month (in the case of a family with three members), and $200.00 per month (in the case of a family with four or more members), and (b) for a reduction in the amount of such aid payable to any such family for any month by an amount equal to any other income such family received for such month which would not have been disregarded under section 404(d), but such payment shall be made only if the State does not require its political subdivisions to provide financial participation in expenditures for aid under the plan in excess of the difference between such payment and such expenditures. In the case of any State which did not have in effect a State plan approved under title XIX for quarters in calendar year 1972, the amount described in clause (A) may, at the option of such State, be determined by application of the Federal medical assistance percentage (as defined in section 1905), instead of the percentages provided under paragraph (1) or (2) of section 403(a) (as such sections were in effect during calendar year 1972), to the expenditures under its State plan approved under part A of title IV (as such part was in effect during such calendar year) which would be included in determining the amount of the Federal payments to which such State is entitled under such section, but without regard to any maximum on the dollar amounts per recipient which may be counted under such section. Notwithstanding any other provisions of this section, the Federal payment under this paragraph shall be reduced by an amount equal to any expenditures made under the plan with respect to any dependent child as defined in section 411(a)(1)(A)(i), (I) for any part of the 30-day period referred to in subclause (I) of section 411(a)(2)(B)(i), or (II) for any period prior to the time when the father satisfies subclause (II) of such section, and (ii) if, and for as long as, no action is taken (after the 30-day period referred to in subclause (I) of subparagraph (B)(ii)), under the program therein specified, to certify such father to the Secretary of Labor pursuant to section 409.

"(B) As used in this paragraph—

"(i) the term 'Federal share', with respect to any State, means the amount determined for such State under subsection (a) (1) or (2) of section 403, section 1118, and section 9 of the Act of April 19, 1950, with respect to total expenditures as aid to families with dependent children (as defined in section 406(b)) under the plan of such State approved under this part (as the above referred to sections were in effect during the quarters for which such amount was determined), and

"(ii) the term 'State share', with respect to any State, means such total expenditures reduced by the Federal share with respect to such State.

"(2)(A) From the amounts appropriated therefor, the Secretary shall pay to each State (in addition to the amounts paid to such State under any other provision of this section) for each quarter an amount equal to the total amount by which payments of aid to families with dependent children under the State plan with respect to any family (when increased by the other income of the family taken into account after application of section 404(d)) exceed the adjusted payment level (as defined in subparagraph (B)) of such State, but not counting so much of any such payment when so increased as exceeds the sum of such adjusted payment level plus the bonus value of food stamps (as defined in subparagraph (C)).

"(B)(i) As used in this paragraph, the term 'adjusted payment level', in the case of any State, means the amount of the money payment which a family of a given size with no other income would have received under the State plan approved under this part for October 1972, increased by a payment level modification.

"(ii) As used in this subparagraph, the term 'payment level modification', in the case of any State, means that amount by which such State (which for October 1972 made money payments under its plan approved under this part to families with no other income which were less than 100 per centum of its standard of need) could have increased such money payments without increasing (if it reduced its standard of need under such plan so that such increased money payments equaled 100 per centum of such standard of need) the non-Federal share of expenditures for such money payments for October 1972 (as defined in subparagraph (D)).

"(C) As used in this paragraph, the term 'bonus value of food stamps' means—

"(i) the face value of the coupon allotment which would have been provided for October 1972 to a family of a given size under the Food Stamp Act of 1964, reduced by

"(ii) the charge which such family would have paid for such coupon allotment, if the income of such family for such month had been equal to the adjusted payment level. The face value of food stamps and the charge therefor in October 1972 shall be determined in accordance with rules prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture in effect for such month.

"(D) As used in this paragraph the term 'non-Federal share of expenditures for money payments for October 1972', in the case of any State, means—

"(i) total expenditures by such State for money payments for such month under its State plan approved under this part reduced by

"(ii) the amount determined for such State for such month under subsection (a) (1) or (2) of section 403, section 1118, and section 9 of the Act of April 19, 1950 (as such sections were in effect during such month).

"(3) In addition to the amounts paid pursuant to paragraphs (1) and (2) the Secretary shall, subject to section 1130, pay to each State an amount equal to the sum of the following proportions of the total amounts expended during each quarter, commencing with the quarter beginning January 1, 1973, as are found necessary by the Secretary for the proper and efficient administration of the plan (except that the Secretary shall exercise no authority with respect to the selection, tenure of office, and compensation of any individual employed in accordance with the methods of administration included in the State plan pursuant to section 402(d)(1))—

"(A) 100 per centum of so much of such expenditures as are for family planning services;

"(B) 90 per centum of so much of such expenditures as are for services (other than family planning services) which are provided pursuant to section 409(f);

"(C) 75 per centum of so much of such expenditures as are for—

"(i) the training of personnel employed or preparing for employment by the State agency or by the local agency administering the plan in the political subdivision, and

"(ii) emergency assistance provided pursuant to section 410(a)(2);

"(D) except as otherwise provided under the preceding subparagraphs, 75 per centum of so much of such expenditures as are for—

"(i) any services to families with dependent children which are provided pursuant to section 407 to any child or relative who is receiving aid under the plan, or to any other individual (living in the same home as such relative and child) whose needs are taken into account in making the determination under section 404(c),

"(ii) any such services which are provided to any child or relative who is applying for aid to families with dependent children or who, within such period or periods as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe, has been or is likely to become a recipient of such aid, and

"(E) one-half the remainder of such expenditures, including—

"(i) expenditures for emergency assistance to families other than families of migrant workers,

"(ii) expenditures by the State agency, or the local agency administering the plan in the political subdivision, or a State or local law enforcement agency, in connection with the prosecution of cases involving fraud related to the program operated pursuant to the State plan approved under this part, and

"(iii) services provided pursuant to section 406 (a)(3)(B).

Payment by the Secretary with respect to expenditures described in subparagraph (E)(ii) by agencies other than the State agency shall be made only to the extent that the State agency reimburses such local agencies by the amount of such payment. The services referred to in subparagraphs (A) and (D) shall include only—

"(F) services provided by the staff of the State agency, or of the local agency administering the State plan in the political subdivision: Provided, That no funds authorized under this part shall be available for services defined as vocational rehabilitation services under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act (i) which are available to individuals in need of them under programs for their rehabilitation carried on under a State plan approved under such Act, or (ii) which the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State Plan approved under such Act are able and willing to provide if reimbursed for the cost thereof pursuant to agreement under subparagraph (G), if provided by such staff, and

"(G) subject to limitations prescribed by the Secretary, services which in the judgment of the State agency cannot be as economically or as effectively provided by the staff of such State or local agency and are not otherwise reasonably available to individuals in need of them, and which are provided, pursuant to agreement with the State agency, by the State health authority or the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act or by any other State agency which the Secretary may determine to be appropriate (whether provided by its staff or by contract with public (local) or nonprofit private agencies); except that services described in subparagraph (F)(ii) hereof may be provided only pursuant to agreement with such State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services so approved; and except that, to the extent specified by the Secretary, services to families with dependent children may be provided from sources other than those referred to in each of subparagraphs (F) and (G). The portion of the amount expended for administration of the State plan to which each of subparagraphs (A) through (D) apply shall be determined in accordance with such methods and procedures as may be permitted by the Secretary.

"(b) The method of computing and paying such amounts shall be as follows:

"(1) The Secretary shall, prior to the beginning of each quarter, estimate the amount to be paid to the State for such quarter under the provisions of subsection (a), such estimate to be based on (A) one-quarter of the amount determined for such State (for the calendar year in which such quarter occurs) under paragraph (1) of such subsection, (B) a report filed by the State containing its estimate of the total sum to be expended in such quarter in accordance with the other provisions of such subsection and stating the amount appropriated or made available by the State and its political subdivisions for such expenditures in such quarters, and if such amount is less than the State's proportionate share of the total sum of such estimated expenditures, the source or sources from which the difference is expected to be derived, (C) records showing the number of dependent children in the State, and (D) such other investigation as the Secretary may find necessary.

"(2) The Secretary shall then certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the amount so estimated by the Secretary, (A) reduced or increased, as the case may be, by any sum by which the Secretary finds that his estimate for any prior quarter was greater or less than the amount which should have been paid to the State for such quarter, and (B) adjusted by a sum equivalent to the pro rata share to which the United States or such State is equitably entitled, as determined by the Secretary of the net amount recovered during any prior quarter by the State or any political subdivision thereof with respect to aid to families with dependent children furnished under the State plan or by the United States; except that such increases or reductions shall not be made to the extent that such sums have been applied to make the amount certified for any prior quarter greater or less than the amount estimated by the Secretary for such prior quarter.

"(3) The Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon, through the Fiscal Service of the Treasury Department and prior to audit or settlement by the General Accounting Office, pay to the State, at the time or times fixed by the Secretary, the amount so certified.

"(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Federal share of assistance payments under this part shall be reduced with respect to any State for each of the first two quarters of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1974, by one percentage point for each percentage by which the number of individuals certified, under the program of such State established pursuant to section 409(f), to the local employment office of the State as being ready for employment or training under part C, is less than 15 per centum of the average number of individuals in such State who, during such year, are required to be registered pursuant to section 409(a).

"(d) Of the sums authorized by section 401 to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973, not more than $750,000,000 shall be appropriated to the Secretary for payments with respect to services to which subsection (a)(3)(B) applies.

"(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of this part, the payment which would otherwise be made to a State pursuant to subsection (a)(1)(A) shall be reduced by 1 percentage point for each percentage in excess of 10 per centum by which the average monthly number of individuals (for months in the year for which such payment would be made (with respect to whom protective payments, as defined in section 406(b), are made exceeds the average monthly number of all individuals (for months in such year) receiving aid under the plan. In computing such 10 per centum, there shall not be taken into account individuals with respect to whom such payments are made for any month in accordance with section 406(a)(4) or 409(e).

"SUBPART 4—FEDERAL RESPONSIBILITY

"OPERATION OF STATE PLANS

"SEC. 413. (a) The Secretary shall approve any State plan which meets the requirements of this part.

"(b) In the case of any State plan for aid to families with dependent children which has been approved under this part, if the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of such plan, finds that in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with any provision required by this part to be included in the plan (other than clause (i) of such section 402 to the extent it prohibits the furnishing of aid to persons who have not resided in the State for 90 days), the Secretary shall notify such State agency that further payments shall not be made to the State (or, in his discretion, that payment will be limited to categories under or parts of the State plan not affected for such failure) until the Secretary is satisfied that there is no longer any such failure to comply. Until he is so satisfied he shall make no further payments to such State (or shall limit payments to categories under or parts of the State plan not affected by such failure).

"(c) No payment to which a State is otherwise entitled under this title, shall be withheld by reason of any action taken pursuant to a State statute which requires that aid be denied under the State plan approved under this part with respect to a child because of the conditions in the home in which the child resides if provision is otherwise made pursuant to a State statute for adequate care and assistance with respect to such child.

"RECOVERY OF OVERPAYMENTS OF AID TO FAMILIES WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN

"SEC. 414. (a) In any case in which a State agency has notified the Secretary that it cannot recover from members of a family overpayments of aid to families with dependent children to such family, the Secretary shall recover the amount of such overpayment from any amounts (other than lump-sum death benefits payable under section 202(i)) otherwise due a member of such family or becoming due such member from any officer or agency of the United States or under any Federal program. Any amounts recovered under the preceding sentence shall be credited to the State which made such overpayment."

"TRANSPORTATION ASSISTANCE

"SEC. 2056. (a) Whenever the Work Administration determines that a job opportunity is available in regular employment for a participant in guaranteed employment, but that such participant is prevented from taking advantage of such opportunity because the time required in commuting between his home and the worksite of such job is excessive in terms of the normal commuting time required for work in the labor market area, the Work Administration is authorized to make such arrangements as are necessary to assist in reducing the commuting time for such participant to the normal commuting time required for work in the labor market area.

"(b) The Work Administration, in providing any such transportation assistance to such participants shall (except in unusual circumstances where such assistance is necessary to provide job opportunities in regular employment for such participants) provide such assistance under arrangements whereby such participants, or the employer or other person on whose behalf such participants provide services, assume all of the costs of providing such assistance.

"PAYMENTS OF BENEFITS

"SEC. 2057. (a)(1) The Work Administration shall pay wage supplement benefits to individuals entitled thereto on a weekly basis.

"(2)(A) The Work Administration shall, whenever it determines that it is appropriate to do so, enter into an agreement with a State, or with an agency administering the unemployment compensation law of a State, under which the State agency shall—entitled to such aid) having the same family income and the same number of members as the number of family members in the family of such eligible family head. If the amount payable under the preceding sentence to any eligible family head for any month would cause the family total income (including such amount) of the family of which said family head is a member to exceed the amount of aid (in the form of money payments) under such State plan to a family (without other income or resources) of the same size as that of the family of such family head, then such amount shall be reduced (but not below zero) by an amount equal to the excess of the amount such income over the amount of such aid.

"FACTUAL DETERMINATIONS

"SEC. 2059. (a) Subject to subsection (b), the Work Administration shall make all factual determinations concerning any rights or claims of any individual to participate in or receive benefits under the employment and training program established by this title.

"(b)(1) Nothing contained in subsection (a) shall be construed to preclude the Work Administration from delegating to a State the duty and power to make determinations respecting entitlement to and amount of wage supplement benefits, if an agreement with such State has been entered into under section 2057 (relating to State administration of wage supplement benefits) and such agreement provides for the delegation of such duty and power to such State.

"(2) If any determination, concerning whether an individual has left employment without good cause or has been discharged for misconduct, has been made by a State agency administering a State law approved under section 3304 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to State unemployment compensation laws), the Work Administration shall adopt, as its own, such determination.

"(c) No individual shall be disqualified from participation in guaranteed employment because he has refused to accept new work under any of the following conditions:

"(A) if the position offered is vacant due directly to a strike, lockout, or other labor dispute,

The Board may (without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of title 5, United States Code, relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates) fix the compensation of personnel. The amount of the compensation payable to any employee shall be reasonably related to the compensation payable to State employees performing similar duties in the State in which such employee is employed by the Work Administration; except that, in no case shall the amount of the compensation payable to any employee be greater than that payable to Federal employees performing similar services. For purposes of the preceding sentence, personnel employed in the principal office of the Work Administration shall be deemed to be performing services in the District of Columbia (which shall be deemed to be a State for such purposes), and personnel performing services in more than one State shall be deemed to be employed in the State in which their principal office or place of work is located.

"PART D—CHILD SUPPORT AND ESTABLISHMENT OF PATERNITY

"APPROPRIATION

"SEC. 451. For the purposes of enforcing (1) the support obligations owed by absent parents to children receiving assistance under part A of this title, (2) the residual monetary obligation owed to the United States by absent parents, and (3) the criminal penalties for nonsupport against absent parents, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Attorney General for each fiscal year a sum sufficient to carry out the purposes of this part.

"SEC. 452. (a) The Attorney General shall enforce the support rights assigned to him under section 402(h) by applicants for and recipients of assistance under part A of this title, utilizing all funds and authority which are available to him for this purpose. To the extent required, he shall locate absent parents, determine paternity in order to establish duty to support, obtain support orders, collect support payments by use of voluntary agreements or other means, and enforce the residual monetary obligation owed the United States and the criminal provisions for nonsupport by such parents.

"(b)(1) The Attorney General shall, in accordance with procedures applicable to the recovery of obligations due the United States, including, where appropriate, the use of voluntary agreements, and in accordance with the priorities for distribution specified in section 455, collect and distribute amounts from enforcement of obligations under paragraph (2). If such search discloses the information requested, such individual shall immediately transmit such information to the Attorney General; and, if such search fails to disclose the information requested, such individual shall immediately so notify the Attorney General. The costs incurred by any such department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States or of any State in providing such information to the Attorney General shall be reimbursed by him. Whenever such services are furnished to an individual specified in subsection (c)(3), a fee shall be charged such individual. The fee so charged shall be deposited in the Fund and shall be used to reimburse the Attorney General or his delegate for the expense of providing such services.

"(f) The Attorney General, in carrying out his duties and functions under this section, shall enter into arrangements with State agencies administering or supervising the administration of State plans approved under part A of this title, under which the offices operated under such plans will accept from parents, guardians, or agents of a child described in subsection (c)(3) and transmit to the Attorney General requests for information with regard to the whereabouts of absent parents and will otherwise cooperate with the Attorney General in carrying out the purposes of this section.

"DELEGATION OF SUPPORT COLLECTION FUNCTIONS TO STATES OR POLITICAL SUBDIVISIONS

"SEC. 454. (a) The Attorney General shall delegate to any State having a plan approved under part A of this title the authority to recover the child support obligation assigned to the United States under section 402(h) if he determines that such State has an effective program (in accordance with the standards established in subsection (b)) for locating absent parents, determining paternity, obtaining support orders, and collecting amounts of money owed by parents for the support and maintenance of their child or children. Such a delegation may be made to a political subdivision of any such State upon a finding that the State as a whole does not have an effective program for locating absent parents, determining paternity, obtaining support orders, and collecting child support but that such political subdivision does have an effective program which meets the standards established in subsection (b).

"(b) The Attorney General shall not approve any program pursuant to subsection (a) unless such program provides—

"(1) for the development and implementation of a program under which such State or political subdivision will undertake—

"(A) in the case of a child born out of wedlock with respect to whom an assignment under section 402(h) of this title is effective, to establish the paternity of such child, and

"(B) in the case of any child with respect to whom such assignment is effective, to secure support for such child from his parent (or from any other person legally liable for such support), utilizing any reciprocal arrangements adopted with other States to obtain or enforce court orders for support, and

"(2) for the establishment of an organizational unit in the State or political subdivision administering the program under this section;

"(3) for entering into cooperative arrangements with appropriate courts and law enforcement officials (A) to assist the State or political subdivision administering the program under this section, including the entering into of financial arrangements with such courts and officials in order to assure optimum results under such program, and (B) with respect to any other matters of common concern to such courts or officials and the State or political subdivision administering the program under this section;

"(4) that the State or political subdivision will establish a service to locate absent parents utilizing—

"(A) all sources of information and available records; and

"(B) the Parent Locator Service in the Department of Justice;

"(5) that the State or political subdivision will, in accordance with standards prescribed by the Attorney General, cooperate with the State or political subdivision of another State or with the Attorney General in administering a program under this part—

"(A) in establishing paternity, if necessary,

"(B) in locating an absent parent residing in the State (whether or not permanently) against whom any action is being taken under this part in another State,

"(C) in securing compliance by an absent parent residing in such State (whether or not permanently) with a voluntary agreement or an order issued by a court of competent jurisdiction against such parent for the support and maintenance of a child or children of such parent with respect to whom aid is being provided under the plan of such other States, and

"(D) in carrying out other functions required by this part;

"(6) that the State or political subdivision may enter into voluntary agreements to recover child support obligations delegated under subsection (a), if there is no court order in effect directing payment of such obligation or if there is such an order in effect but there is no reasonable expectation that it can be enforced or that the obligation can be collected. Any voluntary agreement so made shall provide that support payments will not cease if the family ceases to receive assistance under part A of this title, and the amounts payable under such agreement, if there is no court order in effect, may be collected as authorized under the provisions of this part;

"(7) that the State or political subdivision require, as a condition of the absent parent being permitted to make support payments on a voluntary basis, the execution by such parent of an appropriate affidavit (which shall be recorded in the records of the court or other appropriate agency) in which such parent acknowledges the paternity of such child or children;

"(8) that, if the State uses voluntary agreements under paragraph (6), it will establish an administrative mechanism for enforcing such agreements;

"(9) that such State or political subdivision will comply with such other requirements as the Attorney General determines to be necessary to the establishment of an effective program for locating absent parents, determining paternity, obtaining support orders, and collecting support payments including, but not limited to, requiring a full record of collections and disbursements; and

"(10) that the State or political subdivision shall reimburse the Attorney General for the costs incurred by the Federal Government in enforcing and collecting support obligations assigned under this section.

"(c) The Attorney General shall, upon the request of any State or political subdivision to which he has delegated the authority to recover the child support obligation assigned to the United States under section 402(h), make available to such State or political subdivision (1) the services of attorneys participating in legal services programs who are, by reason of the agreement required by section 452(c), assisting the Attorney General in carrying out his functions under this part, and (2) upon a showing by the State or political subdivision that such State or political subdivision made diligent and reasonable efforts in utilizing their own collection mechanisms, the collection facilities of the Department of the Treasury (subject to the same requirements of certification by the Attorney General imposed by section 452(b) and subject to such limitations on the frequency of making such certification as may be imposed by the Attorney General).

"(d) From the sums appropriated therefor, the Attorney General shall pay to each State or political subdivision which has a program approved under this section, for each quarter, beginning with the quarter commencing January 1, 1973, an amount equal to 75 percent of the total amounts expended by such State or political subdivision during such quarter for the operation of the program approved under this section except as provided in sections 455(b)(2), 456, and 459.

"DISTRIBUTION OF PROCEEDS FROM SUPPORT COLLECTIONS

"SEC. 455. (a) Amounts collected as support obligations assigned under section 402(h) shall be distributed in the following order of priority—

"(1) If a State or its agent makes the collection, the proceeds of such collection shall be distributed, beginning with the first dollar, as follows—

"(A) the family shall be paid the larger of—

"(ii) an amount of such proceeds that is equal to the lesser of (I) the amount required by a court order to be paid for child support or (II) the amount agreed upon by the parties to a voluntary child support agreement, and any proceeds so paid that are in excess of the amount of the assistance payment otherwise payable shall be deemed to reduce the residual monetary obligation to the Federal Government by a like amount;

"(B) such amounts as may be necessary to reimburse the State for such State's share of assistance payments (with appropriate reimbursement of the political subdivision if it participated in the financing) made to the family prior to the date on which the support obligation was collected shall be paid to such State, and any amounts so paid shall be deemed to reduce the residual monetary obligation to the Federal Government by a like amount; and

"(C) such amounts as may be necessary to reduce or eliminate the residual monetary obligation to the Federal Government by the absent parent shall be paid to the Federal Government and deposited in the fund.

"(2) If a political subdivision or its agent makes the collection, the proceeds of such collection shall be distributed, beginning with the first dollar, as follows—

"(A) the family shall be paid the larger of—

"(ii) an amount of such proceeds that is equal to the lesser of (I) the amount required by a court order to be paid for child support or (II) the amount agreed upon by the parties to a voluntary child support agreement, and any proceeds so paid that are in excess of the amount of the assistance payment otherwise payable shall be deemed to reduce the residual monetary obligation to the Federal Government by a like amount;

"(B) such amounts as may be necessary to reimburse the political subdivision for its share of assistance payments made to the family prior to the date on which the support obligation was collected shall be paid to such political subdivision, and any amounts so paid shall be deemed to reduce the residual monetary obligation to the Federal Government by a like amount; and

"(C) such amounts as may be necessary to reduce or eliminate the residual monetary obligation to the Federal Government by the absent parent shall be paid to the Federal Government and deposited in the fund.

"(3) If the Attorney General makes the collection, the proceeds of such collection shall be distributed, beginning with the first dollar, as follows—

"(A) the family shall be paid the larger of—

"(ii) an amount of such proceeds that is equal to the lesser of (I) the amount required by a court order to be paid for child support or (II) the amount agreed upon by the parties to a voluntary child support agreement, and any proceeds so paid that are in excess of the amount of the assistance payment otherwise payable shall be deemed to reduce the residual monetary obligation to the Federal Government by a like amount; and

"(B) such amounts as may be necessary to reduce or eliminate the residual monetary obligation to the Federal Government by the absent parent shall be paid to the Federal Government and deposited in the fund.

Whenever payments are made pursuant to paragraph (2)(A) or (3)(A) to a family residing in a State which does not have an approved support program under this part, the Attorney General shall so certify to the Secretary, who shall reduce the amount of any grant made to such State under part A of this title by an amount equal to the amount so certified and deposit such amount into the Fund, except that such reduction shall not be greater than the amount of the assistance payment such family would have received from such State had the payment under paragraph (2)(A) or (3)(A) not been made.

"(b) Whenever a family for whom support payments have been collected and distributed under this part ceases to receive assistance under part A of this title, the Attorney General, or the State or political subdivision to which the Attorney General has delegated the authority to collect support obligations pursuant to this part, shall—

"(1) continue to collect such support payments from the absent parent for a period of three months from the month following the month in which such family ceased to receive assistance under part A of this title, and pay all amounts so collected to the family; and

"(2) at the end of such three-month period, if the Attorney General (A) is authorized to do so by the individual on whose behalf the collection will be made and (B) finds that the absent parent has not met his support obligation for the period of twenty-four consecutive months immediately preceding the end of such three-month period or throughout the term of such obligation, whichever is shorter, continue to collect such support payments from the absent parent until he has met his support obligation for a period of twenty-four consecutive months, and pay the net amount of any amount so collected to the family after deducting any costs incurred in making the collection from the amount of any recovery made.

"INCENTIVE PAYMENT TO LOCALITIES

"SEC. 456. When a political subdivision of a State makes the enforcement and collection of the support obligation assigned under section 402(h) (either within or outside of such State, and whether as the agent of such State or as the agent of the Attorney General), an amount equal to 25 percent of any amount collected and required to be distributed as provided in sections 455(a)(1) (A) and (B), or in sections 455(a)(2) (A) and (B), as appropriate, to reduce or eliminate assistance payments, shall be paid to such political subdivision by the State from amounts which the State would otherwise pay as assistance to the family of the absent parent under section 455(a)(1), or by the Attorney General (when he, or a political subdivision acting as his delegate, makes the collection) from the amounts required to be deducted, by the last sentence of section 455(a), from the grant made to such State.

"RESIDUAL MONETARY OBLIGATION TO THE UNITED STATES

"SEC. 457. There is hereby imposed on any absent parent whose child or children have received assistance payments under part A of this title a residual monetary obligation to the United States. Such obligation shall be in an amount that is equal to the total amounts of payments made to the family of an absent parent each month under the State plan approved under part A of this title, or, if less, 50 percent of the monthly income of the absent parent for each such month (but not less than $50 per month), except that during any month in which an absent parent is meeting his support obligations by paying the full amount of a court ordered support payment or the full amount of the support payment which he has agreed to pay according to the terms of a voluntary support agreement entered into between him and the Attorney General (or his delegate), whichever is larger, no obligation shall be imposed. Interest on any such amount shall accrue at the rate of 6 percent per annum, but the total amount of such obligation (including interest thereon) shall be reduced by the amount of any sums collected by a State or political subdivision which represent such State or political subdivision's share of assistance payments made under the State plan approved under part A of this title.

"REGIONAL LABORATORIES TO ESTABLISH PATERNITY THROUGH ANALYSIS AND CLASSIFICATION OF BLOOD

"SEC. 458. (a) The Secretary shall establish, or arrange for the establishment or designation, in each region of the United States, a laboratory which he determines to be qualified to provide services in analyzing and classifying blood for the purpose of determining paternity, and which is prepared to provide such services to courts and public agencies in the region to be served by it.

"(b) Whenever a laboratory is established or designated for any region by the Secretary under this section, he shall take such measures as may be appropriate to notify appropriate courts and public agencies (including agencies administering any public welfare program within such region) that such laboratory has been so established or designated to provide services, in analyzing and classifying blood for the purpose of determining paternity, for court and public agencies in such region.

"(c) The facilities of any such laboratory shall be made available without cost to courts and public agencies in the region to be served by it.

"(d) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"COLLECTION OF CHILD SUPPORT FOR PARTICIPANTS IN GUARANTEED EMPLOYMENT

"SEC. 459. Any individual who is participating in guaranteed employment under subpart 1 of part B of title XX of this Act shall be eligible to receive the child support collection or paternity determination services established under this part. Such services shall be made available to any such individual upon application filed while such individual is participating in guaranteed employment (in accordance with such procedures and containing such information as the Attorney General shall by regulation prescribe) with the Attorney General or, if a State or political subdivision has a program approved under section 455, with such State or political subdivision, as may be appropriate. Any costs incurred by the Attorney General (or by a State or political subdivision) in furnishing such services shall be paid by such individual by deducting such costs from the amount of any recovery made.

"CONSENT BY THE UNITED STATES TO GARNISHMENT AND SIMILAR PROCEEDINGS FOR ENFORCEMENT OF CHILD SUPPORT AND ALIMONY OBLIGATIONS

"SEC. 460. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, moneys (the entitlement to which is based upon remuneration for employment) due from, or payable by, the United States (including any agency or instrumentality thereof and any wholly owned Federal corporation) to any individual, including members of the armed services, shall be subject, in like manner and to the same extent as if the United States were a private person, to legal process brought for the enforcement, against such individual, of his legal obligations to provide child support or make alimony payments.

"PENALTY FOR NONSUPPORT

"SEC. 461. (a) Any individual who is the parent of any child or children and who is under a legal duty to provide for the support and maintenance of such child or children (as required under the law of the State where such child or children reside) but fails to perform such duty and has left, deserted, or abandoned such child or children and such child or children receive assistance payments to provide for their support and maintenance which are funded in whole or in part from funds appropriated therefor by the Federal Government shall, upon conviction, be penalized in an amount equal to 50 percent of the residual monetary obligation owed to the United States, or fined not more than $1,000, or imprisoned for not more than one year, or any combination of these three penalties.

"(b) This section does not preempt any State law imposing a civil or criminal penalty on an absent parent for failing to provide support and maintenance to his child or children to whom such parent owes a duty to support."

PART D—CHILD CARE AND CHILD WELFARE SERVICES

SEC. 431. (a) The Social Security Act is amended by adding after title XX thereof (as added by section 420 of this Act) the following new title:

"TITLE XXI—CHILD CARE

"FINDINGS AND DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

"SEC. 2101. (a) The Congress finds and declares that—

"(1) the present lack of adequate child care services is detrimental to the welfare of families and children in that it limits opportunities of parents for employment or self-improvement, and often results in inadequate care arrangements for children whose parents are unable to find appropriate care for them;

"(2) low-income families and dependent families are severely handicapped in their efforts to attain or maintain economic independence by the unavailability of adequate child care services;

"(3) many other families, especially those in which the mother is employed, have need for child care services, either on a regular basis or from time to time; and

"(4) there is presently no single agency or organization, public or private, which is carrying out the responsibility of meeting the Nation's needs for adequate child care services.

"(b) It is therefore the purpose of this title to promote the availability of adequate child care services throughout the Nation by providing for the establishment of a Bureau of Child Care which shall have the responsibility and authority to meet the Nation's unmet needs for adequate child care services, and which, in meeting such needs, will give special consideration to the needs for such services by families in which the mother is employed or preparing for employment, and will promote the well-being of all children by assuring that the child care services provided will be appropriate to the particular needs of the children receiving such services.

"ESTABLISHMENT AND ORGANIZATION OF BUREAU OF CHILD CARE

"SEC. 2102. (a) In order to carry out the purposes of this title, there is hereby established as a division of the Work Administration (established under title XX of this Act) a Bureau of Child Care (hereinafter in this title referred to as the 'Bureau').

"(b)(1) The powers and duties of the Bureau shall be vested in a Director who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

"(2) The Director shall have the power to appoint (without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service) such personnel as he deems necessary to enable the Bureau to carry out its functions under this title. All personnel shall be appointed solely on the ground of their fitness to perform their duties and without regard to political affiliation, sex, race, creed, or color. The Director may (without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of title 5, United States Code, relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates) fix the compensation of personnel. The amount of the compensation payable to any employee shall be reasonably related to the compensation payable to State employees performing similar duties in the State in which such employee is employed by the Bureau; except that, in no case shall the amount of the compensation payable to any employee be greater than that payable to Federal employees performing similar services. For purposes of the preceding sentence, personnel employed in the principal office of the Bureau shall be deemed to be performing services in the District of Columbia (which shall be deemed to be a State for such purposes), and personnel performing services in more than one State shall be deemed to be employed in the State in which their principal office or place of work is located.

"(3) The Director is authorized to obtain the services of experts and consultants on a temporary or intermittent basis in accordance with the provisions of section 3109 of title 5, United States Code, but at rates for individuals not to exceed the per diem equivalent of the rate authorized for GS–18 by section 5332 of such title.

"(4) The Director shall establish, within the Bureau, an Office of Program Evaluation and Auditing the functions of which shall be to assure that standards established under this title with respect to child care services and facilities providing such services will be met, and that funds of or under the control of the Bureau will be properly used. The Director shall utilize such Office to carry out the duties (relating to evaluation of facilities) imposed upon him under section 2104(c)(2).

"DUTIES AND POWERS

"SEC. 2103. (a) It shall be the duty and function of the Bureau to meet the needs of the Work Administration for child care services and, to the maximum extent economically feasible, the needs of the Nation for child care services.

"(b)(1) In carrying out such duty and function, the Bureau shall, through utilization of existing facilities for child care and otherwise, provide (or arrange for the provision of) child care services in the various communities of each State. Such child care services shall include the various types of care included in the term 'child care services' (as defined in section 2118(b)) to the extent that the needs of the various communities may require.

"(2) The Bureau shall charge and collect a reasonable fee for the child care services provided by it (whether directly or through arrangements with others). The fee so charged for any particular type of child care services provided in any facility shall be uniform for all children receiving such types of services in such facility. Any such fee so charged may be paid in whole or in part by any person (including the Bu- reau, as provided in subsection (e), or any other public agency) which agrees to pay such fee or a part thereof.

"(3) The Bureau shall not enter into any arrangement with any person under which the facilities or services of such person will be utilized by the Bureau to provide child care services unless such person agrees (A) to accept any child referred to such person by the Bureau for child care services on the same basis and under the same conditions as other children applying for such services, and (B) to accept payment of all or any part of the fee imposed for such services from any public agency which shall agree to pay such fee or a part thereof from Federal funds.

"(c) In providing child care services in the various communities of the Nation, the Bureau shall accord first priority (1) to the needs for child care services of families on behalf of whom child care services will be paid in whole or in part from funds appropriated to carry out title XX and section 2109 of this title and who are in need of such services to enable a member thereof to accept or continue in employment or participate in training to prepare such member for employment, and (2) to arranging for care in facilities providing hours of child care sufficient to meet the child care needs of children whose mothers are employed full time.

"(d) In providing for child care services the Bureau shall first place children in facilities which receive funds from sources other than funds made available under this title including, if the parents of such children agree, child development programs.

"(e)(1) From the sums available to carry out the provisions of this title for each fiscal year, the Bureau is authorized to assist low-income families in meeting the costs of child care services where such services are necessary to enable an adult member of such family to engage in employment.

"(2) The amount of the subsidy provided to any family under this subsection shall be determined in accordance with a schedule established by the Director, after taking into account the number of families needing such assistance, the amount of assistance needed by such families, and the amount of the funds available for the provision of such assistance. Such schedule shall (A) provide that the amount of subsidy payable to any family shall be equal to a per centum of the costs incurred by such family for the child care services with respect to which such subsidy is paid, (B) be related to ability of such family to pay the costs of such services (as determined by family size and income), and (C) be designed to assure that the amount of the subsidy payable to any family is not greater than the minimum amount necessary to enable such family to secure such services.

"(f) In carrying out its duties and functions under this title, the Bureau shall have, in addition to the powers it has as a division of the Work Administration, power—

"(1) to acquire (by purchase, gift, devise, lease, or sublease), and to accept jurisdiction over and to hold and own, and dispose of by sale, lease, or sublease, real or personal property, including but not limited to a facility for child care, or any interest therein for its purposes;

"(2) to operate, manage, superintend, and control any facility for child care under its jurisdiction and to repair, maintain, and otherwise keep up any such facility; and to establish and collect fees, rentals, or other charges for the use of such facility or the receipt of child care services provided therein;

"(3) to provide child care services for the public directly or by agreement or lease with any person, agency, or organization, and to make rules and regulations concerning the handling of referrals and applications for the admission of children to receive such services; and to establish and collect fees and other charges, including reimbursement allowances, for the provision of child care services: Provided, That, in determining how its funds shall be used for the provision of child care services within a community, the Bureau shall take into account any comprehensive planning for child care which has been done, and shall generally restrict its direct operation of programs to situations in which public or private agencies are unable to develop adequate child care;

"(4) to provide advice and technical assistance to persons desiring to enter into an agreement with the Bureau for the provision of child care services to assist them in developing their capabilities to provide such services under such an agreement;

"(5) to prepare, or cause to be prepared, plans, specifications, designs, and estimates of costs for the construction and equipment of facilities for child care services in which the Bureau provides child care directly;

"(6) to construct and equip, or by contract cause to be constructed and equipped, facilities (other than home child care facilities) for child care services: Provided, That the Bureau shall take into account any comprehensive planning for child care that has been done;

"(7) to train persons for employment in providing child care services, with particular emphasis on training participants in the employment program under title XX;

"(8) to procure insurance, or obtain indemnification, against any loss in connection with the assets of the Bureau or any liability in connection with the activities of the Bureau, such insurance or indemnification to be procured or obtained in such amounts, and from such sources, as the Board deems to be appropriate;

"(9) to cooperate with any organization, public or private, the objectives of which are similar to the purposes of this title; and

"(10) to do any and all things necessary, convenient, or desirable to carry out the purposes of this title, and for the exercise of the powers conferred upon the Bureau in this title.

"STANDARDS FOR CHILD CARE

"SEC. 2104. (a) In order to assure that adequate standards of staffing, health, sanitation, safety, and fire protection are met, the Bureau shall not provide or arrange for the provision of child care of any type or in any facility unless the applicable requirements set forth in the succeeding provisions of this section are met with respect to such care and the facility in which such care is offered.

"(b)(1) The ratio of the number of children receiving child care to the number of qualified staff members directly engaged in providing such care (whether as teachers' aids or in another capacity) shall be such as the Director may determine to be appropriate for the type of child care provided and the age of the children involved, but in no case shall the Director require a ratio of less than—

"(A) eight to one, in case such care is provided in a home child care facility; or

"(B) ten to one, in case such care is provided in a day nursery facility, nursery school, child development center, play group facility, or preschool child care center. For purposes of applying the ratios set forth in clauses (A) and (B) of the preceding sentence, any child under age three shall be considered as two children.

"(2) In the case of any facility (other than a facility to which paragraph (1) is applicable) the ratio of the number of children receiving child care therein to the number of qualified staff members providing such care shall not be greater than such ratio as the Director may determine to be appropriate to the type of child care provided and the age of the children involved, except that such ratio shall not be greater than twenty-five to one.

"(3) As used in this subsection, the term 'qualified staff member' means an individual who has received training in, or demonstrated ability in, the care of children.

"(c)(1) Any facility in which the Bureau provides child care (whether directly or through arrangements with others) must—

"(A)(i) in the case of facilities that are not homes, meet such provisions of the Life Safety Code of the National Fire Protection Association (twenty-first edition, 1967) as are applicable to the type of facility; except that the Bureau may waive for such periods as it deems appropriate, specific provisions of such code which, if rigidly applied, would result in unreasonable hardship upon the facility, but only if the Bureau makes a determination (and keeps a written record setting forth the basis of such determination) that such waiver will not adversely affect the health and safety of the children receiving care in such facility and (ii) in the case of facilities that are homes, meet requirements adopted by the local area (or a comparable area, if none have been adopted for the local area) for application to general residential occupancy;

"(B) contain (or have available to it for use) adequate indoor and outdoor space for children for the number and ages of the children served by such facility; have separate rooms or areas for cooking, and have separate rooms for toilets;

"(C) have floors and walls of a type which can be cleaned and maintained and which contain or are covered with no substance which is hazardous to the health or clothing of children;

"(D) have such ventilation and temperature control facilities as may be necessary to assure the safety and reasonable comfort of each child receiving care therein;

"(E) provide safe and comfortable facilities for the variety or activities children engage in while receiving care therein;

"(F) provide special arrangements or accommodations, for children who become ill, which are designed to provide rest and quiet for ill children while protecting other children from the risk of infection or contagion; and

"(G) make available to childen receiving care therein such toys, games, books, equipment, and other material as are appropriate to the type of facility involved and the ages of the children receiving care therein.

"(2) The Director, in determining whether any particular facility meets minimum requirements imposed by paragraph (1) of this subsection, shall evaluate, not less often than once each year, on the basis of inspections made by personnel employed by the Bureau or by others through arrangements with the Bureau, such facility separately and shall make a determination with respect to such facility after taking into account the location and type of care provided by such facility as well as the age group served by it.

"(d) The Bureau shall not provide (directly or through arrangements with other persons) child care in a child care facility or home child care facility unless—

"(1) such facility requires that, in order to receive child care provided by such facility, a child must have been determined by a physician (after a physical examination) to be in good health and must have been immunized against such diseases and within such prior period as the Director may prescribe in order adequately to protect the children receiving care in such facility from communicable disease (except that no child seeking to enter or receiving care in such a facility shall be required to undergo any medical examination, immunization, or physical evaluation or treatment (except to the extent necessary to protect the public from epidemics of contagious diseases, if his parent or guardian objects thereto in writing on religious grounds);

"(2) such facility provides for the daily evaluation of each child receiving care therein for indications of illness;

"(3) such facility provides adequate and nutritious (though not necessarily hot) meals and snacks, which are prepared in a safe and sanitary manner;

"(4) such facility has in effect procedures designed to assure that each staff member thereof is fully advised of the hazards to children of infection and accidents and is instructed with respect to measures designed to avoid or reduce the incidence or severity of such hazards;

"(5) such facility has in effect procedures under which the staff members of such facility (including voluntary and part-time staff members) are required to undergo, prior to their initial employment and periodically thereafter, medical assessments of their physical and mental competence to provide child care;

(A) the adjusted payment level under the appropriate approved plan of such State as in effect for January 1971 (as defined in subsection (b) of this section), and

(B) the benefits under title XX or XXI of the Social Security Act, plus income not excluded under section 2012(b) or 2153(b) of such Act in determining such benefits, paid to such individual or family in such fiscal year, and shall not apply with respect to supplementary payments to any individual or family who (i) is not required by section 2016 or 2156 of such Act to be included in any such agreement administered by the Secretary and (ii) would have been ineligible (for reasons other than income) for payments under the appropriate approved State plan as in effect for January 1971.

a State as in effect for January 1971" means the amount of the money payment which an individual or family (of a given size) with no other income would have received under the plan of such State approved under title I, X, XIV, or XVI, or part A of title IV, of the Social Security Act, as may be appropriate, and in effect for January 1971; except that the State may, at its option, increase such payment level with respect to any such plan by an amount which does not exceed the sum of—ters in calendar year 1971 under the plans of such State approved under titles I, X, XIV, and XVI, and part A of title IV, of the Social Security Act.

(3) For purposes of paragraph (1), the term "bonus value of food stamps in a State for January 1971" (with respect to an individual or a family of a given size) means—

(A) the face value of the coupon allotment which would have been provided to such an individual or family under the Food Stamp Act of 1964 for January 1971, reduced by

(B) the charge which such an individual or family would have paid for such coupon allotment, if the income of such individual or family, for purposes of determining the charge it would have paid for its coupon allotment, had been equal to the adjusted payment level under the State plan (including any payment level modification with respect to the plan adopted pursuant to paragraph (2) (but not including any amount under this paragraph)). SEC. 512. Title XI of the Social Security Act (as amended by sections 221(a), 241, 505, 526, and 542(10) of this Act) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"AUTHORIZATION AND ALLOTMENT OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR SERVICES

"SEC. 1125. (a) There are authorized to be appropriated, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973, and for each fiscal year thereafter, for payments to States under sections 403 and 1603 with respect to expenditures for training of personnel, services to the aged, blind, or disabled, and services for any individual receiving assistance to needy families with children, such sums as may be necessary; except that the amount so appropriated for payments with respect to expenditures other than expenditures for the services described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 405(d) shall not exceed $800,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973, or such sum as the Congress may specify for any fiscal year thereafter.

"(b) From the sums appropriated pursuant to subsection (a) for any fiscal year—

"(1) the Secretary shall allot to each State an amount which bears the same ratio to the amount so appropriated as the Federal share of expenditures in such State in the preceding fiscal year (exclusive of amounts reallotted to such State for such preceding fiscal year under subsection (c)) for services under titles I, X, XIV, and XVI, and part A of title IV (other than for child care and family planning services under such part), and for training under such titles and such part, bears to the total such Federal share in all the States, but in no case shall such amount with respect to any State for any fiscal year exceed the Federal share of such expenditures in such State in the preceding fiscal year (exclusive of any amounts reallotted to such State for such preceding fiscal year under subsection (c));

"(2) after the allotment pursuant to paragraph (1) has been made, from the sums remaining (if any) not in excess of $50,000,000, the Secretary shall allot to each State which has a service deficit (as defined in the last sentence of this subsection) an amount which bears the same ratio to such sums remaining as such deficit bears to the total of the service deficits of all the States having such deficits; and

"(3) after the allotment pursuant to paragraph (2) has been made, from the sums remaining (if any), the Secretary shall allot to each State an amount which bears the same ratio to such sums remaining as the number of individuals receiving benefits under sections 2011 and 2102 in such State bears to the number of such individuals in all the States.

As used in paragraph (2), the term 'service deficit', with respect to any State, means the amount by which (i) the average service expenditure (as defined in subsection (d)) per recipient of benefits under sections 2011 and 2102 in such State is less than (ii) the average of the expenditures for training and services under titles I, X, XIV, and XVI and part A of title IV in all the States (other than child care and family planning services under such part) multiplied by the number of recipients of such benefits in such State.

"(c) The amount of any allotment pursuant to subsection (b) for any fiscal year which the Secretary determines will not be required for providing training and services described in subsection (a) under part A of title IV or under title XVI, shall be available for reallotment, for the same purposes for which it was originally made available, from time to time, on such dates as the Secretary may fix, to other States which the Secretary determines have need in providing such training and services of amounts in excess of those previously allotted to them under subsection (b), giving particular consideration to the needs of States for reallotments to prevent reduction or termination of any such services or training which are being provided.

"(d) For purposes of subsection (b)(2), the term 'average service expenditure' with respect to a State for any fiscal year means the amount obtained by dividing (1) the Federal share of expenditures in such State in the preceding fiscal year (exclusive of amounts realloted to such State for such preceding fiscal year under subsection (c)) for training and services under titles I, X, XIV, and XVI, and part A of title IV (other than child care and family planning services under such part), by (2) the number of individuals in the State receiving benefits under sections 2011 and 2102."

"(b) In the case of any State which is eligible for payments under section 422, the Secretary shall, from the amounts allotted therefor, make payments to such State in an amount equal to 75 per centum of any expenditures for adoption services or foster care services.

ADDITIONAL REMEDIES FOR STATE NONCOMPLIANCE

SEC. 521. (a) Section 1116 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(c) In any case in which the Secretary determines that a State has failed in a substantial number of cases—

"(1) to make payments as required by title I, X, XIV, XVI, or XIX or part A of title IV, or

"(2) to make payments in the amount prescribed under the appropriate State plan (which complies with the conditions for approval under such title or part), he may require the State to make retroactive payment to all persons affected by such failure in order to assure, to the maximum extent possible, that with respect to each such person the sum of the aid or assistance actually received during the period in which such failure occurred plus such retroactive payments are equal to the amount of aid or assistance he would have received for such period had such failure not occurred, but such payments shall not be required with respect to any period prior to the date of the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1971. Expenditures for such retroactive payments shall be considered to have been made under the State plan approved under such title or part for purposes of determining the amount of the Federal payment with respect to such plan. In any case in which the Secretary does add such a requirement for retroactive payments pursuant to the preceding provisions of this subsection, the State shall disregard the amount of such retroactive payments for purposes of determining the amount of aid or assistance payable to such persons after such failure has been corrected. The Secretary may prescribe such methods of administration as he finds necessary to carry out a requirement for retroactive payments imposed under this subsection and such requirement and methods shall be deemed necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan under which such failure occurred.

"(f) In any case in which the Secretary has found, in accordance with the procedures of title I, X, XIV, XVI, or XIX, or part A of title IV, that in the administration of the State plan approved under such title or part there is a failure to comply substantially with any provision which is required by such title or part to be included in such plan, the Secretary may prescribe such methods of administration as he finds appropriate to correct such administrative noncompliance within a reasonable period of time and, upon obtaining assurances satisfactory to him that such methods will be undertaken (including a timetable for implementation of such methods which specifies a date by which there will no longer exist such administrative noncompliance), he may, instead of withholding payments under the title or part with respect to which such failure occurred, continue to make payments (in accordance with such title or part) to such State with respect to expenditures under such plan (for so long as he remains satisfied that the timetable is being substantially followed).

"(g) If the Secretary has reason to believe that a State plan which he has approved under title I, X, XIV, XVI, or XIX, or part A of title IV, no longer complies with all requirements of such title or part, or that in the administration of such plan there is a failure to comply substantially with any such requirements, the Secretary may (in addition to or instead of withholding payments under such title or part) request the Attorney General to bring suit to enforce such requirements."

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

Read twice and referred to the Committee on Finance

SEPTEMBER 26 (legislative day, SEPTEMBER 25), 1972
Reported with amendments

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1972

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to consider H.R. 1, which will be stated by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1) to amend the Social Security Act, to make improvements in the Medicare and Medicaid programs, to replace the existing Federal-State Public Assistance programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, H.R. 1, as reported by the Committee on Finance, represents the most massive revision of the social security laws that the Congress has ever undertaken. The bill as reported would increase Federal expenditures by more than $14 billion. This is in addition to the $8 billion across-the-board social security benefit increase enacted into law July 1 of this year. The size of the bill, some 1,000 pages and the size of the report, about 1,300 pages, give an indication of the amount of work that has gone into this bill. I believe that the committee's efforts on this bill are the equal of the legislative efforts of any committee at any time in U.S. history. During this Congress, the committee has held 20 days of public hearings on all aspects of social security and welfare, hearings which fill 3,700 pages of seven volumes. The committee has met in executive session almost continually since February of this year, with 69 executive sessions devoted to H.R. 1.

At this point, Mr. President, I might note that a copy of the committee report and a copy of the bill have not yet been placed on each Senator's desk. A copy of each will be placed on the desk of each Senator as soon as they are available from the printer. The delay has been caused by the large volume of work involved.

The bill is monumental in terms of legislative effort, and it is monumental in terms of cost. In addition to the $8 billion of social security benefits enacted earlier this year, H.R. 1 as reported by the Committee on Finance would raise social security cash benefits another $3½ billion. It is estimated that at least 10 million social security beneficiaries will be affected by these provisions of the committee bill, and another 900,000 persons will become entitled to benefits thanks to the bill.

Medicare benefits would rise $3 billion by 1974, due principally to extension of medicare coverage to the disabled and to the inclusion of payment for lifesaving drugs among the benefits provided under the program, 22 million medicare beneficiaries, including 2 million disabled persons, would benefit by the improved protection.

It is estimated that more than 5 million aged, blind, and disabled persons would receive supplementary security income under the bill, which would set a Federal minimum guaranteed income at an added cost of $3 billion in 1974.

But perhaps the most significant features of the bill are those seeking to reform the program of aid to families with dependent children. The committee bill offers a bold new approach to the problem of increasing dependency under this program. Under the committee bill, if the family is headed by a father or if it is headed by a mother whose youngest child has reached school age, the family would not be eligible to receive its basic income from welfare but instead would be given an opportunity to become independent through employment, including a guaranteed job and substantial economic incentives to move into regular jobs. The cost of this new guaranteed job program would be borne entirely by the Federal Government, and its cost together with the substantial increase in Federal funds for the remaining AFDC program would amount to an estimated increase of more than $4 billion, in Federal expenditures in 1974, with more than half of this amount—over $2 billion—representing increased income to low-income working families.

AIMS OF COMMITTEE BILL

When a bill is as complicated as H.R. 1 and deals with so many complicated issues affecting as many programs as H.R. 1 does, it is difficult to characterize its aims in just a few categories. But most of the committee's actions on the bill do fit within these few broad purposes:

First. To reward work effort for those who can be expected to work;

Second. To improve the lives of children;

Third. To assist those who cannot work because of age, blindness, or disability;

Fourth. To assure program integrity through administrative control where this has been shown to be needed; and Fifth. To provide fiscal relief to the States and to give them more latitude to run their own programs.

REWARDING WORK EFFORT FOR THOSE WHO CAN WORK

When people look at the rapid growth in welfare in recent years, their concern is primarily with the program of aid to families with dependent children. The number of recipients under this program has more than doubled since January 1968, and the need to pay for AFDC has forced States to shift funds into welfare that would otherwise go for education, health, and housing and other pressing social needs.

The rising AFDC rolls show that there are many children who are needy in this country. But more importantly from the standpoint of social policy, the rising rolls show an alarming increase in dependency on the taxpayer. The proportion of children in this country who are receiving AFDC has risen sharply, from 3 percent in the midfifties to 9 percent today. This means that an increasing number of families are becoming dependent on welfare and staying dependent on welfare.

A major cause of the growth of AFDC is increasing family breakup and increasing failure to form families in the first place. Births out of wedlock, particularly to teenage mothers, have increased sharply in the past decade.

Several generations ago, before there was any AFDC program, poor families improved their economic conditions by taking advantage of this country's opportunities through a commitment to work, and through the strengthening and maintenance of family ties. The social compassion that gave rise to the AFDC program—particularly in those States in which benefit levels are highest—appears to have had the effect of undermining these routes to economic betterment, with dismal consequences, particularly for the poor on welfare themselves. The House bill, with the major expansion of welfare it contemplates, would move a giant step further along a road that has proven so unsuccessful up to now.

But another approach is possible to improving the lives of low-income families. As President Nixon has stated:

In the final analysis, we cannot talk our way out of poverty; we cannot legislate our way out of poverty; but this Nation can work its way out of poverty. What America needs now is not more welfare, but more "workfare" a new work-rewarding program.

The committee agrees with the President that work should be rewarded and its value to the worker increased. Under the committee bill, over $2 billion in additional income would be paid to low-income working persons in 1974. A number of other provisions are included in the committee bill which reflect the committee's aim of increasing the benefits of working.

TEN PERCENT WORK BONUS

Low-income workers in regular employment who head families would be eligible for a work bonus equal to 10 percent of their wages taxed under the social security—or railroad retirement—program if the annual income of the husband and wife is $4,000 or less. For families where the husband's and wife's annual income exceeds $4,000, the work bonus would be equal to $400 minus one-fourth of the amount by which their income exceeds $4,000. The work bonus, administered by the Internal Revenue Service, would cost about $1 billion in 1974, and would provide work bonus payments to about 5 million families.

WAGE SUPPLEMENT

Persons in jobs not covered by the Federal minimum wage law, in which the employer paid less than $2 per hour but at least $1.50 per hour, would be eligible for a wage supplement. Any employee who is the head of a household with children and who is working in one of these jobs would be eligible for a wage supplement equal to three-quarters of the difference between what the employer pays him and $2 per hour—for up to 40 hours a week. Thus if an employer pays a wage of $1.50 an hour, the Federal subsidy would amount to 38 cents an hour, three-quarters of the 50-cent difference between $1.50 and $2. In addition, the 15-cent work bonus the employee receives would bring the value of working 1 hour from the $1.50 presently paid by the employer up to $2.03. No supplement would be paid if the employer reduced the pay for the job; no jobs presently paying the minimum wage would be downgraded under the committee bill, and the minimum wage law itself would not be affected.

GUARANTEED JOB OPPORTUNITY

Since welfare programs are based on need as measured by income, decreased work effort results in a higher welfare benefit. This is not the case under the work bonus or the wage supplement under the committee bill, which are directly related to work effort. Similarly, the third basic feature of the committee's employment program rewards work efforts directly. This third element is the provision of a guaranteed job opportunity for persons not able to find employment in a regular job. Persons considered to be employable—able-bodied male heads of families, as well as mothers with school-age children only—would no longer be eligible to receive their basic income under the welfare system that has failed both them and society, but instead would be guaranteed an opportunity to earn $2,400 a year. An individual could work up to 32 hours a week at $1.50 per hour and would be paid on the basis of hours worked. A woman with school-age children would not be required to be away from home during hours that the children are not in school, unless child care is provided. She may be asked, however, in order to earn her wage, to provide afterschool care to children other than her own during the hours she is at home.

Unlike the present welfare program and the House-passed bill, the committee bill would not penalize participants for outside employment. An individual who is able to find part-time employment in addition to hours worked in the guaranteed job will be able to keep 100 percent of his or her earnings with no reduction in the wages earned in the guaranteed job.

STATE SUPPLEMENTATION

To assure that the work incentives proposed under the committee bill are not undermined by State welfare programs, the committee bill would require States with welfare benefits of more than $200 monthly to supplement wages earned by families headed by women participating in the employment program. Furthermore, in determining the amount of the supplementary payment, the State would not be permitted to reduce the payment on account of any earnings between $200 a month and $375 a month—the amount an employee would earn, including the work bonus, working 40 hours a week at $2 an hour—to insure that the incentive system of the committee bill is preserved.

FOOD STAMPS

Individuals participating in the employment program would not be eligible to participate in the food stamp program. However, States would be reimbursed the full cost of adjusting any supplementary benefits they might decide to give to participants so as to make up for the loss of food stamp eligibility. In order to avoid having States provide assistance to an entirely new category of recipient not now eligible for federally shared aid to families with dependent children, the committee provided that the Work Administration, which administers the guaranteed job program, would pay families headed by an able-bodied father the amount equal to the value of food stamps, but only to the extent that the State provides cash instead of food stamps for families which are now in the aid to families with dependent children category.

CHILD CARE

Lack of availability of adequate child care represents perhaps the greatest single obstacle in the efforts of poor families, especially those headed by a mother, to work their way out of poverty. It also represents a hindrance to other mothers in families above the poverty line who wish to seek employment for their own self-fulfillment or for the improvement of their family's economic status. The committee bill incorporates a new approach to the problem of expanding the supply of child care services and improving the quality of these services through the establishment of a Bureau of Child Care within the Work Administration. In addition to arranging to make child care available, the committee bill would authorize appropriations to subsidize the cost of child care for low-income working mothers.

OTHER SUPPORTIVE SERVICES

Services needed to continue in employment, including family planning services, would be provided participants in the employment program by the Work Administration.

MEDICAL CARE

Under the committee bill, families participating in the employment program who would be eligible for medicaid except for their earnings from employment would remain eligible for medicaid for 1 year. At that time they could choose to continue their medicaid coverage by paying a premium equal to 20 percent of their income—excluding work bonus payments—in excess of $2,400 annually. Families participating in the employment program who would be ineligible in any case for medicaid could also voluntarily elect to receive medicaid benefits by paying a premium equal to 20 percent of their income—including work bonus payments—above $2,400. The committee bill includes an estimated $200 million in additional Federal payments representing the difference between the value of health care received by these working persons and the cost of the premiums they would actually pay.

TRANSPORTATION ASSISTANCE

The committee recognizes that a major reason for jobs going unfilled in metropolitan areas is the difficulty individuals face in getting to the job. The committee bill would authorize the Work Administration to arrange for transportation assistance where this is necessary to place its employees in regular jobs.

DEVELOPING JOBS

In order to develop job opportunities in the private sector, the committee bill would extend—in a modified form—the present tax credit, for employers who hire participants in the work incentive program, to employers who hire persons in guaranteed employment. In order to create additional employment opportunities, the committee bill would extend the credit to private persons hiring participants.

SPECIAL MINIMUM BENEFIT FOR LONG-TERM WORKERS UNDER SOCIAL SECURITY

For longtime low-income workers, the committee bill contains a provision guaranteeing a minimum social security benefit equal to $10 per year for each year in covered employment in excess of 10 years. Thus, a worker with 30 years of covered employment would be assured of a social security benefit of at least $200 a month; the minimum payment to a couple would be $300 a month. A worker retiring in 1972 who has worked all his life at the Federal minimum wage applicable during his employment would be eligible for a monthly benefit of about $160 today. Under the committee bill, his benefit would be increased 25 percent to $200, well above the poverty level. Thus, the committee bill would achieve the original aim of the Social Security Act of 1935, to provide regular long-term workers with an income that would free them from dependency on welfare. Under this provision of the committee bill, an estimated 700,000 persons would get increased benefits beginning next January, and $152 million in additional benefits would be paid in the first full year.

INCREASE IN THE EARNINGS LIMIT

Under the committee bill, the amount that a social security beneficiary under age 72 may earn in a year and still be paid full social security benefits for the year would be increased from the present $1,680 to $2,400. For each $2 of earnings above $2,400, benefits would be reduced by $1. An estimated 1.2 million beneficiaries would receive higher benefit payments under this provision, and 550,000 persons would become entitled to benefits for the first time. About $1.1 billion in additional benefits would be paid in 1974.

INCREASED BENEFITS FOR DELAYED RETIREMENT

The House bill provides for an increase in social security benefits of 1 percent for each year after age 65 that an individual fails to receive social security benefits because he continues to work instead of retiring. The House bill would apply only to persons beginning to receive social security after the enactment of H.R. 1. The committee felt that the principle of increasing benefits for delayed retirement should apply as well to persons already receiving social security. Under the committee bill, 5 million persons would get increased benefits totaling about $200 million in the first year.

INCOME DISREGARD FOR LOW-INCOME AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED PERSONS

Under present law, each dollar of social security benefits received generally reduces welfare payments by $1. The committee felt that persons receiving social security should receive an economic benefit for the taxes that they paid when they worked to earn entitlement to social security benefits. Accordingly, under the new supplemental security income program in the committee bill, aged, blind, and disabled persons who receive social security would be assured a minimum monthly income of at least $180 for an individual and $245 for a couple—as compared with $130 and $195 for individuals and couples with no income other than supplemental security income. In addition to providing a monthly disregard of $50 of social security or other income, the committee approved an additional disregard for aged, blind, or disabled persons of $85 of earned income plus one-half of any earnings above $85. This will enable those persons who are able to do some work to do so without suffering a totally offsetting reduction in their supplemental security income.

IMPROVING THE LIVES OF CHILDREN

The program of aid to families with dependent children began and remains a program to help needy children; the basis of eligibility for AFDC payments was and remains the presence of a child. The committee bill seeks to improve the lives of children in a number of areas: by providing a higher income for low-income working families with children; by providing for improved health care; by arranging for better child care; by increasing support for child welfare services designed to strengthen family life and to keep the family together; by supporting foster care for children when the child's home is not suitable; by arranging for protective payments to insure that funds are used in the best interests of the child; by providing a mechanism to insure the child's right to have the paternity of his father established and to obtain support payments; and by making special provision for emergency assistance to children in families of migrant workers.

HIGHER INCOME FOR WORKING FAMILIES

The provisions of the committee bill outlined in the preceding section show how the committee bill would provide more than $2 billion, in additional income to low-income working families. In addition, ending the cycle of dependency that now links generation to generation is a major goal of the committee bill, and one which should have a profound effect on the lives of children.

HEALTH CARE FOR CHILDREN

Under the committee bill several million low-income working persons now eligible for Government health benefits would be eligible to buy subsidized health care protection for their families. Their premium, equal to 20 percent of their income—excluding work bonus payments—in excess of $2,400 annually, would pay part of the cost of this protection, with the Federal Government paying the remaining $200 million in estimated cost. Some million children not now covered under the medicaid program could receive health protection under this provision if their parents elect coverage.

Another provision of the committee bill extends for 2 years the program of special project grants for maternal and child health. The project grant program has been utilized primarily to bring comprehensive health care to children of low-income families in urban areas.

In 1967 the Congress required that States begin screening all children under age 21 for handicapping conditions. States have failed to meet this requirement, and HEW regulations require States to provide health care screening only to children under age 6. The committee added a provision to the bill reiterating that screening services must be provided to all eligible children between ages of 7 and 21 by July 1, 1973. To insure that children receive the screening the Congress intends, the committee provision would reduce Federal grants for AFDC by 2 percent beginning July 1, 1974, if a State fails to inform parents receiving AFDC or participating in the employment program of the availability of child health screening services; to actually provide or arrange for such services; or to arrange for or refer for appropriate corrective treatment, the children disclosed by such screening as suffering illness or impairment.

MEDICAID COVERAGE OF MENTALLY ILL CHILDREN

Under present law, Federal matching fo rthe treatment of mentally ill persons under the medicaid program is limited to persons 65 years of age or older. The committee bill would for the first time extend Federal financial participation to inpatient care in mental institutions for children eligible for medicaid. Federal matching would only apply if the care consisted of a program of active treatment, was provided in an accredited medical institution, and provided that the State maintains the level of expenditures it is now making for mentally ill children.

CHILD CARE

The committee bill will significantly improve the care that thousands of children receive while their parents work. Care provided under the committee bill will have to meet Federal standards designed to assure that adequate space, staffing, and health requirements are made. In addition, facilities used will have to meet the life safety code of the National Fire Protection Association.

PROTECTION OF CHILDREN

The committee bill would require, rather than merely permit, States to assure that welfare payments are being used in the best interests of the children for whom they are intended. When a welfare agency has reason to believe that the aid to families with dependent children payments are not being used in the best interests of the child, it must provide counseling and guidance services so that the mother will use the payments in the best interests of the child. This failing, the agency must make protective payments to a third party who will use the funds for the best interests of the child.

Failure to pay rent leads to eviction and disruption of a child's life. The committee therefore provided that if the parent of a child receiving AFDC has failed to make rent payments for 2 consecutive months, the welfare agency may, depending on the circumstances of the case, make a rent payment directly to the landlord if he agrees to accept the amount actually allowed for shelter by the State as total payment for the rent.

Under the employment program, mothers in families with no children under age 6 would generally be ineligible to receive their basic income from the aid to families with dependent children program. It is possible that a few mothers will ignore the welfare of their children and refuse to take advantage of the employment opportunity. To prevent the children from suffering because of such neglect, the Work Administration would be authorized to make payment to the family for up to 1 month if the mother is provided counseling and other services aimed at persuading her to participate in the employment program. Following this, the mother would either have to be found to be incapacitated under the Federal definition—that is, unable to engage in substantial gainful employment—with mandatory referral to vocational rehabilitation agency; or, if she is not found to be incapacitated, the State would arrange for protective payments to a third party to insure that the needs of the children are provided for.

CHILD WELFARE SERVICES

The committee bill would increase the annual authorization for Federal grants to the States for child welfare services to $200 million in fiscal year 1973, rising to $270 million in 1977 and thereafter. These figures compare with a $46 million appropriation in 1972. While it is expected that a substantial part of any increased appropriation under this higher authorization will go toward meeting the cost of providing foster care, the committee carefully avoided earmarking amounts specifically for foster care so that wherever possible States and counties can use the additional funds to expand preventive child welfare services with the aim of helping families stay together, thus avoiding the need for foster care. The additional funds can also be used for adoption services, including action to increase adoption of hard-to-place children.

The committee bill also provides for establishing a national adoption information exchange system designed to assist in the placement of children awaiting adoption and to make it easier for parents wishing to adopt children to do so.

CHILD SUPPORT

Family breakup and failure to form families in the first place are major factors in the very rapid growth in the AFDC rolls in recent years. New provisions were written into the law in 1967 which unfortunately have proven ineffective in stemming the trend. The committee believes that an effective mechanism for assuring that fathers meet their obligation to support their children, in addition to the immediate effect of reducing welfare costs, will provide a strong deterrent to fathers who might otherwise desert—a deterrent that will keep families intact and will thus have a significant impact on improving the lives of children in the families.

Under this mechanism a mother, as a condition of eligibility for welfare, would assign her right-of-support payments to the Government. Under the leadership of the Attorney General, States would establish programs of obtaining child support—including the determination of paternity where this is necessary. State expenses for the collection unit established under the committee bill would be provided 75 percent Federal matching instead of 50 percent as under present law. Any information held by the Internal Revenue Service, the Social Security Administration, or other Federal agency would be available to help locate the absent father. This location service could be used by any mother seeking support from a deserting father, even if the family does not receive welfare.

The State collection unit would generally find it desirable to encourage the father to reach a voluntary agreement for making regular support payments. Where the voluntary approach is not successful, the committee bill provides for stronger legal remedies including the collection mechanisms available to the Federal Government such as the use of the Internal Revenue Service to garnishee the wages of the absent parent. The welfare payments to the family would serve as the basis of a continuing monetary obligation of the deserting parent to the United States.

If the civil action to obtain support payments is unsuccessful, the committee bill provides for Federal criminal penalties for an absent parent who has not fulfilled his obligation to support his family when the family receives welfare payments in which the Federal Government participates.

CHILD'S RIGHT TO HAVE PATERNITY ESTABLISHED

The committee believes that a child born out of wedlock has a right to have his paternity ascertained in a fair and efficient manner and that society should act on the child's behalf to establish paternity even where this conflicts with the mother's short-term interests. As part of its comprehensive approach to obtain child support, the committee bill includes several provisions designed to lead to a more effective system of establishing paternity.

First, a father not married to the mother of his child would be required to sign an affidavit of paternity if he agreed to make support payments voluntarily in order to avoid court action. Most States do not permit initiation of paternity actions more than 2 or 3 years after the child's birth; the affidavit would serve as legal evidence of paternity in the event that court action for support should later become necessary.

Second, there is evidence that blood-typing techniques have developed to such an extent that they may be used to establish evidence of paternity at a level of probability acceptable for legal determinations. Moreover, if blood grouping is conducted expertly, the possibility of error can all but be eliminated. Therefore, the committee adopted a provision to authorize and direct the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to establish or arrange for regional laboratories that can do blood typing for purposes of establishing paternity, so that the State agencies and the courts would have this expert evidence available to them in paternity suits. No requirement would be made in Federal law that blood tests be made mandatory. The services of the laboratories would be available with respect to any paternity proceeding, not just a proceeding brought by, or for, a welfare recipient.

EMERGENCY ASSISTANCE TO MIGRANT FAMILIES WITH CHILDREN

Under existing law, emergency assistance may, at the option of the States, be provided to needy families in crisis situations, and it may be provided either statewide or in part of the State. Emergency assistance programs have been adopted in about half of the States, and they receive 50 percent Federal matching. Under the law, assistance may be furnished for a period not in excess of 30 days in any 12-month period in cases in which a child is without available resources and the payments, care, or services involved are necessary to avoid destitution of the child or to provide living arrangements for the child. The committee bill requires that all States have a program of emergency assistance to migrant families with children; requires that the program be statewide in application; and provides 75 percent Federal matching for emergency assistance to migrant families.

SOCIAL SECURITY PROVISIONS RELATED TO BENEFITS FOR CHILDREN

The committee bill contains several provisions related specifically to children's benefits, which would: Extend social security coverage to certain grandchildren not adopted by their grandparents; provide childhood disability benefits if the disability began before age 22 rather than before age 18 as under present law; and liberalize the eligibility requirements for children adopted by social security beneficiaries.

AIDING AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED PERSONS

The committee continues to place primary reliance on the social security system to provide income to aged, blind, and disabled persons, and as in the past considers it appropriate for workers to contribute during their productive working years as they build up entitlement to retirement, disability, and survivor benefits. The social security program has succeeded remarkably well in its original intention of replacing old age assistance. The proportion of aged persons receiving social security has mounted steadily since 1940 until the program is now nearly universal, while at the same time the proportion of the aged population receiving welfare has declined from 23 percent of the elderly 30 years ago to 10 percent today. Building on the 20 percent benefit increase already enacted into law, the committee bill would create a new supplemental security income program, administered by the Social Security Administration, which would set a Federal guaranteed minimum income level for aged, blind, and disabled persons, with higher incomes guaranteed for those entitled to social security benefits.

BENEFITS FOR WIDOWS

The committee bill would provide benefits for a widow equal to the benefit her deceased husband would have received if he were still living. Under the bill, a widow who begins receiving benefits at age 65 or after would receive 100 percent rather than 82½ percent of the amount her deceased husband was receiving at his death, or the amount he would have received if he had begun getting benefits at age 65. Under this provision, $1 billion in additional benefits would be paid to 3,800,000 persons in 1974.

EXTENSION OF MEDICARE TO THE DISABLED

The major provision in the committee bill affecting blind and disabled social security beneficiaries would extend medicare coverage to 1,700,000 disabled social security beneficiaries at a cost of $1 billion in the first full year for hospital insurance and $350 million for supplementary medical insurance.

REDUCTION IN WAITING PERIOD FOR DISABILITY BENEFITS

Under present law, an individual must be disabled throughout a full 6-month period before he may be paid disability insurance benefits. Under the committee bill, the waiting period would be reduced 2 months to a 4-month period. An estimated 950,000 beneficiaries would become entitled to $274 million in additional benefits under this provision in 1974.

DISABILITY BENEFITS FOR THE BLIND

The committee bill substantially liberalizes the provisions of present law relating to blind persons. In particular, the committee bill would make blind persons with at least six quarters of coverage eligible for disability benefits, and permit blind persons to qualify for benefits regardless of their capacity to work and whether they are working.

COVERAGE OF DRUGS UNDER MEDICARE

The cost of outpatient prescription drugs represents a major item of medical expense for many older people, especially those suffering from chronic conditions. The cost of such drugs are not presently covered under the medicare program. The committee bill would cover under the medicare program the cost of certain specified drugs purchased on an outpatient basis which are necessary in the treatment of the most common crippling or life-threatening chronic disease conditions of the aged. Beneficiaries would pay $1 toward the cost of each prescribed drug included in the reasonable cost range for the drug involved.

LIMITING THE PREMIUM FOR SUPPLEMENTARY MEDICAL INSURANCE

During the first 5 years of the supplementary medical insurance program it has been necessary to increase the monthly premium almost 100 percent—from $3 per person in July 1966, to a $5.80 rate in July 1972. The Government pays an equal amount from general revenues. This increase and projected future increases represent an increasingly significant financial burden to the aged living on incomes which are not increasing at a similar rate.

The committee bill would limit the premium increase to not more than the percentage by which the social security cash benefits had been generally increased since the last premium adjustment. Costs above those met by such premium payments would be paid out of general revenues in addition to the regular general revenue matching.

MEDICARE COVERAGE FOR SPOUSES AND SECURITY BENEFICIARIES UNDER AGE 65

Under present law, medicare coverage is restricted to person age 65 and over, but persons age 60 through 64—including retired workers, their spouses, widows, or parents—find it difficult to obtain adequate private health insurance at a rate which they can afford. The committee bill would make medicare protection available at cost to spouses age 60 to 64 of medicare beneficiaries and to other persons age 60 to 64 entitled to benefits under the Social Security Act.

EXTENDED CARE FACILITIES AND SKILLED NURSING FACILITIES

Serious problems have arisen with respect to defining and providing the skilled nursing home benefit under medicaid and the extended care benefit under medicare. To remedy these problems, the committee bill would establish a single definition and set of standards for extended care facilities under medicare and skilled nursing homes under medicaid. The bill also redefines the medicare extended care benefit to make it more equitable and suitable to the posthospital needs of older citizens, as well as to avoid the problem of retroactive denials of coverage. Additionally, by July 1, 1974, States would be required to have proper cost finding systems whereby skilled nursing and intermediate care facilities would be reimbursed under medicaid on a reasonable cost-related basis. To assure compliance with statutory requirements as to conditions of safety and quality of care, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would have final authority to certify facilities for participation in both medicare and medicaid.

WAIVER OF BENEFICIARY LIABILITY FOR CERTAIN DISALLOWED MEDICARE CLAIMS

Under present law, whenever a medicare claim is disallowed, the ultimate liability for services rendered falls upon the beneficiary. Under the committee bill, a beneficiary could be "held harmless" in certain situations where claims were disallowed, but where the beneficiary was without fault. In such situations, the liability would shift either to the Government or to the provider of services—dependent upon whether, for example, the provider exercised due care in applying medicare policy.

PAYMENTS TO HEALTH MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATIONS

Certain large medical care organizations seem to make the delivery of medical care more efficient and economical at times, than the medical care community at large.

Medicare does not currently pay these comprehensive programs on an incentive capitation basis, and consequently any financial incentives to economical operation in such programs have not been incorporated in medicare.

The committee bill provides the potential for greater usage of these organizations, with qualified organizations being eligible for incentive reimbursement. The committee bill includes provisions designed to assure that only health maintenance organizations with a capacity to provide care of proper quality would be eligible to participate under the incentive reimbursement approach. These provisions are designed primarily to protect medicare beneficiaries and to avoid indiscriminate expenditure of public trust funds.

PROTECTING AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED WELFARE RECIPIENTS FROM LOSS OF MEDICAID ELIGIBILITY

The committee bill includes a provision to assure that aged, blind, and disabled welfare recipients who are currently eligible for medicaid will not lose their eligibility for medicaid benefits solely because of the recent 20 percent social security benefit increase. The amendment will protect about 180,000 aged, blind, and disabled welfare recipients against loss of this valuable protection.

SUPPLEMENTARY SECURITY INCOME FOR THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

Under present law, aged, blind, and disabled persons are eligible for welfare benefits under the various State assistance programs, with the State setting the payment levels. The committee bill would substitute instead a new federally administered program of supplemental security income for aged, blind, and disabled persons. Under this program, aged, blind, and disabled individuals would be assured a monthly income of at least $130 or an individual or $195 for a couple. In addition the committee bill would provide that the first $50 of social security or other income would not cause any reduction in amount of the supplementary security income payment.

As a result, aged, blind, and disabled persons who also have monthly income from social security or other sources—which are not need related—of at least $50 would, under the committee bill, be assured total monthly income of at least $180 for an individual or $245 for a couple.

USE OF TRUST FUNDS FOR REHABILITATION

Under present law, up to 1 percent of the amount of social security trust funds paid to disabled beneficiaries in the prior year may be used to pay for the costs of rehabilitating disabled beneficiaries. In order to provide additional funds for rehabilitating these disabled persons, the committee bill would increase by 50 percent the percentage of the trust funds which could be used for rehabilitation.

REHABILITATION OF ALCOHOLICS AND ADDICTS

The committee is particularly concerned that persons who are disabled because of alcoholism or drug addiction be provided rehabilitative services under a program of active treatment rather than simply being provided income with which to support their addiction or alcoholism. Accordingly, alcoholics and drug addicts under the committee bill would be able to receive maintenance payments only as part of a program of active treatment.

IMPROVING PROGRAM INTEGRITY AND ENHANCING QUALITY OF CARE

The committee bill includes a number of provisions designed to improve administrative control and quality of care assurance in the medicare and medicaid programs and to restore the integrity of the welfare programs.

ESTABLISHMENT OF PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS REVIEW ORGANIZATIONS

The committee has found susbtantial indications that a significant amount of health services paid for under the medicare and medicaid programs would not be found medically necessary under appropriate professional standards. In some instances, the services provided are of unsatisfactory professional quality.

The committee bill would establish professional standards review organizations, sponsored by organizations representing substantial numbers of practicing physicians in local areas, to assume responsibility for comprehensive and ongoing review of services covered under the medicare and medicaid programs. The purpose of the amendment would be to assure proper utilization of care and services provided in medicare and medicaid utilizing a formal professional mechanism representing the broadest possible cross section of practicing physicians in an area. Appropriate safeguards are included so as to adequately provide for protection of the public interest and to prevent pro forma assumption in carrying out of the important review activities in the two highly expensive programs. The amendment provides discretion for recognition of and use by the PSRO of effective utilization review committees in hospitals and medical organizations.

Mr. President, at this point I particularly wish to pay tribute to the statesmanship, the diligence, and the patience of the Senator from Utah (Mr. BENNETT), and for the many constructive suggestions he made in every phase of the bill, including its workfare aspects, which bear his mark as much as that of any member of the committee, as does almost everything in the bill.

This particular provision on peer review, however, is one which he had the courage to sponsor and to educate the public on, as well as the doctors and officials, to the point that today this proposal has general acceptance, whereas in the beginning there was strong opposition to it, and great fears, which in my judgment have been largely resolved. It is my judgment that any fears remaining on the part of doctors or others will prove to be groundless, as most of those in the past have been.

INSPECTOR GENERAL FOR MEDICARE AND MEDICAID

There is at present no independent reviewing mechanism charged with specific responsibility for ongoing and continuing review of medicare and medicaid in terms of the efficiency and effectiveness of program operations and compliance with congressional intent. While HEW's Audit Agency and the General Accounting Office have done helpful work, there is a need for day-to-day monitoring conducted at a level which can promptly call the attention of the Secretary and the Congress to important problems and which has authority to remedy some of these problems in timely, effective, and responsible fashion.

The committee bill would create the Office of Inspector General for Health Administration in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Inspector General would be appointed by the President, would report to the Secretary, and would be responsible for reviewing and auditing the social security health programs on a continuing and comprehensive basis to determine their efficiency, economy, and consonance with the statute and congressional intent.

LIMITATIONS ON COVERAGE OF COSTS UNDER MEDICARE

The committee bill authorizes the Secretary to establish limits on overall direct or indirect costs which will be recognized as reasonable for comparable services in comparable facilities in an area. He may also establish maximum acceptable costs in such facilities with respect to items or groups of services—for example, food costs, or standby costs.

The beneficiary is liable for any amounts determined as excessive—except that he may not be charged for excessive amounts in a facility in which his admitting physician has a direct or indirect ownership interest. The Secretary is required to give public notice as to those facilities where beneficiaries may be liable for payment of costs determined as not necessary to efficient patient care.

LIMITATION ON PREVAILING CHARGE LEVELS

Under the present reasonable charge policy, medicare pays in full any physician's charge that falls within the 75th percenitle of customary charges in an area. However, there is no limit on how much physicians, in general, can increase their customary charges from year to year and thereby increase medicare payments and costs.

The committee bill recognizes as reasonable, for medicare reimbursement purpose only, those charges which fall within the 75th percentile. Starting in 1973, increases in physician's fees allowable for medicare purposes, would be limited by a factor which takes into account increased costs of practice and the increase in earnings levels in an area.

With respect to reasonable charges for medical supplies and equipment, the amendment would provide for recognizing only the lower charges at which supplies of similar quality are widely available.

PUBLIC DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION REGARDING DEFICIENCIES

Physicians and the public are currently unaware as to which hospitals, extended care faciilties, skilled nursing homes, and intermediate care facilities have deficiencies and which facilities fully meet the statutory and regulatory requirements. This operates to discourage the direction of physician, patient, and public concern toward deficient facilities, which might encourage them to upgrade the quality of care they provide to proper levels.

Under the bill the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would be required to make reports of an institution's significant deficiencies or the absence thereof—such as deficiencies in the areas of staffing, fire safety, and sanitation—a matter of public record readily and generally available at social security district offices. Following the completion of a survey of a health care facility or organization, those portions of the survey relating to statutory requirements as well as those additional significant survey aspects required by regulations relating to the capacity of the facility to provide proper care in a safe setting would be matters of public record.

LIMITATION ON FEDERAL PAYMENTS UNDER MEDICARE AND MEDICAID FOR DISAPPROVED CAPITAL EXPENDITURES

A hospital or nursing home can, under present law, make large capital expenditures which may have been disapproved by the State or local health care facilities planning council and still be reimbursed by medicare and medicaid for capital costs—depreciation, insert on debt, return on net equity—associated with that expenditure.

The committee bill would prohibit reimbursement to providers under the medicare and medicaid programs for captial costs associated with expenditures of $100,000 or more which are specifically determined to be inconsistent with State or local health facility plans.

DETERMINING ELIGIBILITY FOR WELFARE

Generally speaking, the usual method of determining eligibility for public assistance has involved the verification of information provided by the applicant for assistance through a visit to the applicant's home and from other sources. For persons found eligible for assistance, redetermination of eligibility is required at least annually, and similar procedures are followed.

The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare has required States to use a simplified or declaration method for aid to aged, blind, and disabled, and has strongly urged that this method be used in the program of aid to families with dependent children. The simplified or declaration method provides for eligibility determinations to be based to the maximum extent possible on the information furnished by the applicant and without routine interviewing of the applicant and without routine verification and investigation by the caseworker. The committee bill precludes the use of the declaration method by law. It also explicitly authorizes the States in the statute to examine the application or current circumstances and promptly make any verification from independent or collateral sources necessary to insure that eligibility exists. The Secretary could not, by regulation, limit the State's authority to verify income or other eligibility factors.

RECOUPING OVERPAYMENTS

In 1970, the Supreme Court ruled that welfare payments could not be terminated before a recipient is afforded an evidentiary hearing. The Health, Education, and Welfare regulations based on the Court's decision permit the recipient to delay the hearing in order to continue to receive welfare payments long after he has become ineligible. Other regulations virtually preclude recovering overpayments.

The committee bill deals with this situation by requiring State welfare agencies to reach a final decision on the appeal of an AFDC recipient within thirty days following the day the recipient was notified of the agency's intention to reduce or terminate assistance. The bill would also require the repayment to the agency of amounts which a recipient received during the period of the appeal if it was determined that the recipient was not entitled to the money which he had already received.

Any other result, Mr. President, would seem to the committee to encourage fraud and improper applications for welfare benefits.

QUALITY OF WORK PERFORMED BY WELFARE PERSONNEL

In an effort to try to upgrade the quality of work performed by welfare personnel, the committee bill directs the Secretary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to study and report to the Congress by January 1, 1974, on ways of enhancing the quality of welfare work, whether by fixing standards of performance or otherwise. In making this study, the Secretary could draw on the knowledge and expertise of persons talented in the field of welfare administration, including those having direct contact with recipients. He should also benefit from suggestions made by recipients themselves as to how the level of performance in the administration of the welfare system might be improved, with a view toward ending the wide variations in employee conduct which characterize today's system, and moderating the extremes to which some social workers go in performing their duties.

OFFENSES BY WELFARE EMPLOYEES

Under a present Federal law there is no provision particularly directed to the question of employee conduct in the administration of the welfare program. Under the committee bill, rules similar to those applicable to Internal Revenue Service employees would apply under the welfare laws. The committee is hopeful that this provision could lead to an upgrading of the quality of performance by welfare workers in general.

FISCAL RELIEF FOR STATES AND ADDITIONAL ADMINISTRATIVE LATITUDE

The committee is well aware that the growth of the welfare rolls since 1967 has been one of the significant factors in bringing about the fiscal crisis currently facing State and local governments. Much of this growth has been due to increased Federal intervention in the control of the AFDC program by the States. The committee feels that having the Federal Government take over the control of this program is not the step that should be taken. It believes that the correct approach is in the opposite direction. Accordingly, the committee carefully designed many parts of this bill so that the State's control of the AFDC program would be strengthened rather than weakened. The committee recognizes, however, that this represents a long-range solution and that many States feel an acute need for immediate relief from the pressures of swollen welfare budgets. Under the committee bill, therefore, the fiscal burden on the States will be substantially decreased through creation of the new Federal supplemental security insurance program in lieu of the present program of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled, through increases in the Federal funding of assistance payments to families, and through indirect fiscal relief resulting from improvements which the committee bill makes in the general structure of the AFDC program. These amounts are in addition to funds under the revenue sharing bill.

SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME FOR THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

The committee bill establishes a new program of supplemental security income for the aged, blind, and disabled, with Federal administration and, with the Federal Government paying the full cost of the program as replacement of the present Federal-State programs of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled, this new program will save States about $800 million annually.

AID TO FAMILIES WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN

In the aid to families, with dependent children program, the committee bill changes the funding mechanism from the present formula matching to a block grant approach. The new method of providing Federal funds for AFDC results in substantial immediate fiscal relief and is also consistent with the committee's desire to return to the States a greater measure of control over their welfare programs. For the last six months of calendar year 1972 and for 1973, the block grant would be based on the funding for calendar year 1972 under current law. Starting in 1974, the grant would be adjusted to take into account the effects of the work program. State savings are estimated at $400 million in 1972, $800 million in 1973, and $1.4 billion in 1974.

CHILD WELFARE SERVICES

Federal appropriations for child welfare services have remained at $46,000,000 for the past 7 years, representing about one-seventh of total State and local expenditures for child welfare services programs. The committee bill would increase the authorizations for child welfare services to $200,000,000 in fiscal year 1973, rising to $270,000,000 in fiscal year 1977 and thereafter.

STATE MEDICAID SAVINGS

The provisions of the committee bill extending medicare coverage to disabled social security beneficiaries, including prescription drugs under the medicare program and providing Federal medicaid matching for the first time for mentally ill children will save State substantial amounts under their medicaid programs.

LIMITING REGULATORY AUTHORITY OF THE SECRETARY OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE

The Social Security Act permits the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to "make and publish such rules and regulations, not inconsistent with this act, as may be necessary to the efficient administration of the functions" with which he is charged under the act. Similar authority is provided under each of the welfare programs. Particularly since January 1969, regulations have been issued under this general authority with little basis in law and which sometimes have run directly counter to legislative history. Many States have attributed at least a part of the growth of the welfare caseload in recent years to these regulations of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

A number of committee decisions deal with problems raised by specific HEW regulations. In addition, the committee agreed to modify the statutory language quoted above by limiting the Secretary's regulatory authority under the welfare programs so that he may issue regulations only with respect to specific provisions of the act and even in these cases the regulations may not be inconsistent with the provisions of the act.

PERMITTING STATES MORE LATITUDE UNDER MEDICAID

The medicaid program has been a significant burden on State finances. Two requirements of present law would be deleted by the committee bill. These requirements prevent a State from ever reducing medicaid expenditures and require that a State medicaid program ever expand until the program is comprehensive.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, this concludes may prepared statement on the committee bill. It is a comprehensive bill, and I think it is the best piece of legislation the Finance Committee has recommended to the Senate during the 24 years I have been a Member of this body. I urge that it be approved.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendments be agreed to en bloc and that the bill as thus amended be considered as original text for purpose of further amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, as the ranking minority member on the Senate's committee, I should like to join the chairman in presenting opening statements with respect to this monumental and historic piece of legislation. Just within the last few minutes, a copy of the bill has been laid on the desk of each Senator. It disappoints me. It is only 989 pages long. I thought it might actually have reached and crossed the mark of 1,000 pages. By all odds, it is the longest bill that has ever been considered by either House of Congress. Its length is a factor of the extent to which it attempts to attack and solve the many, many problems that have grown up in the social security and welfare fields over the years.

It has been a number of years since these programs were instituted, and as time has passed and conditions have changed, we have either left the problems there to grow or we have attempted to solve them on a patchwork basis. This time the committee, working since last January, has undertaken a comprehensive review of both these areas. This bill represents the committee's recommendations to the Senate.

Mr. President, the chairman has just completed his comprehensive statement, in which he has reviewed and outlined the major provisions in H.R. 1 and has indicated to the Senate how these provisions relate in a manner touching, in one way or another, on almost every critical problem in the areas of social security, medicare, medicaid, and welfare.

Senator LONG has done a superb job of summarizing the bill. I should like, therefore, at this point to reemphasize the importance of a few of the key committee decisions in which I have been most closely involved on a personal basis.

The chairman has mentioned two of these, in the matter of the review of the quality and necessity for health care and an attempt to work out a provision which would encourage work, rather than welfare, for the family heads in families with dependent children. I am going to talk a little more in detail about these two features.

The bill deals extensively with medicare, medicaid, and welfare. In each of these areas, there have been key problems which need to be solved. In the welfare area, the principal problem involves the question of whether we should merely guarantee a welfare family, headed by a person who is capable of employment, a minimal income, or whether we should, instead, guarantee employable adults a job opportunity. I will discuss these welfare issues later in my statement.

In medicare and medicaid, the critical problem the committee has had to solve relates to the urgent need for effective utilization of medical facilities and the need for a peer review of the way these facilities are used.

The committee, after extensive hearings and deliberations, going all the way back to 1970, has again approved the professional standards review organization amendment, which I offered and which would establish a responsible and publicly accountable professional structure for carrying out peer review at local levels throughout the country.

Senators will recall that the PSRO amendment was strongly endorsed by the Senate in a rollcall vote during the debate on the Social Security amendments of 1970.

Let me take a few moments to again set the whole issue of utilization and peer review in context for the Senate. Until recently in our history, the Federal Government was not involved to any substantial extent as a third-party payer of medical and hospital bills.

With the advent of medicare and medicaid in 1965, the Federal Government almost overnight became the largest health insurer or third-party payer in the United States. The Government was now paying hospital and medical bills for millions of aged and poor citizens.

Medicare and medicaid have been good programs, which have enabled millions of citizens to meet their health needs. However, as most Senators are aware, the cost of the medicare and medicaid programs have skyrocketed far beyond the early estimates. In this fiscal year, alone, medicare and medicaid will cost the Federal and State Governments some $19 billion. Projected costs of the medicare hospital insurance program will exceed estimates made in 1967 by some $240 billion over a 25-year period. The total monthly premium cost for part B of medicare—doctors' bills—rose from $6 monthly per person in July of 1966 to $11.60 per person in July of 1972. Medicaid costs are also rising at precipitous rates.

Obviously, the costs of these programs represented a problem which must be dealt with. In addition, hearings revealed that a significant proportion of the health services provided under medicare and medicaid were not medically necessary and that some of the necessary services provided would not meet proper quality standards.

These were the problems—cost and quality—which the Finance Committee had to face in discussing medicare and medicaid. Part of the answer was relatively easy. The Ways and Means Committee and the Finance Committee both developed a number of provisions to control allowable unit charges for physicians' services and hospital per diem costs. These controls will not halt cost increases, but should moderate them substantially.

However, controlling the unit cost of services under medicare and medicaid solved only part of the problem. The committee still had to deal with the very difficult questions of whether the services were actually necessary and met proper quality standards. This is where utilization and peer review enters the picture. As I said, it is relatively easy to control the unit price of services, but without effective professional controls on utilization the costs of the programs will continue to soar.

An effective comprehensive professional review mechanism can materially ease problems of utilization and quality control. This is the area where a bridge was needed between medicine and Government. It was all too clear to those of us on the Finance Committee that an army of Government and insurance company employees checking on each medical service was not the answer. Past experience and commonsense indicated clearly that clerical personnel could not and should not make decisions as to the quality and necessity of medical services.

The bridge we needed between Government and medicine was a structure through which practicing physicians could, in an organized and publicly accountable fashion, professionally evaluate the quality and necessity of medical services in an area.

In 1970 I introduced an amendment to establish professional service review organizations throughout the United States. Under this provision, professional standards review organizations—PSRO's—would be established throughout the United States and would have the responsibility of reviewing—on a comprehensive and ongoing basis—whether the services provided under medicare and medicaid were necessary and met accepted professional standards. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would, after consultation with national and local health professions and agencies, designate appropriate areas through the Nation for which professional standards review organizations would be established. Areas may cover an entire State or parts of a State, but generally a minimum of 300 practicing doctors would be included within one area. As a practical matter, the average PSRO would average 700 or 800 physicians. This size should be sufficient to assure objective review and yet be essentially local in nature and timely in response.

Organizations representing substantial numbers of physicians in area, such as medical foundations and societies, would be invited to sponsor review organizations. It should be clearly understood—and this has been one of the debates over the past 2 years, one that has been most difficult to explain—that a medical society, per se, could not qualify as a PSRO because of the requirement that membership in the PSRO be open to all licensed doctors of medicine and osteopathy in an area without any society membership or dues requirement whatsoever. Where the Secretary finds that such organizations are not willing or cannot reasonably be expected to develop capabilities to carry out professional standards review organization functions in an effective, economical, timely and objective manner, he would enter into agreements with such other agencies or organizations with professional medical competence as he finds are willing and capable of carrying out such functions.

In other words, the job would be done one way or the other but it is the intention of the amendment to give a first priority, a first opportunity to qualified organizations already existing who would be capable of sponsoring a PSRO to include all the practicing physicians in the given area.

The initial agreement would be made on a conditional basis, not to exceed 2 years, with the PSRO operating concurrently with the present review system. During the transitional period, medicare carriers and intermediaries are expected to abide by the decision of the professional standards review organization where the professional standards review organization has acted. This reliance will permit a more complete appraisal of the effectiveness of the conditionally approved professional standards review organization. Where performance of an organization is unsatisfactory, and the Secretary's efforts to bring about prompt necessary improvement fail, he could terminate its participation.

Provider, physician, and patient profiles and other relevant data would be collected and reviewed on an ongoing basis to identify persons and institutions which provide services requiring more extensive review. Regional norms of care and treatment would be used in the review process as routine checkpoints in evaluating when excessive services may have been provided. The norms would be particularly useful in determining the point at which physician certification of need for continued institutional care would be made and reviewed. Initial priority in assembling and using data and profiles would be assigned to those areas most productive in pinpointing problems—such as hospitalization—so as to conserve physician time and maximize the productivity of physician review. The PSRO would progressively assume more and more review responsibility as its capacity expanded.

The professional standards review organization would be permitted to employ the services of qualified personnel, such as registered nurses, who could, under the direction and control of physicians, aid in assuring effective and timely review. A PSRO, in performing its tasks, would also be required to accept the review findings of review committees in hospitals and medical organizations to the extent these in-house review activities are effective.

Where advance approval by the review organizations for institutional admission is required, such approval would provide the basis for a presumption of medical necessity for purposes of medicare and medicaid benefit payments. Failure of a physician, institution, or other health care supplier to seek advance approval, where required, could be considered cause for disallowance of affected claims.

In addition to acting on their own initiative, the review organizations would report on matters referred to them by the Secretary. They would also recommend appropriate action against persons responsible for gross or continued overuse of services, use of services in an unnecessarily costly manner, or for inadequate quality of services and would act to the extent of their authority or influence to correct improper activities.

I cannot emphasize too strongly, however, that the thrust of PSRO activities is educational and not punitive.

Mr. President, we have had some experience in this field. There are some PSRO organizations now operating. We have had ample demonstration of the educational value of the activity.

A National Professional Standards Review Council would be established by the Secretary to assist in developing, improving, and evaluating norms of care as well as to review the operations of the local area review organizations, advise the Secretary on their effectiveness, and make recommendations for their improvement. The Council would be composed of physicians, a majority of whom would be selected from nominees of national organizations representing practicing physicians. Other physicians on the Council would be recommended by consumers and other health care interests.

As I have noted, the amendment was approved by the Committee on Finance and the full Senate in 1970 and was again approved by the Finance Committee in its consideration of H.R. 1. The amendment has been carefully studied by and has the endorsement of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, subject to an understanding that there may be technical problems involved on which the Department of HEW might suggest different approaches. However, the basic principle has been completely and thoroughly endorsed by the Department. Most of these areas of disagreement on the limited technical features have been resolved, and I am sure that we can resolve all of them before we get through. In addition, the amendment is supported by many concerned organizations, including a substantial number of State and county medical societies.

I believe today, as I said when I introduced the PSRO amendment in this Congress early this year that:

> The relationship between the patient, the physician and the Government is at a crossroads in America today. The pressures for increased governmental involvement in the day-to-day practice of medicine are increasing continually as we move toward expanded Government financing of health care. Economics, commonsense and morally each demand that the Government take an increasingly active role in dealing with the cost and quality of medical care.
> The PSRO amendment represents the best, and perhaps the last, opportunity to fully safeguard the public concern with respect to the cost and quality of medical care while, at the same time, leaving the actual control of medical practice in the hands of those best qualified—America'S physicians.

Without an appropriate peer review mechanism to serve as a bridge between Government and medicine, I am afraid that the consequence will be increasing isolation between Government and medicine, working to the disadvantage of both, and, more importantly, to the disadvantage of the patient.

Mr. President, I would like to address my remarks to the second major area covered by this bill—the welfare area.

Mr. President, as the chairman has so adequately and splendidly demonstrated in his statement, one of the major concerns of the Nation today is the rapid increase in the aid to families with dependent children rolls in recent years. In 1955, there were 2 million recipients in the AFDC program. By the end of 1967, this had increased to 5.3 million recipients. Faced with this increase, the Congress in 1967 created the work incentive program. It was the hope of the Committee on Finance that this program would help employable welfare recipients to prepare for employment and get jobs.

The WIN program represented an attempt to cope with the problem of the rapidly growing dependency on welfare, by dealing with the major barriers which prevented many of the women who head AFDC families from becoming financially independent through their own work effort.

However, during its first 3 years of operation, the WIN program earned a reputation of being a horrendous failure.

The requirement for on-the-job training, highly desirable because of its virtual guarantee of employment upon successful completion of training, was largely ignored under the WIN program as it was administered. Public service employment, also aimed at providing actual employment for welfare recipients, was not provided; only one State had implemented this WIN provision in a substantial way by 1969, although all States were required to establish such programs. Insufficient day care created an inhibiting effect on welfare mothers participating in the program. Lack of coordination between welfare agencies and employment agencies also created problems.

Even though the WIN program in its first 3 years was ineffective, it did show that many more welfare recipients volunteered to participate in the program than could be accommodated. The welfare recipients wanted jobs, but were not being helped by the program.

In 1971, amendments initiated by Senator TALMADGE—also a member of the Finance Committee—were enacted, amendments designed to strengthen the WIN provisions to make the program work. But based on hearings the Finance Committee held in June of 1972, it appears that the Labor Department may not be trying as hard as we would like it to try to make the program effective.

Thus, the problem of the soaring AFDC rolls continued as a major problem that cried out for a workable solution. The President has recognized the magnitude of this problem, and has urged the Congress to move in the direction of "workfare," rather than welfare.

President Nixon has stated:

> In the final analysis, we cannot talk our way out of poverty; we cannot legislate our way out of poverty; but this Nation can work its way out of poverty. What America needs now is not more welfare, but more "workfare" . . . This would be the effect of the transformation of welfare into "workfare," a new work-rewarding program.

The committee agrees that the only way to meet the economic needs of poor persons while at the same time decreasing rather than increasing their dependency is to reward work directly by increasing its value. The committee bill seeks to put the President's words into practice by:

First. Guaranteeing employable family heads a job opportunity rather than a welfare income; and by Second. Increasing the value of work by relating Federal benefits directly to work effort.

All of us are aware today that many important tasks in our society remain undone, such as jobs necessary to improve our environment, improve the quality of life in our cities, improve the quality of education in our schools, improve the delivery of health services, and increase public safety in urban areas. The heads of welfare families are qualified to perform many of these tasks. Yet welfare pays persons not to work and penalizes them if they do work. Does it make sense to pay millions of persons not to work at a time when so many vital jobs go undone? Can this Nation treat mothers of school-age children on welfare as though they were unemployable and pay them to remain at home when more than half of mothers with school-age children in the general population are already working?

This is information I think the American people generally may not be aware of. More than one-half of the women with school-age children are now working.

It is the committee's conclusion that paying an employable person a benefit based on need, the essence of the welfare approach, has not worked. It has not decreased dependency—it has increased it. It has not encouraged work—it has discouraged it. It has not added to the dignity of the lives of recipients, but it has aroused the indignation of the taxpayers who must pay for it.

The committee bill will substantially increase Federal expenditures to low-income working persons, but the increased funds that go to them—about $2 billion—will be paid in the form of wages and wage supplements, not in the form of welfare, since the payments will be related to work effort rather than to need. Under the present welfare system and under the House-passed bill, an employed person who cuts his or her working hours in half receives a much higher welfare payment; under the committee bill, a person reducing his or her work effort by half would find the Federal benefits also reduced by half.

DESCRIPTION OF GUARANTEED EMPLOYMENT PROGRAM

Under the guaranteed employment program recommended in the committee bill, persons considered employable would not be eligible to receive their basic income from aid to families with dependent children, but would be eligible on a voluntary basis to participate in a wholly federally financed employment program. Thus, employable family heads would not be eligible for a guaranteed welfare income, but would be guaranteed an opportunity to work.

The description I will give on the guaranteed employment plan is based on the assumption of a minimum wage of $2 an hour since that is the same assumption used in the committee amendments to H.R. 1.

Employable family heads are families headed by an able-bodied father or an able-bodied mother with no children under 6.

The committee bill provides three basic types of benefits to heads of families:

First. A work bonus equal to 10 percent of wages covered under social security up to a maximum bonus of $400 annually with reductions in the bonus as the husband's and wife's wages rise above $4,000.

Second. A wage supplement for persons employed at less than $2 per hour—but at least at $1.50 per hour—equal to three-quarters of the difference between the actual wage paid and $2 per hour.

Third. A guaranteed job opportunity with a newly established work administration paying $1.50 per hour for 32 hours and with maximum weekly earnings of $48.

WORK INCENTIVES UNDER THE PROGRAM

The program would guarantee each family head an opportunity to earn $2,400 a year, the same amount as the basic guarantee under the House bill for a family of four. It also strengthens work incentives rather than undermining them.

These major points about the committee plan are—

Since the participant is paid for working, his wages do not vary with family size. Thus a family with one child would have no economic incentive to have another child. This feature also preserves the principle of equal pay for equal work.

As the employee's rate of pay increases, his total income increases.

The less the employee works, the less he gets. No matter what the type of employment, the employee who works half-time gets half of what he would get if he works full-time; he gets no Federal benefit if he fails to work at all.

The value of working is increased rather than decreased. Working 32 hours for the Government is worth $1.50 per hour; when a private employer pays $1.50, the value of working to the employee is $2.02 per hour; and working at $2 per hour is worth $2.20 per hour to the employee.

Earnings from other employment do not decrease the wages received for hours worked. Thus, an individual able to work in private employment part of the time increases his income and saves the Government money. Virtually no policing mechanism is necessary to check up on his income from work.

WORK DISINCENTIVES UNDER PRESENT LAW AND ADMINISTRATION PROPOSAL

By way of contrast, under present law, a mother who is eligible for welfare is guaranteed a certain monthly income—at a level set by the State—if she has no other source of income; if she begins to work, her welfare payment is reduced. Specifically, though an allowance is made for work expenses, her welfare payment is reduced $2 for each $3 earned in excess of $30 a month. Generally, then, for each dollar earned and reported to the welfare agency, the family's income is increased by only 33 cents.

The House bill uses the same basic approach as present law, but substitutes a flat $60 exemption plus one-third of additional earnings for the present $30 plus work expenses plus one-third of additional earnings. The disincentive effects of this are as follows:

The less the individual works, the more the Government pays.

An individual cutting back on his work effort decreases his income by a relatively smaller amount, or, said another way, the value of work is substantially lower under the House bill than under the committee bill.

The value of working is decreased rather than increased.

Earnings from any employment—as well as child support payments—if reported reduce the benefits received by the family.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE EMPLOYMENT PROGRAM

A new Work Administration would be created with the responsibility of administering the employment program and paying the wage supplement. The Work Administration's goals would be, first, to improve the quality of life of the children of participating families; second, to place participants in regular employment; and, third, until this is possible, to serve as transitional employer of participants with the objective of preparing participants for and placing them in regular employment at the earliest possible time.

On the national level, the Work Administration would be headed by a three-member board appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. A 15-member national advisory committee—with representatives from industry, organized labor, State and local governments, nonprofit employers, social service organizations, minority groups, and so forth—would make policy recommendations to the board.

The actual operations of the Work Administration would be locally based, with the bulk of the local employees being persons who are currently participating or who were former participants in the guaranteed employment program. On the local level, the Work Administration would be organized along the same lines as the national office. Coordination with other local service agencies, local government, and local employers, labor organizations, and so forth, and their cooperation would be critical to the success of local operations.

The local Work Administration office would hire individuals applying to participate, would develop employability plans for participants, engage in job development and job preparation activities, arrange for supportive services needed for persons to participate—utilizing the Work Administration's Bureau of Child Care to arrange for child care services—and operate programs utilizing participants in the employment program.

The Work Administration would place the program participants in three kinds of employment:

First. Regular employment in the private sector or in jobs in public or nonprofit private agencies. Participants who are ready for employment with little or no preparation would fall into this category. These jobs would pay $2 an hour or more.

Second. Private or public employment with the employee's wage supplemented. These jobs would be jobs not covered by the Federal minimum wage law in which the employer paid less than $2 per hour, but at least $1.50 per hour. No wage supplement would be paid if the employer reduced pay for the job because of the supplement. Thus, no jobs presently paying the minimum wage would be downgraded under the committee bill, and the minimum wage itself would not be affected.

Third. Newly developed jobs with the Federal Government paying the full cost of the salary, including jobs developed for services to local communities in areas that the chairman has mentioned.

For persons who could not be placed in either regular, public or private employment—with or without a wage supplement—the Work Administration would provide employment which would pay at the rate of $1.50 per hour. An individual could work up to 32 hours a week—an annual rate of about $2,400—and would be paid on the basis of hours worked just as in any other job. There would be no pay for hours not worked.

However, a woman with school-age children would not be required to be away from home during hours that the children are not in school—unless child care is provided—although she may be asked, in order to earn her wage, to provide after-school care to children other than her own during these hours.

I am sure it is obvious that employees of the Work Administration could be used to provide child care services to make it possible for other employees to go out and accept jobs.

For these individuals who cannot be placed immediately in regular employment at a rate of pay at least equal to the minimum wage, or in employment with a wage supplement, the major emphasis would be on having them perform useful work which can contribute to the betterment of the community. A large number of such activities are currently going undone, because of the lack of individuals or funds to do them. With a large body of participants for whom useful work will have to be arranged, many of these community improvement activities could now be done. At the same time, safeguards are provided so that the program meets the goal of opening up new job opportunities and does not simply replace existing employees, whether in the public or private sector. To this end, the committee bill requires that the Work Administration observe the following criteria in making arrangements with State and local governments and with nonprofit agencies for work projects to be performed by participants in the guaranteed employment program: such work is performed on projects which serve a useful public purpose and do not result either in displacement of regular workers or in the performance of work that would otherwise be performed by employees of public or private agencies, institutions, or organizations.

For mothers with younger children particularly, the Work Administration would provide training and other activities designed to improve the quality of life for the children of participants through improvement of home, neighborhood, and other environmental conditions in which the children live. For example, mothers can be trained in skills to improve their homemaking and upgrade the physical conditions in which the children live. This would include cleaning up and beautifying their apartments or homes, perhaps in groups with other participant mothers, as well as training in consumer skills and providing a pleasing home atmosphere with child-centered activities in the home in which the child can join and have fun. Many of these activities could occur in the home and in the neighborhood with other participant mothers to provide a social life for participants as well. A major goal of this type of activity would be to impress upon participants that they have the ability to improve the living conditions of their children and to increase and reward their desire to do so. Participants engaged in this type of activity as part of their employment during the week would be required to report for work to a participant or regular Work Administration employee serving as a supervisor. Since expansion of child care will be an immediate need, a number of mothers will be trained initially in providing good child care.

Temporary employment could be arranged with private employers. During such temporary employment participants would continue to be transitional employees of the Work Administration; that is, they would continue to be paid by the Work Administration. The employee would be paid the prevailing wage for the job, however, and the Work Administration would bill the private employer for the employee's wages and other costs associated with making those services available. Unlike other forms of transitional employment by the Work Administration, such temporary employment with private employers would be covered under social security if the employment would be covered by social security when performed directly for the employer.

The Work Administration would attempt to the greatest possible extent to place participants in the transitional Government employment program into regular employment as rapidly as possible, which would include full-time employment as staff for the Work Administration.

It seems to me that if we are going to have local Work Administration offices operating to carry out these functions, they should look first to the participants as a source of their own employees, and, if necessary, upgrade the skills of these employees.

Employment in any of these categories would pay more than the $48 paid transitional employees for working a 32-hour week. In fact, it is my feeling that they should be paid at the same rate a person would be paid if he were brought in from the outside.

Though a number of the Work Administration's employees would have to be recruited from other sources, it is contemplated that a substantial majority would be drawn from participants in the guaranteed employment program itself.

TRANSPORTATION ASSISTANCE

In recognition of the fact that a major reason for low-skilled jobs going unfilled in metropolitan areas is the difficulty an individual faces getting to the potential job, the Work Administration would be authorized to arrange for transportation assistance where this is necessary to place its employees in regular jobs.

INSTITUTIONAL TRAINING

Participants in the guaranteed employment program would be eligible to volunteer for training to improve their skills under the training program administered by the Work Administration. The individual would be accepted for enrollment to the extent funds are available and only if the Work Administration is satisfied that the individual is:

First. Capable of completing training; and Second. Able to become independent through employment at the end of the training and as a result of the training.

SUPPORTIVE SERVICES

Since the purpose of the proposal is to improve the quality of life for children and their families, any member of a family whose head participates in the guaranteed employment program would be provided services to strengthen family life or reduce dependency, to the extent funds are available to pay for the services. The agency administering the employment program would refer family members to other agencies in arranging for the provision of social and other services which they do not provide directly. Other services needed to continue in employment, including minor medical needs, could be provided by the Work Administration.

STATE SUPPLEMENTATION

In order to prevent the State welfare program from undermining the objectives of the employment program, the State would have to assume for the purposes of their AFDC program that families which include an employable parent—including a mother with no child under age 6—are actually participating full time in the employment program and thus receiving $200 per month.

Furthermore, the State would be required to disregard any earnings between $200 a month and $375 a month—the amount an employee would earn working 40 hours a week at $2 per hour—to insure that the incentive system of the employment program is preserved. The effect of this requirement would be to give a participant in the work program a strong incentive to work full time—since earnings of $200 will be attributed to him in any case—and it would not interfere with the strong incentives he would have to seek regular employment rather than working for the Government at $1.50 per hour.

JOB PLACEMENT STANDARDS

The committee bill is designed to stimulate job opportunities in the private sector; it also contains penalties for refusing to accept these jobs. The Work Administration would prepare an employability plan for each transitional employee. Based on the transitional employee's skills, qualifications, experience, and desires, the Work Administration would attempt to direct the employability plan toward employment in an area of interest to the transitional employee, and employment which offers the greatest possibility of self-support. However, participants in the employment program would not be allowed to continue in guaranteed employment if an opportunity for regular employment is available. The penalty for failure to take available regular employment would be suspension of the right to participate in the guaranteed employment program, for 1 day for the first time, 1 week for the second—including a second rejection of the same opportunity—and 1 month for the third and succeeding times.

CHILDREN OF MOTHERS REFUSING TO PARTICIPATE IN THE EMPLOYMENT PROGRAM

Under the employment program, mothers in families with no children under age 6 would generally be ineligible to receive their basic income from the aid to families with dependent children program.

It is, of course, possible that in some few instances the mother will ignore the welfare of her children and refuse to take advantage of the employment opportunity. To prevent the children from suffering, because of such neglect on the part of their mother, the Work Administration would make payment to the family for up to 1 month during which time the mother would be provided counseling and other services aimed at persuading her to participate in the employment program.

Following this, the mother would either have to be found to be incapacitated under the Federal definition—that is, unable to engage in substantial gainful employment—with mandatory referral to a vocational rehabilitation agency; or, if she is not found to be incapacitated, the State would arrange for protective payments to a third party to insure that the needs of the children are provided for.

TAX CREDIT TO DEVELOP JOBS IN THE PRIVATE SECTOR

The provision of the present tax law under which an employer hiring a participant in the work incentive program is eligible for a tax credit equal to 20 percent of the employee's wages during the first 12 months of employment, with a recapture of the credit if the employer does not retain the employee for at least 1 additional year—unless the employee voluntarily leaves or is terminated for good cause—will be continued under the new guaranteed employment program.

Because the guaranteed job opportunity program, unlike the work incentive program, would be open to the head of any family with children, several limitations would be added to the provisions of the tax credit to insure that the credit meets the primary aim of expanding employment opportunities for participants in the committee's work program.

In order to create additional employment opportunities for participants in the guaranteed job program, the committee bill would extend the credit to private employers hiring participants in nonbusiness employment. Such a private employer taking the credit would not be eligible at the same time for the income tax child care or household expense deduction.

STARTING DATES FOR PROGRAMS

The effective date for the basic job opportunity program is January 1974. As of that date, families which include an employable adult—including a mother with no child under age 6—will no longer be eligible for welfare as their basic income. If unable to find a regular job, however, the family head will be assured of Government employment paying $1.50 an hour for 32 hours weekly, producing $2,400 of income annually, the same amount which would have been payable to a family of four under the House-passed family assistance plan.

The 10-percent work bonus and the wage supplement payment would become payable even before the full guaranteed employment program is operative. Specifically, the work bonus which will be paid quarterly to low-income workers will become effective starting in January 1973. The wage supplement for family heads in regular jobs not covered under the minimum wage law and paying less than $2 per hour will be effective July 1973, utilizing the services of the local employment service offices to make the payments until the Work Administration mechanism is functioning.

Mr. President, I have not dwelt at length on either of these highly significant programs which we bring before you. The professional standards review organization and the guaranteed job opportunity program are both highly innovative proposals designed to solve some of the most vexing problems we face in health and welfare. These provisions represent months of intensive work by the Committee on Finance and are worthy of the Senate's most understanding consideration.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BENNETT. I am happy to yield to the chairman of the committee.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I wish to congratulate the distinguished Senator from Utah for the magnificent statement he has made in opening this debate, and also to pay tribute to him for the tremendous contribution that he has made to this bill. On some occasions the committee workfare amendment has been referred to as the Long amendment because the Senator from Louisiana is chairman of the Committee on Finance, but the Senator from Utah (Mr. BENNETT) has contributed more detailed suggestions for this bill, and also more basic provisions, I should think, than anyone else on the committee, and at a minimum I would say that the committee amendment ought to be known as the Long-Bennett amendment.

I thank the distinguished Senator for his long hours of hard work on this bill and for his major contributions, as well as his statesmanship, although in some instances the measure might not have been popular with some people, and although in some instances what he was suggesting might have been a little ahead of public understanding of what he sought to achieve. As I mentioned earlier, he is especially deserving of credit for the amendment relating to professional standards review organizations.

I do not think the workfare provisions of the measure could have been put together without the many suggestions and the many answers that the Senator from Utah has provided. All of us on the committee are grateful to him for his contribution, and I believe the country will be grateful when it sees how well some of these provisions work out, because the Senator, time and again, has come up with the answers to specific problems that have arisen in connection with first one provision of the bill and then another.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I am very grateful and humbly appreciative of what the chairman has said. I am very honored to have it known as the Long-Bennett bill when it is being attacked, but when it is being praised I am perfectly willing to have it known as the Long bill, because the chairman cannot escape from the responsibility and the credit for the leadership that he has given to the members of the committee.

Those of us who work under him have come greatly to appreciate that quality of leadership, of understanding, and of support that he has given all of us, and I am delighted to work with him, to work at his side, and to work behind him as his supporter. I am happy if I have been able to make some contribution in ideas. Of course, none of us can claim that this particular section or that is our part of the bill, because we have the kind of committee that works as a unit, works cooperatively, and works hard on problems, and every member of the committee has made a contribution to the composite pattern which has emerged as H.R. 1.

I hope that the Senate will stand with us and approve it, thus justifying the many months of work we have put into it. I think it would be tragic if all of these efforts should now go down the drain, and I can assure the chairman that I am here to do everything I can to bring about its speedy passage.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield for one further statement, I am satisfied that the Senate will agree with 90 percent of the language that the committee has proposed, and that the Senate will agree that, of the $14 billion of expenditures in this bill, everything we are trying to do for people is something worth doing.

The only question that will be in the minds of some people is whether we should, at some point, insist that able-bodied people who need help get that assistance through their own work efforts, and thus provide some benefit to society for the support they are drawing from society. In doing so, they will better themselves and will set a fine example for their children. That will make better human beings, better citizens, and will provide a better example for their children.

I have no doubt that in due course the Nation will adopt the recommendation we have here for rewarding work effort.

The people of this Nation are not yet really aware of how liberal the committee provisions are with regard to the aged. Those provisions go far beyond anything that the House suggested, both in cost and the overall good it would do for people.

We feel that the aged have earned the right to retire and that right is fully guaranteed and protected, and to retire with an income that will permit them from living in poverty, when they decide they want to leave the labor force; but we do think that they should earn some right to retire through their work efforts prior to the time they reach age 65. I have no doubt that the majority of the people in the country agree with that philosophy and that when they have a chance to vote on it, they are going to make clear that this is what the majority of the people think.

There are many jobs that are asking for takers unsuccessfully today. We are not requiring someone to take one of those jobs. In addition, the committee bill provides for the creation of jobs so that every family head will be guaranteed a job. It may not be a high-paying job, but it will be one they are capable of doing and it will not be one that is too demanding upon them.

I have no doubt that the people of this Nation will approve the work ethic that is implicit in this bill.

I particularly appreciate the great contribution of the Senator, because he has been both a religious leader, as well as a business leader, and a leader in the public affairs in his State and in this Nation, and the work ethic has always been a part of him. He could not reflect any other philosophy if he tried, because it has been so much a part of his background and the philosophy of those who partake of his religion, as well as those who participate with him in his civic life in his own State. So the contribution he has made is in keeping with what his philosophy is and the philosophy of the people who have built this great Nation.

I applaud the Senator for the fine speech he has made today, and more so for the enormous contribution he has made in the last several years to the thinking that has gone into the making of this program.

Mr. BENNETT. I am still overcome and overwhelmed by the kind of things my chairman has had to say about me. Certainly, I believe with all my heart in the therapy and value of work. I believe that self-respect is probably as important, or more important, than self-maintenance. This is one of the things that comes to people who are able to support themselves.

As I made my speech, I stopped to emphasize—and I will just reemphasize again—that if, in our program, we were singling out heads of families with children of school age and expecting them to do what no other women in the United States were doing, I would be very much concerned. But when we realize again that one-half of the mothers whose children are of school age are today working, we are not asking these people who are now on welfare to do anything strange or unusual or asking them to suffer an unusual penalty. We are just asking them to do what 1 out of 2 of their sisters in the same situation have done voluntarily.

I will take a minute to remind the chairman and our friends in the Senate of an experience I have discussed in the committee.

A number of years ago, in my home city of Salt Lake, a woman who had been on welfare for a number of years, a mother with children in school, was offered a government job. She took it. Afterward, when talking to her, I got a new insight into the problem.

She said, "That was the most difficult decision I ever made in my life. On welfare, I had security. It's true I couldn't decide when my children would have milk, because the social worker decided that. She decided how much milk I could buy. She decided how my money was to be spent. I decided and made the choice and took the job. Now I am in control of my family, and I can make my own decisions."

Then she said that one day, as she was sitting in her home, working on some reports, in the summertime, by an open window, she heard her children and the neighbors' children arguing in the yard outside the window. One of the neighbors' children said:

I don't like to come over to your house anymore. Your mother is too strict.

She suddenly realized that since she had been employed and responsible, her concern for the well-being of her children has greatly increased and that she had been more strict. Prior to that time, she had sat around home and had let them go their own way, but now she was responsible and she was tightening up in the upbringing of her children.

She said she looked around her home and realized that it was better kept and that this experience of moving from the apathy of welfare to the responsibility of work had changed her whole attitude on life and had changed the atmosphere in which she was bringing up her children.

I think that would be the experience of practically all the women who might be worked into this new program. I think that the sense of satisfaction, the sense of accomplishment, the sense of achievement, as well as the sense of responsibility that come when people undertake to provide for themselves and their families, gradually erode and disappear under the constant dependence that exists when people live too long on someone else's bounty.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Madam President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. EDWARDS). The Senator will state it.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Is this bill now open to amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to amendment.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Madam President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask that it be read and made the pending order of business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read the amendment, as follows:

Amend section 105(a) relating to liberalization and automatic adjustment of the earnings test, by adding the following new paragraph at the end thereof:

(4) Paragraphs (c)(1), (d)(1) and (f)(1)(B), and (h)(1)(A), and subsection (j), of section 203 of the Social Security Act are each amended by striking out "seventy-two" and "72" and inserting in lieu thereof "sixty-five".

Amend the section heading of section 106, relating to exclusion of certain earnings, by striking out "72" and inserting in lieu thereof "65".

Amend section 106 by striking out "72" and inserting in lieu thereof "65".

Mr. GOLDWATER. Madam President, I have been asked by the distinguished Senator from Wyoming (Mr. McGEE) to yield briefly to him, which I am happy to do at this time.

Mr. McGEE. Madam President, I want to thank my colleague from Arizona for yielding to me.

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1972

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill (H.R. 1) to amend the Social Security Act, to make improvements in the medicare and medicaid programs, to replace the existing Federal-State public assistance programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Madam President, before making a few remarks on my amendment I want to compliment both the chairman and the senior Republican member for what I think is a great improvement in the legislation they originally had before them. I like very much what I heard in their comments. I am not certain whether I will support the bill as it is finally ready to be acted on but I believe it is a fine improvement over what we had been expecting.

Now, Madam President, in keeping with the notice I gave during testimony before the Senate Finance Committee on January 31, I send to the desk an amendment to completely repeal the earnings limitation for all social security beneficiaries who are 65 and over, and their dependents. As the law now stands, this limitation takes away from each social security receipient $1 in benefits for every $2 he earns in excess of $1,680 per year. If his earnings go above $2,880, his benefits are cut off completely. The only exception is for persons 72 and older.

Madam President, this is wrong. It is wrong logically, and I particularly feel that it is wrong morally. It is an outrage against millions of citizens who have made years of contributions out of their hard-earned salaries. It is an affront to the working man who has lived faithfully by the best rules of the American system. These citizens have not been a burden on the welfare rolls. They have not been tearing up the flag, blocking traffic, or shouting obscenities in the streets. If there are any individuals in our society who deserve our top priority attention, it is these law-abiding, working persons.

Madam President, the earnings test is wrong morally because social security should not be a contract to quit work. It is wrong logically because the person who is penalized is most often the one with the greatest need for more income than his benefits can provide. Income from investments is not counted in determining whether benefits shall be reduced. It is only the individual who continues to work who is penalized. This means we have the utterly illogical situation where a really wealthy person might draw tens of thousands of dollars a year from his investments and still receive his full social security check. At the same time, the man who has worked for a salary all of his life and who might need to continue working as a matter of economic survival cannot do so without a penalty.

Madam President, I think, more and more, as we travel to our homes and listen to people who are in their sixties or seventies, we realize that the social security benefits most Americans receive are not really sufficient to meet their cost of living. More and more of these people feel that they have to turn to some other employment, or continue employment in order to live.

To show how these things can happen, I remember when I went to work back in 1929, I saw a beautiful ad on the back of a magazine, long since defunct, that pictured a couple sitting under palm trees, or orange trees, in Florida—of course, today that would be in Arizona, but then it was in Florida—selling an insurance policy that would allow you to do all those things on $100 a month. I bought one and I do not believe that that $100 a month will keep my wife in hairdo's. But I am stuck with it. I feel very strongly about the fact, for example, that when I retire, I can, if I wish, draw my full social security benefits, yet I will have a rather substantial income when I retire because I have been working on it all my life. But I do not want to be penalized one bit and neither do I think it is right to go the other route and penalize a man who has set aside money so that he can retire by taking away his social security, because social security is actually an insurance policy that has been handled by the Federal Government and the money is owed to us. I do not believe there is any reason why it should be restrictive.

Madam President, I should add that a person who loses his social security benefits on account of working suffers a reduction in his disposable income larger than the sum of his benefits. This happens because for each dollar in tax-free, social security benefits which the person loses, he earns a dollar which is reduced by Federal, State, and local taxes and by all the expenses incidental to his work, including continued payroll contributions for social security which he is not receiving.

Madam President, there are 10 million Americans, roughly, eligible for social security benefits who are aged 65 to 72 or are the dependents of such persons. At least 2.5 million of them are directly affected by the earnings ceiling. Nearly a million earn enough so that they receive no benefits at all. Another million earn enough so that their benefits are reduced. About a half million more earn amounts which are only $100 or $200 below the ceiling. They are getting their full social security benefits, but nearly everyone of them is intentionally holding his earnings down because of the earnings limitation. Government studies prove that the greatest deterrent to work occurs at just below the ceiling level. In all, I repeat, 2.5 million Americans aged 65 to 72 now suffer because of the earnings limitation.

Madam President, it is time, in my opinion, that this statutory shackle was removed—completely. In my opinion, workers who have contributed from their earnings over a lifetime of work are entitled, as a matter of right, to receive benefits when they reach the annuity age.

Madam President, I emphasize, social security beneficiaries are not wards of the Government. They are not on relief. They are not objects of charity. They are self-respecting Americans who, in substantial part, have paid for the benefits which they will receive in old age.

Social security payments are not gratuities from a benevolent central government. They are essentially a repayment of our own earnings, which we have deposited in trust as a regular contribution and which has been deducted from our salaries and from our employers. This method was designed from the start as a guarantee that benefits would be paid as a matter of right, not of charity. In fact, as the program was first reported by the Committee on Ways and Means in 1935, there was no earnings test at all. Thus, a total repeal of the test today would restore the program to its original form.

Madam President, the cost to eliminate the retirement test completely for workers aged 65 and over is estimated to be no more than $2.2 billion in the first year, just $1 billion more than if the ceiling were simply raised to $3,000. These figures were given to me by the Social Security Administration after I asked it in February to consider these two alternatives.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that my exchange of letters with the Social Security Administration be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. GOLDWATER. Madam President, in 1958, the Advisory Council on Social Security Financing concluded that—

> The fact that the worker pays a substantial share of the cost of the benefit provided, in a way visible to all, is his assurance that he and his dependents will receive the scheduled benefits and that they will be paid as a matter of right without the necessity of establishing need.

I propose that we make this promise a truth by repealing the earnings test entirely for all of our older Americans.

I might add that if this amendment is approved it would still be entirely in order for the Senate to consider an additional amendment, such as the Mansfield amendment which I endorse, to lift the earnings ceiling to $3,000 for the 11.6 million social security beneficiaries who are under 65.

Madam President, the committee very graciously heard me on this matter earlier this year. I know that they are not kindly disposed toward this, although I have yet to hear a member of the committee say that I was wrong on the moral rightness of my approach. I think the objections stem more from the cost. I do not agree entirely that the cost would approach $2.2 billion, because conceivably income tax could get into the act and the people who would be gainfully employed would be paying taxes instead of not paying taxes, as most of them are doing today.

I do not intend to ask for a yea-and-nay vote on the amendment. Nor do I intend that this will be the last time that this subject will be touched on by me.

I come from a State that has the second highest number of retirees percentagewise in the Nation. And I have watched people lose their purchasing power year by year by year. I have watched people, who felt they could get along on social security, start out doing it and then find slowly that they cannot hack it, as we say.

Madam President, this is not just for those who are retired and live in my State. It is also for those people all over this Nation who cannot live on social security or cannot live well on social security or as well as they have been used to living with their earnings.

I would hope, of course, that the chairman of the committee would in his gracious wisdom and kindness agree with the junior Senator from Arizona and accept the amendment. However, I would like to hear what comments the Senator from Utah might care to make on the subject.

FEBRUARY 1, 1972.

Hon. ROBERT M. BALL,
Commissioner, Social Security Administration, Baltimore, Md.

DEAR COMMISSIONER BALL: On October 26, you were good enough to give me a very detailed answer relative to some questions of mine on repealing the earnings test. Since then, I have had some further thoughts on the issue and would appreciate it very much if you could provide me with answers to some new questions I have.

First, what is the total number of persons aged 65 and over but not yet 72 who were eligible for Social Security cash benefits on January 1, 1972? Second, what would the combined additional contributions have to be to support the program for the next 75 years if the retirement test were removed for everyone aged 65 and over? Third, what would such combined contributions have to be in order to support a lifting of the earnings ceiling to $3,000 instead of $1,680? Fourth, what would the combined additional contribution be if the earnings test were repealed for everyone aged 65 and over but the increased benefits for persons now age 65 or over were financed out of general appropriations?

This information is very important to me, and I would appreciate it if you would try to put together the data as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

BARRY GOLDWATER.

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION,
Baltimore, Md., April 7, 1972.

Hon. BARRY GOLDWATER,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR GOLDWATER: This is in further reply to your letter of February 1, requesting additional information about the cost of modifying the retirement test. Each estimate shown below is numbered in the same order that the corresponding question was presented in your letter. All estimates of cost represent costs over present law.

1. On January 1, 1972, there were an estimated 10.0 million persons eligible for social security cash benefits who either were (i) aged 65–71 on that date—some 9.1 million—or (ii) not aged 65–71, but were dependents of a worker aged 65–71 whose earnings would affect the receipt of benefits by the dependent—about 0.9 million.

2. The cost to eliminate the retirement test for workers aged 65 and over is estimated to be 0.66% of covered taxable earnings, over the next 57 years. Additional benefit payments in the first full year, assumed to be the 12-month period beginning July 1973, are estimated at $2.2 billion.

3. If the retirement test were modified, for all persons eligible for benefits regardless of age, as follows:

(i) increase the annual exempt amount of earnings from $1,680 to $3,000, and

(ii) withhold $1 for every $2 of earnings above the annual exempt amount (as provided in H.R. 1 as passed by the House of Representatives), the cost over the next 75 years is estimated at 0.34% of taxable payroll. Additional benefit payments in the first full year are estimated at $1.2 billion.

If the changes were limited to workers aged 65 and over, the 75-year cost would be an estimated 0.32% of taxable payroll; and the first-year cost is estimated at $700 million.

4. If the retirement test were eliminated for workers aged 65 and over, and if the resulting additional benefit payments to those workers who are aged 65 and over on the effective date of the proposed change (and to their dependents) were to be financed from general revenues, the 75-year cost of the additional benefits payable to workers reaching age 65 after the effective date (and to their dependents) is estimated to be 0.63% of taxable payroll.

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT M. BALL,
Commissioner of Social Security.

Mr. BENNETT. Madam President, this is a problem that the Finance Committee has looked at every time we have had a social security bill. There is a lot of appeal to the proposal to eliminate the social security earnings limit. But there are some considerations here that I think the Senate should realize before it votes.

The amendment would eliminate the social security retirement test. If this amendment were to go into effect, every insured person, when he reaches the age of 65, would automatically qualify for social security, even though he goes on working.

Madam President, I have not checked the figure lately, but the last time that I checked it, the average age of retirement of social security recipients was around 68, rather than 65. So, this would eliminate the concept that social security is designed to take care of people after they retire. It would open instead the idea that whenever a person reaches the age of 65, he automatically qualifies for an annuity whether he retires or not.

I was a member of the Finance Committee when we changed the law to allow people to draw social security automatically when they reach the age of 72 on the theory that by that time not only would there be very few of them who were actually working and drawing salaries or wages, but also that the opportunity for people above the age of 72 to do temporarily part-time work was comparatively small.

The Senator from Arizona says that the main objection to this may be the cost. I think we should look at that. It will cost about $2½ billion. That is equivalent to 5 percent of the present cost of social security cash benefits.

We on the Finance Committee have always prided ourselves on the fact that whenever we have recommended increases in social security benefits, we have recommended increases in the tax to cover the cost.

When Congress increased social security benefits 20 percent just a few months ago, we increased the tax. However, in order to lighten the burden of the increase, we said that it would no longer be expected that the social security trust fund would be equivalent to 12 months' payments. We said that we would be satisfied if it were only 9 months' payments. So, we took advantage of this one-time shift in an attempt to save ourselves from having to increase the tax quite as much to cover the future cost of the 20-percent increase. But this was a one-time affair. It is not available to us now.

We have studied the measure before us, and with the additional benefis that the committee has written into the bill, beginning in January 1973, the social security tax will have to rise for each employee and his employer from 5.5 percent of the payroll under present law to 6 percent of the payroll.

If we adopt the amendment of the Senator from Arizona and fund it, we would have to push that up to 6.3 percent of the payroll. And this is part of the problem that people can face. Are the present employees who are paying into the social security trust fund willing to see their social security taxes increased by 5 percent so that people who do not quit working at the age of 65 can automatically add the social security payments to their earned income?

And I am one, Madam President, of a very limited group. I am still paying social security taxes because I am still drawing a salary. And I have passed the age of 72. So it comes both ways for me. I am getting a benefit that comes automatically. However, I am still paying a social security tax.

Under the proposal of the Senator from Arizona, not only would I continue to receive benefits, but all of my friends between the ages of 65 and 72 who have not retired would suddenly become social security recipients.

If we are going to talk about distributing the $2½ billion to social security recipients, is there a better way? This proposal would mean that approximately 800,000 people who have not retired at all would get most of this $2½ billion. There are 700,000 people who have retired partly who would get a little of the money. However, most of this would go to 800,000 people. That would be a real windfall for them since they are all still working.

If we can persuade ourselves that social security taxpayers are willing to increase their tax burden by 5 percent, do we think it is best to give it to 800,000 people or do we want to spread it across the board to all 28 million beneficiaries?

As the Senator from Arizona has already indicated, there is a bill before the Senate with 78 cosponsors that would increase the amount that a person can earn and still maintain his right to claim social security from the present $1,680 to $3,000. The committee recommended $2,400.

The additional $600, the difference between the committee bill and the Mansfield amendment, would cost $600 million, which is approximately one-fourth of what the amendment of the Senator from Arizona would cost. So we are talking now about alternatives.

I think if we were to adopt the amendment of the Senator from Arizona it is hard for me to believe that the Senate would then move back and take a $3,000 limit. I think we are talking about the ultimate and I would have hoped, although this is the privilege of the Senator from Arizona, that we could have voted on the lower one first and then face this one.

I would like to ask the Senator from Arizona whether he is willing to amend his amendment to increase the tax by 5 percent to cover this cost.

Mr. GOLDWATER. No. because, as I said in my statement, I am not convinced the figures supplied me and the figures the Senator from Utah used are correct. I think the income tax levied against income earnings in the wages we are talking about would offset this. I would not approve at this time of an amendment to my amendment. I do not think it would even be in order to raise the social security 5 percent. I recognize as well as the Senator from Utah that if we go beyond a certain point the entire social security system is going to fail. We did not think about these things when it started. Had we thought about these things when the program started maybe we would have made the program voluntary.

Let me point out that while we may say the age of 65 is a retirement age, the Senator from Utah knows full well, having been a businessman as I have been a businessman, that is a rather old age today in American business and it is very difficult to get a job in this country today when you are past the age of 40. So we are not talking about, in my opinion, something we know all about. It is very easy to say it is going to cost $2.2 billion on one approach or $1.6 billion on another approach, but the fact remains this is not a Government benefit. That is, we do not think it is. Maybe the social security funds are all out on I O U's. I do not know. I would like to think that the money I have put into social security is in a trust fund and is not being used for other purposes, but the fact that I and other Americans paid in an amount of money to provide ourselves with income after retirement, I do not think there should be any test that says, "You cannot have it."

This is the moral argument I am using. It involves two mistakes: One, we should not necessarily say when a man should retire. We assume 65 is the age, but I can remember when men were employed at 65, but that is not the rule today, and the rule is being changed very rapidly.

I get back to my basic argument. I think it is an illogical test, an immoral and unmoral test.

Mr. BENNETT. With respect to the Senator's statement that we should have thought about these things when the program was started, I remember that my father used to say, "We are faced with a condition, not a theory."

This is a retirement program. He cannot retire until he is age 65 and get the full benefit of social security. Under other provisions in the law he can retire at age 62 and get an actuarially reduced amount. This is his choice. But the Senator's proposal would turn this from a retirement benefit into a plain annuity.

I am interested in the Senator's use of the word "moral." I am not sure there is any moral content in the decision made 35 years ago to make this a retirement program rather than an annuity program. Of course, the Senator knows the money that he and I have paid into social security all these years is not sitting somewhere in the fund. As I explained earlier, as the result of changes we made in the social security law when we put in the 20-percent increase a few months ago, we reduced the amount that the Social Security System is required to keep on hand: the equivalent of three-fourths of a year's payout; it is a revolving fund. That is all it is.

We are paying out now approximately as much as we take in, but we are holding three-fourths of the year's dollars in there as a kind of contingency fund. So that is the way it is.

As much as I realize the emotional appeal of this amendment, I think there are some practical problems that lead the Senate not to adopt the proposal.

I realize when we get to the Mansfield amendment, with 78 cosponsors, that is going to be adopted. There is no question about that unless 29 of them have deserted and changed their minds.

I appreciate the fact that the Senator from Arizona is not asking for a record vote, and unless there is some further discussion I would be perfectly willing to go to a vote on it.

Mr. GOLDWATER. I have no further arguments to offer. It is a little amazing to me, though, to hear that the Senator does not feel there is a responsibility for each American to receive the money he has paid into what we like to think of as an actuarily sound annuity program. If I had the program with a private company and paid in every month, I would certainly expect to be paid back by that company in full when I reached the age of contract or the age of retirement. I realize the position of the committee, I realize the position of the House. I am a cosponsor of the Mansfield amendment. I joined that knowing that my approach, even though in my opinion it is needed and demanded by social security recipients across the country, might not pass.

So Madam President, if there are no further arguments, as far as I am concerned we can vote.

Mr. BENNETT. Madam President, I cannot resist the temptation to make one further comment. Just after the social security law was passed in late 1930's the Supreme Court had before it the question of whether or not under the social security law every person who paid into it had a specific claim on the money he paid, as one does when he pays into a privately financed annuity program. The Supreme Court decided there was no relationship between the amount of money one pays into social security and the amount one receives. One is a tax, the other is a benefit. On that basis there are single people who can pay into social security until they reach the age of 64, die, and get nothing back.

There are some people who can begin paying when they are 63½ pay the minimum number of quarters, and get benefits, while those of us like the Senator from Arizona and I, who have paid in ever since the first social security tax payment, may get more or less, because of the amount of time we have paid in.

This bill has the provision in another section which says that any person who has paid in for 30 years, regardless of the amount paid in, would be assured of an income of $200 a month, even though, under the present law, he might draw only the minimum benefit. So we have tried to recognize the equities of the person who has paid in for all his working life.

But the Social Security System is judged by the Supreme Court as a two-part system. It is a tax collection program and it is a program to pay out benefits, and the two are not necessarily dependent on each other.

Madam President, the Senator from Arizona has moved his amendment, and I think we are ready to vote on it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Arizona (putting the question).

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Madam President, I might say that is the way I like to lose—2-to-1. I am getting used to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. BENNETT. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the name of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mrs. EDWARDS) be added as a cosponsor—which makes the total number of sponsors, I believe, 79—of the amendment I am about to call up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Madam President, I call up the amendment I originally introduced in the form of a bill (S. 4001) on behalf of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana now presiding (Mrs. EDWARDS), the senior Senator from Vermont (Mr. AIKEN), and the 76 others who have joined as cosponsors.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

On page 89, lines 13, 17, and 24, delete "$200" and insert in lieu thereof "$250".

Mr. MANSFIELD. Madam President, there is little to say as to this amendment except that it is a long overdue amendment which would tie in with the proposal now before the Senate for consideration. There is in the bill a proviso raising the annual amount which can be earned as outside income by social security retirees, people who have earned their retirement, from $1,680 up to $2,400. My amendment would raise the amount of income which could be earned without penalty to the sum of $3,000 per year.

This amendment would provide greater equity for older Americans whose existence is tied primarily to social security. It does so in two major ways. First, it increases from $1,680 to $3,000 the outside income a social security pensioner is entitled to receive without penalty. The second main feature is that it would reduce the amount by which the petitioner would be penalized should his outside earnings exceed the exemption.

The total effect of the amendment, Madam President, would be to bring greater relief to senior citizens, or at least those of them who happen to be subject to the social security laws. It is in line with past efforts of Congress to grant more equitable treatment to older Americans; and no one in this body has been more diligent in that respect than the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG), the chairman of the Committee on Finance and the manager of the bill now pending.

In this regard, the Senate would do well to recall that it was Congress on its own—and I repeat that, it was Congress on its own, and especially the Senate—that granted a full 20-percent increase in benefits to social security pensioners this year. Those of us who have cosponsored this legislation believe that this amendment is in keeping with that outstanding record, and I would hope that the Senate would see fit to give its consent to this amendment, so that this glaring inequity which has existed for all too many years—I might and will say too many decades—could be corrected and be brought more in accord with the economic situation, as it affects our older citizens, which exists at this time.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I think it might come as a surprise to Senators to find that of our 20 million citizens over 65 years of age, there would at most be about 1.9 million, or fewer than 2 million of those citizens, who would be favorably affected by the amendment. The rest of our aged citizens would not be benefited by it.

The reason for that is that after age 72, of course, there is no retirement test, and of those between age 65 and age 72 who are working, most of them receive little earnings. There are 6.5 million who have no earnings at all, and therefore would get no benefit from this provision.

The committee has placed the earnings test at $2,400; and therefore, of those who have earnings, since the number with earnings who would receive no earnings would be increased, the number who would benefit by the amendment is even less than that.

It can be argued, and is generally the view of the committee and of the administration, that the $600 million cost of this amendment could better be spent on other social security benefits that would benefit the entire 28 million persons drawing social security pensions, such as an increase in across-the-board payments, or providing drugs over and above the amounts provided in the bill, or providing more health benefits, or in reducing the price that aged people must pay under part B of medicare for the benefits they are enjoying. In other words, while this amendment has a great deal of appeal to recommend it, other provisions can be found where we could take the same amount of money, $600 million, and benefit a great number of other people who have greater need for it.

I am aware of the fact that a majority of the Senate has joined as cosponsors of the amendment. Therefore, I recognize the Senate would probably be disposed to agree to the amendment; but those of us on the committee have been persuaded by the Department that we could probably find a better way to spend the money, one that is more meaningful and more beneficial to a greater number of people.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that during the consideration of this bill, Dr. Laurence Woodworth and two other members of the staff of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation be permitted on the floor in order to help us with the technical aspects of this bill under consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. I ask unanimous consent that Mr. Goeffrey Peterson and Mr. John Koskinen, who are assistants on the staff of Senator RIBICOFF, be permitted on the floor during consideration of this measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MILLER. Madam President, I believe that the chairman of the Finance Committee, the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG), has pointed out one of the reasons for the determination of the Finance Committee to increase the earnings limitation to $2,400 a year, rather than to $3,000.

Another aspect of this matter that should be brought to the attention of the Senate is that there is an inequity in the pending amendment, because it treats all social security recipients alike, and they are not all alike at all. Some of them receive the maximum social security and some receive the minimum. When it comes to earnings that are necessary to provide a minimal standard of living, let alone what we might call a decent standard of living, those who are receiving the minimum social security ought to be allowed to earn more without penalty than those who receive the maximum social security.

I believe that those who have cosponsored this amendment perhaps have not thought of this aspect of the matter, because I am quite sure that they want to recognize the differences among the social security recipients. They want to encourage them to work, and have meaningful income, in order to supplement their social security; but particularly they want to do this for those who need it.

I suggest that a social security individual with $1,000 a year in social security benefits is going to have to earn a great deal more in order to have a decent standard of living than someone who is receiving $2,400 a year.

What really ought to be done—and I regret that I did not realize this amendment was coming up at this time—is to increase this earnings limit to $3,000, but to do it in the case of the low-income social security recipient and then scale it down according to the degree of the increase in the social security benefits received by the individual. If $3,000 is our target, and one is receiving $1,000 in social security benefits, that is fine. If one is receiving $2,400 a year in social security benefits, then let them earn up to $1,680, as they can now, without penalty.

This amendment, I am afraid, has not been thought through and there is an inequity that is going to result from it. I think this should be pointed out to the Senate.

If this were modified to treat the differences in social security receipts in a way that would enable the earnings to be increased according to the amount of social security benefits, I would suggest that a very substantial savings would be made in the $600 million price tag on this amendment. This saving could well be put to some other areas of need, such as the drug costs to which the Senator from Louisiana has referred. I thought that I should bring this matter to the attention of my colleague.

Mr. PERCY. Madam President, I wish to indicate my support of the amendment to increase the amount of money a social security recipient can earn from $1,680 to $3,000.

The committee version of H.R. 1 raises the amount of money a social security recipient can earn without suffering a loss of benefits from $1,680 to $2,400. Beyond $2,400, a person suffers a $1 for $2 reduction in benefits.

This amendment raises the social security earnings limitation from $1,680 to $3,000 upon enactment of H.R. 1. This is the figure I recommended to the Senate Finance Committee in formal testimony on January 27 of this year.

Madam President, mail I have received indicates that there is no single aspect of social security which surpasses the earnings limitation in its unpopularity. Elderly Americans think it ludicrous—and so do I—that wealthy older citizens can receive $100,000 in dividends from stocks and bonds, and still retain their full social security benefits. Yet if they work, their payments are reduced if they earn more than $1,680 a year. If one is receiving an outside unearned income, he retains full benefits. If he is receiving earned income from working, he suffers a loss in benefits.

Now, if a recipient earns between $1,680 and $2,880 in 1 year, he suffers a $1 for $2 reduction in benefits. As proposed in the committee bill, this reduction would begin after $2,400. Under the pending amendment, there would be no $1 for $1 reduction. The reduction would remain $1 for $2 even beyond $3,000.

A full quarter of the 20 million elderly Americans live at or near the poverty level. Many of these people are poor for the first time in their lives and for reasons beyond their control. For instance, some have lost private pension rights due to plant shutdowns, even though they may have served a company for as long as 15 or 20 years. Others have worked throughout their lives, but because their incomes were never more than marginal, they never could accumulate large savings or invest sufficiently in stocks and bonds to provide an adequate retirement income. Still others may have saved for their retirement years, but found their savings completely wiped out because of serious and prolonged illness.

The present system offers these people two choices: They can attempt to supplement their social security incomes by working, or they can try to do so by going on welfare. Those who are able and willing to work can retain only a modest portion of their earnings over $1,680.

In addition to economic need, we should also consider the need of all elderly people—indeed, of all people—to contribute to society through working, and to feel that one's contribution has a value. In this connection, I would like to cite some responses to a questionnaire I gave to the Illinois delegates to the White House Conference on Aging. The specific question I asked was this: Do you feel inadequate income is the most serious problem facing the aged? If not, what do you feel is the most serious problem? Some of the answers were:

Inadequate income is one of the most serious problems, but we might give almost equal weight to the problem of loss of one's role in society.

Insufficient income is a significant problem . . . but equally important are social interaction and work.

I agree that inadequate income is the most serious problem confronting many senior citizens today, but for many others, in almost equal numbers, lack of a satisfying role in their later years is most serious, and for them, finding a place in society will compensate for a lack of income or meet their needs more adequately than money can.

Among the less visible problems are loneliness, a feeling of purposelessness, a feeling of rejection, and other causes that contribute to mental deterioration.

The earnings limitation not only runs counter to the high value our society places on independence and the willingness of individuals to support themselves, but it also actively discourages many elderly persons from finding meaningful jobs.

I would like to see the earnings limitation abolished completely, but to be practical, I support the move to raise it immediately to $3,000.

Madam President, I am pleased that the Senate adopted this amendment that I have cosponsored by the overwelming vote of 76 to 5. I only regret that business in Chicago in connection with my official Senate business this morning prevented my return to Washington until shortly after the vote.

Mr. SPONG. Madam President, I am pleased to cosponsor the amendment offered by the distinguished majority leader to increase the earnings limitation under social security from $1,680 to $3,000 per year.

In a land with as many resources as ours, our retired citizens should be able to spend their retirement years in dignity. Retirement should not mean a reduction in their standards of living. It should not mean difficulties in meeting ordinary financial obligations. Yet, in all too many instances, this is exactly what it does mean.

One way of countering the financial difficulties faced by many of our retirees is to raise the existing earnings limitation—a limitation which is clearly inadequate for these times. I am pleased that the Senate is addressing itself to this today.

There are, however, other actions which should also be taken. In a recent speech prepared for delivery to a retired Federal employees meeting in Portsmouth, Va. I outlined some of these other actions which I believe should be taken to assist our senior citizens and I ask unanmous consent that a copy of that speech be placed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REMARKS BY SENATOR WILLIAM B. SPONG, JR.

During the last five and a half years, I have had the privilege of meeting with many senior citizens. Members of both the retired Federal employees and the association of retired persons have been helpful to me in formulating ideas and in understanding your needs.

I believe I do understand your needs and your problems. Your correspondence has been helpful also.

As a result of these conversations, I decided to concentrate my efforts on legislation affecting senior citizens in four general areas.

1. Tax relief
2. Cost-of-living increases
3. Health insurance costs
4. Realistic annuities

Retirement is a time when most people should be giving more of their time and efforts to community affairs. You have a right to maintain a standard of living comparable to that which you had achieved at the time of your retirement.

Instead, you have watched the cost of living go up and up while your standard of living has gone down and down.

I have concluded that property tax relief for senior citizens should be a first priority in tax reform.

It is unconscionable that our retired citizens—those who have worked long and hard for many years—should be forced to give up their homes or spend an excessive amount of their funds on property taxes. For many of our senior citizens, however, this is exactly what has happened. Faced with limited incomes, usually substantially reduced from what they were during working years, unable or incapable of continuing to work, and often plagued by increasing medical bills, many of our retired people find the property tax particularly burdensome—and continuously growing.

Property taxes have doubled in the past fifteen years. Partially as a result, it is now estimated that close to one million elderly homeowners with annual incomes below $3,000 are forced to turn over 10 percent or more of their total money income for property taxes. Others must restrict spending for needed items in order to meet the tax bills. It is also estimated that many elderly renters pay 25 percent of their rent for property taxes.

I have therefore cosponsored legislation to provide a tax credit against the Federal income tax for property taxes paid by elderly homeowners on owner-occupied dwellings and for that portion of rent resulting from property taxes.

I hope that all levels of government will work together to devise a workable and adequate system of property tax relief for the elderly, and I pledge my support to those efforts. In a nation as wealthy as ours, we should certainly take those actions necessary to see that our retired citizens live in dignity, that they are able to acquire those items they need, that they are able to have some of the pleasantries of life which will make their retirement years enjoyable ones.

In early 1971, I also cosponsored legislation to provide some relief from Federal income taxation for retired Federal employees.

Neither income from social security nor railroad retirement is taxable and equity demands that Federal employees be treated similarly.

As you well know, inflation and continuing increases in the cost of living fall hardest on those living on social security, pensions and other fixed incomes.

More than 532,000 Virginians should benefit from the social security increases recently enacted by Congress. The increases became effective September 1 and will be reflected in the checks which beneficiaries receive early in October.

The recent increase in social security benefits was a step in the right direction, but we must also take other actions. There is no reason why a man or woman—simply because he or she retires—should be forced to reduce substantially his standard of living. Among the other actions we should take is an increase in the earnings limitation under social security. Those who are able to work and want to work in their later years should not be unduly penalized for doing so. The existing earnings limitation of $1,680 is clearly out-dated and should be revised upward in light of increases in the cost of living. This is proposed in H.R. 1 and I urge final action on such an increase before this Congress adjourns.

Many of you are probably not covered by social security and may never be. For those of you who may have had some social security coverage and lost it, you will be interested in knowing that legislation is pending in the House Committee which is designed to correct this. It would provide for an interchange of social security and civil service credits to enable individuals who have some coverage under both systems to obtain maximum benefits based on combined service.

You are all familiar with the cost-of-living increases built into the retirement system. These cost of living increases are triggered by the consumer price index.

I have become increasingly concerned with respect to the application of the index. At worst, it may be the product of manipulation to convince the public that inflation is under control. At least it may be a misapplication of the statistics to accomplish the same purpose or to keep the costs down of those programs which are dependent upon the index. These include civil service as well as military retirement pay.

Early in May I recommended to the chairman of the Joint Economic Committee that an investigation be made of the consumer price index. I offered to introduce the resolution to authorize the study if legislation was needed.

It does not necessarily reflect the cost of living for a retired couple. Many types of costs are peculiar to senior citizens. The committee has assured me that it will take this into consideration during the statistical review.

One of those major costs relate to health care. At the same time I cosponsored a bill to provide tax relief, I cosponsored legislation to increase the Government's share of the premiums for Federal Health Insurance.

Until a few days ago, Federal employees and annuitants were optimistic about the prospects of the Government paying a bigger share of their health insurance costs than it is paying today. They had every reason to be optimistic. A bill had passed both the House and the Senate.

Unfortunately, the bill is stymied over an issue unrelated to the 575,000 annuitants under the health insurance program. I hope that this stalemate may be broken before the Congress adjourns.

I know that you are interested in the legislation to increase annuities to a realistic figure. This is particularly important to those who retired prior to 1969 when annuities were based on the average of the high five years of employment. There are a number of bills pending in both the Senate and House which vary considerably. Some would provide graduated increases just for those who retired prior to 1969. This is on the assumption that the change to the high three year average along with the cost of living increases would take care of the rest of them. There are other bills which would provide higher increases for all those who retired between January 73 and 74 with reduced increases for those who retire after that time. This is on the assumption that the salaries will have picked up the slack in the meantime. There have been hearings held and I wish I could tell you that legislation would be enacted. You have probably heard me say that I thought one of the problems with people running for public office was over-promise; I do not want to be guilty of that. I am not optimistic abount annuity increases being enacted during this session.

I hope the prospects improve with respect to legislation which I know is important to you.

Thank you again for giving me the opportunity to meet with you.

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1972

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill (H.R. 1) to amend the Social Security Act, to make improvements in the medicare and medicaid programs, to replace the existing Federal-State public assistance programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, those of us who serve on the Committee on Finance are ready to vote on further amendments. There may be an amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. RIBICOFF). I understand that it has not yet been drafted. I believe the Senator intends to explain his views tomorrow to the Senate on this issue. I am not aware of other amendments that Senators may wish to offer at this time. I can understand why they are not prepared to offer amendments. They could not gear their amendments to specific language in the bill, and the bill was not available in print until noon today.

If there are no amendments that Senators wish to offer at this time, I think the Senate would be well advised to turn to another measure. If Senators wish to offer amendments to H.R. 1 now and vote on them, I am ready to go forward.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I agree with the chairman of the committee that probably one of the most controversial parts of this huge bill, with its overwhelming number of pages, sections, and provisions, will be title IV, the question of welfare reform.

I will have my speech and explanation ready tomorrow morning when the Chair recognizes me. I will be on the floor to explain it. The amendment, which combines the conversations I have had over the last few months with the administration to see if we could work out an agreement, will be the amendment I will put in, the substitute amendment No. 559.

As I explained to the chairman of the committee and the leader, there is no reason whatever to drag this debate on. Under no circumstances would I have this amendment stand in the way of the passage or adoption of the many fine parts of the bill which the Committee on Finance worked on so long and so hard over many, many months in order to achieve.

I have in mind probably calling up the amendment Tuesday morning, and when I get recognition and make it the pending business I am sure that with an agreement between the chairman of the committee and the ranking minority member we could arrive at an expeditious understanding as to when we would vote on my substitute for title IV. There will be ample time to discuss it. But I say to the majority whip, who is here, that we could work expeditiously on this important measure.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Would the Senator, in view of the fact that there will undoubtedly be a sizable number of amendments offered to the substitute, be prepared to offer his amendment on Monday rather than on Tuesday?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I do not know at the present time if there will be a sizable number of amendments.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. There may be.

Mr. RIBICOFF. There my be. My feeling is if this is going to develop it will end up as a basic choice between my proposal and the committee proposal. To my knowledge, unless the ranking minority member is aware that someone will offer the original welfare proposal of H.R. 1, to date no one is prepared to do this.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield.

Mr. BENNETT. I understand that the original H.R. 1 will be offered.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Very well.

Mr. BENNETT. I am not completely sure who will offer it, but it will be offered. Whether it will come as a substitute for the Senator's or ahead of the Senator's, I do not know, but at least a time pattern could be worked out.

Mr. RIBICOFF. My objective is to bring this issue to a vote in the Senate. I am more than willing to work with the leadership, the chairman, and the distinguished Senator from Utah to see if we can expeditiously dispose of this issue that has been around for 3 years.

Mr. BENNETT. It is my understanding that other alternatives will be offered, so there will be three alternatives to look at.

Mr. RIBICOFF. The Senate should have an opportunity to make up its mind which proposal it wishes to adopt. I know the distinguished Senator from Delaware (Mr. ROTH) has worked hard on a proposal that is similar to what we discussed in the Committee on Finance in 1969. I know he will want an opportunity to present his point of view.

My point of view is that if we debate this with thought and concern and the objective, "Let us decide this issue this session," I am positive we can do it expeditiously.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Would the Senator be ready and willing to lay down his amendment on, say, Monday, rather than on Tuesday?

Mr. RIBICOFF. Monday night. I think I might be able to work that out so that it would be laid before the Senate on Monday night and made the pending business and start to work on it Tuesday morning. I think this could be worked out. I will be in touch with the minority leader, the ranking minority leader, and the Senator from West Virginia to see if we can come to an understanding.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, as to further amendments to be called up at this time, does the ranking member of the committee know of any?

Mr. BENNETT. We know of none.

ORDER FOR CONTINUATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1972 TOMORROW MORNING

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow, at the conclusion of the routine morning business, the Senate resume the condition of H.R. 1 and that the unfinished business be then temporarily laid aside and remain in a temporarily laid-aside status until an hour tomorrow to be determined by the distinguished majority leader or his designee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1618

(Ordered to be printed and to lie on the table.)

OLDER AMERICANS SHOULD RECEIVE THE FULL AMOUNT OF SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFIT INCREASES WITHOUT CUTBACKS

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I am today introducing legislation that would enable those older Americans receiving social security and other old-age assistance to obtain the full benefit of the social security increase that becomes effective on October 1, 1972.

This bill is designed to close a loophole in the Social Security Act that mandates a dollar-for-dollar reduction in public assistance payments and program benefits in the event that a recipient of these programs is also receiving social security.

Mr. President, in October, over 511,200 Minnesota social security recipients will find their benefits increased as a result of Congress passing the 20-percent social security increase. Yet, because the increase did not carry with it a "pass through" provision, many of these recipients actually stand to lose benefits as a result of the increase. Thus, over 3,000 people in Hennepin County who receive both old-age assistance and social security will find that the old-age assistance has been cut back dollar for dollar to take into account the social security increase. The same effect will be felt by those persons and families who receive medical assistance, food stamps, public housing, and veterans pensions.

Mr. President, last year when the Congress passed the 10 percent social security increase, many older Americans faced the same problem then as they do now—the Federal Government is giving with one hand and taking the increase away with the other hand. Last year, as this year, it is a case of invisible hands moving from invisible pockets.

Almost to the day last year, on September 24, 1971, I introduced S. 2576—this legislation is currently pending before the Finance Committee—and its purpose is the same as the legislation I am introducing today: to pass through for old-age assistance and Federal assistance programs such as food stamps and veterans pensions.

Mr. President, I call the attention of the Senate to this previous legislation precisely because I believe that we must now move to end the necessity to return to the Congress immediately after a social security increase is passed to seek a rider that would allow benefits to be "passed through."

The legislation I am introducing today would be that kind of legislation. It would prevent any loss in benefits by requiring that social security increases be disregarded when determining benefits for other assistance programs.

Mr. President, it is my hope that when the social security provisions of H.R. 1 are considered by the Senate that the Senate will close this loophole and injustice to older Americans.

AMENDMENT NO. 1621

(Ordered to be printed and to lie on the table.)

Mr. MONDALE. Mr. President, the Finance Committee's version of H.R. 1, which we have before us, is an important step forward in our efforts to treat the elderly fairly in America.

When taken together with the 20-percent social security increase which the Congress passed on June 29, it represents a major and long overdue recognition of our obligations to our senior citizens.

Title XVI of the Finance Committee bill deals with assistance to the aged, blind, and disabled. These are the poorest of the poor—the ones who need help the most. When title XVI goes into effect in January 1974, it will guarantee a minimum $130 old age assistance standard to every elderly citizen.

And because it allows elderly citizens to have $50 in social security or other similar income without losing any of the $130 in assistance, the passage of title XVI will mean that an elderly person with a small amount of social security income will be guaranteed $180 a month.

This is a great improvement over the old age assistance standard which now prevails in many States.

But it will be 15 months before the major changes incorporated in title XVI can be put into effect. The problem is what to do for these poverty stricken senior citizens until January 1974, when title XVI becomes law. Unless we act, thousands of elderly people, who receive both small social security checks and old age assistance may not receive 1 penny of additional benefits for 15 months. For these people who could benefit substantially from the 20-percent social security increase which was passed in June, there may be no increase at all for this whole period of 15 months.

Let me read parts of two letters I have received from Minnesota concerning this pitiful and cruel situation.

One poverty stricken widow wrote to me saying that:

> The Minneapolis Housing Authority is raising my rent as a result of my increase in Social Security . . . and I will be losing my food stamps also. The way I figure it, I would be better off without the raise.

Another elderly couple in Cushing, Minn., sent me the notice of a rent increase they had received from the housing authority and said that their old-age assistance check was being reduced dollar for dollar to take away every cent of the social security increase. The elderly wife wrote:

> Senator, I just haven't been able to keep up as it is and now to get a cut in our Old Age checks. Living is so terribly high. Everything is so terribly high. We pay taxes, insurance, we have payments. We don't begin to have what we need.
> My husband is a cripple from arthritis and 79. We are two people that just don't like to beg. We have no other income, just our Social Security and Old Age Assistance . . . and now giving more on Social Security but taking away Old Age Assistance . . . we aren't getting any raise. What can be done?

These are typical letters. Recipients of old-age assistance and aid to the blind and disabled, those with veterans' pensions, people receiving food stamps, the medically indigent, and many people in public housing are finding that the 20-percent social security increase will mean a reduction or even a loss of these other benefits.

They may lose all or part of the 20-percent social security increase because present law allows the States to cut old-age assistance levels dollar for dollar to absorb that raise.

They may lose food stamp benefits.

Some—the "medically indigent"—may lose part of their medicare benefits.

Some will see their public housing rents raised to cut deeply into the 20-percent social security increase which we wanted for them.

So our immediate problem is to develop a formula to guarantee the elderly the increase in benefits right now. The provisions of title XVI will be effective in 15 months—but 15 months is a very long time for an elderly citizen to wait for some small improvement in his standard of living.

On September 21, I introduced a bill to guarantee that all social security recipients receive the full benefit of the 20 percent social security increase. The amendment which my colleague (Mr. HUMPHREY) and I are offering now adapts that bill to the changes made by the Finance Committee in H.R. 1. But the object is still the same—to make it absolutely certain that the elderly receive the full 20 percent social security increase which we passed in June.

The proposal in my amendment could and should be put into effect immediately because it is very simple. What it does is to tell all the State agencies to continue benefits to the elderly as though there had been no 20-percent increase. In this way no benefits are cut and the full 20 percent is "passed through" to the elderly.

Although this "pass through" does not have the identical results of the approach used in title XVI, it is largely consistent with that approach—and it could be implemented now.

In Minnesota, 60 percent of the 23,000 of the elderly citizens who receive old age assistance—about 14,000 senior citizens—will lose all or part of their social security increase until January 1974 unless we provide for a passthrough, such as I am proposing.

Another 2,000 elderly Minnesotans will lose all entitlement to old age assistance as a result of the 20-percent social security increase. The committee's bill protects this category of elderly citizens against a loss of their medicaid benefits, but it does not keep them from losing food stamps as my amendment does.

In Minnesota, there are about 13,000 elderly in the "medically indigent" category. They receive no cash old age assistance, but they are covered by medicaid. Many of these people will lose all or part of their 20 percent social security increase unless action is taken along the lines I am proposing.

My amendment also protects social security recipients with veterans or other Federal benefits, as well as those in federally supported public housing programs from having part or all of the 20 percent increase taken away from them.

The Congress intended them to have the whole increase, and I think they should have it.

Mr. President, I know that the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG) is aware of the need for a "pass through" in some form. He recognized its importance on the Senate floor on September 12th in a discussion with several Senators. He has shown a deep understanding of the problem because title XVI of the Finance Committee bill—by providing for a $50 disregard of social security or other similar income—has its own formula for a "pass through." It is a generous formula, but the problem is that it does not take effect for 15 months.

I think that my formula is a good one for meeting the interim problem. I urge its adoption.

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1972

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WILLIAMS). Under the previous order, the Chair now lays before the Senate H.R. 1, the Social Security Amendments of 1972, which the clerk will state.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

H.R. 1, to amend the Social Security Act, to make improvements in the Medicare and Medicaid programs, to replace the existing Federal-State Public Assistance programs, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1614

A FINAL CHANCE FOR WELFARE REFORM

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, President Nixon can have welfare reform this year if he wants it. The question facing the Senate and the country is whether the President will take the opportunity to match deeds with his words about the need to reform this country's welfare systems. Unfortunately, it is not clear whether the President really wants welfare reform.

In August of 1969 President Nixon went to the American people in a major televised address and said that "the present welfare system has failed us." At that time he proposed a new approach to public assistance embodied in the family assistance plan.

The President's initiative in 1969 had my support and the endorsement of others who thought welfare reform long overdue. As I noted then and in the intervening years, the President deserved great credit for focusing the attention of the country on this problem.

Two years ago, after the House had passed a modified version of FAP, the Senate adjourned before action could be completed on the bill. Today, 3 years after welfare reform was first introduced in Congress, and 1 year after it passed the House for a second time, the Senate is beginning debate again on welfare reform.

Over the past 3 years supporters of welfare reform have had their differences about specific provisions. After long study, I introduced 1 year ago a proposal that would have substantially improved the House-passed version of the President's proposal, H.R. 1.

My proposal was developed after lengthy consultation with Senators, Governors, State welfare administrators, welfare organizations and other public assistance experts. We believed that the proposal represented a reasonable and constructive approach to reforming the welfare system; 22 Senators, including 4 Republicans, and 15 Governors together with interested groups such as Common Cause, the AFL-CIO, the League of Women Voters all announced their support for the Ribicoff amendment.

While the President opposed my amendment, many of its provisions actually restored elements of the President's original legislation offered in 1969. This was the first indication that the President was having second thoughts about this commitment to welfare reform.

Developments during the months since the introduction of my proposal have made it clear that none of the approaches—neither the Finance Committee proposal, the Ribicoff amendment, nor the President's program contained in H.R. 1—can command a majority in the Senate. Therefore, in an attempt to work out a fair accommodation between the President's position and my own, my staff and I began a long series of negotiations with the administration several months ago. We finally reached agreement on a proposal containing all the principles we consider prerequisites for meaningful welfare reform.

The Secretaries of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Department of Labor urged the President to support this agreement.

On June 16 of this year, the President took the Ribicoff-administration agreement under advisement. A group of 19 Republican Senators sent a letter to the President urging him to join with me in fashioning a "humane and decent compromise reform measure that would be acceptable to a majority of the Congress and to the administration." Recognizing the inadequacies of the Finance Committee proposal then being developed, this bloc of Senators stated that:

> Without that compromise and a final effort now by the Administration and those members of both parties, certainly including Senator Ribicoff . . . we firmly believe welfare reform is almost certain to die.

The President rejected the Ribicoff-administration agreement as well as the concept of working with the Senate to fashion an acceptable welfare reform proposal. The President's position substantially diminished the possibility of enacting welfare reform this year.

Nonetheless, in the spirit of trying to reach a constructive solution to this problem, I am today introducing an amendment to the Finance Committee version of H.R. 1, striking the committee's welfare proposal—title IV—and substituting the Ribicoff-administration agreement. This is our last, best chance for action in this Congress.

If the Senate fails to act this year, it is unlikely that the Congress will consider welfare reform at all in the next Congress, after the years of fruitless effort already devoted to this subject. The tragedy of this failure will be more than a poltical one. It will be a human failure—a failure to help millions of Americans who subsist in poverty.

Most of these Americans do not vote. They do not speak up. They do not lobby in Washington. They lead lives of quiet desperation in city slums and rural wastelands throughout America.

These Americans want to work but have no jobs. Their children go hungry, shoeless, and cold. And all around them is the affluence that most of us know as America. For them the American dream is a nightmare.

In the middle of a presidential election, words often obscure deeds and rhetoric substitutes for action. But 25 million Americans have a right to expect more from their elected representatives. They have a right to expect the President to follow through on 3 years of speeches about the need for welfare reform. And they have a right to expect the Senate to meet the President halfway. I think the RIBICOFF-administration agreement is the vehicle that will allow us to meet those expectations.

The details of this proposal are best viewed in the context of the inadequacies of our present welfare system and the failure of the Finance Committee to deal with that system in a realistic way.

INADEQUACIES OF THE PRESENT WELFARE SYSTEM

If there is agreement on nothing else, everyone can agree that our present welfare system is a total disaster. No one supports it and it supports no one adequately.

The current public assistance program, Aid to Families with Dependent Children—AFDC—is made up of 54 different State anl territorial programs. Each is administered by a separate jurisdiction under broad Federal guidelines. Including the county-administered programs, there are at least 1152 separate operating welfare systems. The efficiency of these units ranges from bad to worse.

Payments for a family of four are inadequate—ranging from $60 a month in Mississippi to $335 in Connecticut. Federal guidelines are so broad that there are as many different interpretations as there are interpreters. In effect neither the State nor the Federal Government has the last word on how the system should operate. No one has the last word.

If we had set out to devise an unworkable and undesirable welfare system, we could not have done a better job than to invent the present structure.

The present system provides no benefits when a father is present thereby encouraging family disintegration and desertion.

The present system destroys work incentives for families. Why work when you can have more money being on welfare? Why try to get off welfare when every dollar you earn is taxed away by a poorly devised welfare structure?

For those who can work, a multitude of training programs have been devised to cut the welfare rolls. But the rolls keep rising, poverty keeps increasing, and States and localities keep pouring more and more money into an open-ended program that promises relief for no one.

The welfare mess fails the taxpayer as well as the welfare recipient. Costs to the States are rapidly growing out of control. At the present rate the cost of the AFDC program will double every 3 years.

In calendar year 1971, 14.8 million people received assistance under the principal welfare programs—AFDC, Aid to the Aged and Aid to the Blind and Disabled. Of this total, 10.6 million people—7.7 million children and 2.9 million adults—received AFDC payments. This represented an increase of 10.3 percent over the preceding year.

In the same year welfare costs amounted to $10.8 billion, of which $6.2 billion was spent on AFDC. These costs were up 14.7 percent over the preceding year.

Despite the increase in costs, the beneficiaries of the welfare system were no better off. In fact, welfare payment cutbacks were taking place all over the country. Payments to recipients in almost half the States have been decreased in the last 2 years.

Other problems abound in the welfare system. Single people and childless couples are completely ineligible for AFDC, thus providing a great incentive to have children.

Men who work part-time are discouraged from seeking full-time employment because their families are eligible only when they work part-time. The "working poor"—that is, those who work full-time but still live in poverty—are not helped at all. And yet 40 percent of the poor in this country live in families headed by a full-time worker.

INADEQUACIES OF THE FINANCE COMMITTEE PROPOSAL

The Finance Committee proposal offers more of the same workfare programs which have failed in the past.

The program approved by the Senate Finance Committee represents a long step backward on the road to welfare reform.

The Finance Committee proposal retains the existing, widely discredited State AFDC programs for mothers with young children, and adds on top of it another program for families with an overlapping jumble of wage subsidies, social security tax rebates, work disincentives, and subpoverty wage programs.

Rather than coordinate and improve the operation of our welfare program, the committee proposal compounds the lack of coordination by scattering new programs throughout the Federal Government. The new "workfare" programs would be administered by the Departments of Health, Education, and Welfare, Treasury, and a new Federal administration in addition to the 1,152 administrative units at the State and local level which already handle the AFDC program.

The committee's proposals supposedly increase work incentives but the combined effect of the disparate array of income supplements, tax rates, and job programs is to discourage people from working. Welfare recipients will be in a continuing state of confusion about how to relate to all the offices and programs involved.

Even more importantly, the committee bill does nothing to improve the level of benefits AFDC recipients receive or to move in the direction of nationally uniform eligibility standards and payment levels.

The costs of the committee proposal would exceed those of H.R. 1 by over $4 billion and would cover some 30 million people. Yet much of the money for the program would not be concentrated on the poorest of the poor. Instead, large amounts would go to those earning relatively more money. Administrative costs would also be increased since records would have to be maintained and transferred between many different Federal, State and local agencies.

A more detailed analysis of the committee proposal illustrates the confusion and inequites inherent in the plan.

WAGE SUBSIDY

A wage subsidy would be paid by the newly created Work Administration equalling three-fourths of the difference between a low wage in private industry and the minimum wage. The committee report assumes that the Federal minimum wage is $2. Thus it uses the figure $1.50 when referring to three-fourths of the minimum. But since the bill itself speaks in terms of three-fourths of the minimum wage—presently $1.60—I will assume that present law is in effect. Thus if a worker is making $1.20 per hour, the wage subsidy would be 30 cents an hour—three-fourths of the difference between $1.20 and $1.60. Such a subsidy would encourage employers to pay low wages since they could expect the Federal Government to pick up the costs of higher wages. In addition to this wage depressant effect, workers would be better off only if they worked longer hours. Nothing would be done to upgrade hourly wages.

This Nation should avoid a policy of encouraging workers to work for subpoverty wages. Raising wage levels would be wiser. Furthermore, recipients would not be automatically eligible for the wage subsidy. They would have to apply to the local employment service—agencies which have consistently fallen down on the job of providing jobs and services to the poor.

The wage subsidy would only apply to jobs paying between $1.20 and $1.60 per hour. Thus, the most impoverished workers—those in jobs which pay less than $1.20—would not be aided. This group, comprising well over half a million individuals, is in dire need of assistance.

10 PERCENT PAYMENT

Participants referred to private sector jobs would receive an additional subsidy of 10 percent of wages covered by social security. This payment, made by the Internal Revenue Service, would only apply to the base hourly wage, not to the wage subsidy portion of hourly income. This payment would be phased out as income rises above the poverty line at a 25-percent rate, thus dampening any incentives to move above the poverty line.

Such a proposal rewards a family with $4,000 of earnings twice as much as a family with $2,000 and thus provides the least to those with the greatest need.

Administratively this proposal would involve the keeping of a huge volume of records and the maintenance and transfer of records between IRS, the Work Administration, and perhaps other agencies. Millions of tax records would become a part of the welfare maze.

While I share the view of the committee that it is desirable to relieve the poor of the burden of paying social security taxes and I commend our chairman for this concept—I have publicly supported a social security rebate to impoverished working Americans—I cannot accept the committee proposal since it is part and parcel of an unworkable and inequitable overall plan.

The legislation I have developed would provide relief from both social security and income taxes through the earnings disregard feature. That is, in determining what is income for the purposes of computing the welfare payment, my proposal disregards the first $720 of income, 40 percent of additional income, and amounts paid for social security and income taxes.

WORK ADMINISTRATION

While the vast majority of welfare recipients are unemployable, the Finance Committee proposal concentrates heavily on the small minority who are employable. The main structure of the program for families with an employable individual is the Federal Work Administration.

The Work Administration would attempt to provide job placement, job development, employability plans and manpower training. All employable adults registering for welfare would be required to become employees of the Work Administration as a condition of receiving assistance. The Work Administration would attempt to place registrants in private jobs at the minimum wage or "subsidized" public or private jobs at less than the minimum wage. The 10 percent supplement would be provided for those taking private jobs and for the nonsubsidy portion of subsidized public or private jobs.

Those not so placed in "regular" jobs would become direct employees of the Work Administration at $1.20 an hour, far less than either the poverty line or the Federal minimum wage. These employees would receive no wage subsidy or 10 percent supplement. In fact, the Work Administration employees would be in limbo between Federal and private employment—ineligible for social security, unemployment compensation or workmen's compensation.

These direct Work Administration employees would be required to perform "useful work which can contribute to the betterment of the community." For mothers with younger children, training to improve the quality of life—improve homemaking, beautifying apartments, acquiring consumer skills—would be provided. The Work Administration would also provide temporary employment with reimbursement to the Work Administration. In effect, the Federal Government would be maintaining a subpoverty wage manpower pool at the disposal of the business community.

The concepts embodied in the Work Administration are confused and often erroneous. While the basic idea of making the Federal Government the employer of last resort is a sound one, the downgrading of public service jobs relative to private sector employment is unfortunate. The emphasis on providing "incentives" for workers to move into "regular" private employment by paying Work Administration employees only $1.20 an hour is misplaced at best.

A major problem that I find with the committee's proposal is that the private sector does not have sufficient jobs. In fact, over 5 million Americans are unemployed. Thus, even with extraordinary motivation, a Work Administration employee cannot escape his $1.20 an hour job if there are no other jobs. He is doomed to remain at a menial $1.20 an hour salary—$1,500 below a poverty level wage on an annual basis. And the Work Administration, by paying only $1 an hour for those in manpower training, is discouraging rather than encouraging participants to upgrade their skills and increase their income.

Rather than discouraging public service employment we should be fostering it. It has been estimated that State and local government could utilize as many as 4 million people in public service activities of all kinds—conservation, education, health, consumer protection, recreation, sanitation, criminal justice, child care. It should be obvious to all that our inner cities are decaying, our air and water getting dirtier, and our public services becoming increasingly unable to meet the challenge of providing us with the manner of existence we as Americans desire. Public service jobs should provide workers with at least a poverty-level wage. In this way we can both fight poverty and improve our communities.

ASSISTANCE TO UNEMPLOYABLE ADULTS

Under the committee bill those unable to work would continue to participate in the widely discredited AFDC system. Generally each State would decide the level of assistance it will provide. But Federal financial participation in the program would be changed from the present matching formula to a bloc grant approach. By putting a ceiling on Federal aid, the committee bill will discourage the States from raising welfare payments. The bloc grant approach would allow only low benefit States to raise their benefit levels. Under the committee bill a State's grant for 1973 would equal the 1972 Federal share, plus an additional amount equal to as much as one-half of the 1972 State's share. But less than one-half the State share would be provided if that amount were sufficient to bring family income up to a level of $1,600 for a family of two, $2,000 for three, or $2,400 for four Alternatively, a State could opt for 110 percent of the 1972 Federal share. In future years the bloc grants would be reduced under the assumption that the committee's workfare program is reducing the welfare rolls. Given the past failure of welfare-workfare programs it appears that the reduced size of the payments will mean only smaller and smaller assistance payments to families in need rather than stable payments to a shrinking welfare population.

THE RIBICOFF-ADMINISTRATION AGREEMENT

The new agreement which I introduce today as a substitute for title IV of H.R. 1 incorporates much that has been learned from the past 3 years of analysis and debate about welfare reform. This amendment retains the basic elements of the original family assistance plan as it applies to those who cannot work but improves the benefit levels, protects current recipients against benefit cutbacks, contains the procedural safeguards of the original Ribicoff amendment, and provides the States with significant fiscal relief.

Today's amendment also contains a pilot program for the new concept of providing assistance to the working poor and those who can work but are unemployed. This will give the administration and the Congress the opportunity to assess the full impact of this program.

Even with the full implementation of the working poor program, this amendment will only cost $600 million more than the costs of H.R. 1 as it passed the House and $3.2 billion less than the unwieldy structure established by the Finance Committee proposal.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a table which illustrates the costs of the various proposals for fiscal year 1975.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[1] Includes: wage subsidy, 1.9; 10 percent rebate, 1.1; residual AFDC, 3.7; total, 6.7.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, the Ribicoff-administration agreement consists of two facets: Aid to those unable to work; and aid to the working poor including a preliminary pilot program of this concept.

ASSISTANCE FOR THOSE WHO CANNOT WORK

This category includes children under 16, mothers with children under age 6, the elderly, ill or incapacitated, or their caretakers, caretakers of a child where the father or other adult relative in the home is working or registered for training, the caretaker of a child where suitable day care is unavailable, and unemployed, male-headed families for whom jobs are unavailable.

PAYMENT LEVEL

Those unable to work will be assured a basic Federal payment to a family of four of $2,600. The payment will increase as the cost of living rises.

MAINTENANCE OF BENEFITS

In those States where payment levels exceed $2,600, States would be required to make supplemental payments to assure that no recipient receives a smaller payment than he or she receives under the present law. To alleviate the harmful effects of State welfare cutbacks of the last few years, the States would be required to supplement up to the higher of their January 1971 level or any higher previous or subsequent level.

STATE FISCAL RELIEF

Under the provisions of my amendment, every State would receive substantial fiscal relief. Under present law States receive matching funds from the Federal Government ranging from 50 to 83 percent of a State's costs. Under my proposal the Federal Government will pay 100 percent of the first $2,600 of cost.

In addition, while my amendment requires a State with a higher payment level to make supplements, the States would be "held harmless" from additional costs once their payments reached the levels for calendar year 1971.

Total savings to State and local governments in the first fiscal year will amount to $2.8 billion compared to $2.4 billion under H.R. 1 and $2.3 billion under the committee proposal. Fiscal relief would also be provided on an emergency interim basis. The States would receive $1 billion in fiscal relief in the interval before the new welfare program takes effect.

UNIFORM STANDARDS AND PROCEDURES

National, uniform benefit levels, eligibility rules and Federal administration would be established.

Procedures of the original Ribicoff amendment to assure fairness, including right to counsel, written opinions in welfare adjudication, elimination of punitive and cumbersome reporting and checking procedures are also included as are protection of employee rights, elimination of State residency requirements and determination of eligibility based on current need.

CHILD CARE

The proposal I introduce today provides $1.5 billion for the creation of child-care services and $100 million for the construction of child-care facilities to assist working mothers.

Mothers with children under age 6 are exempt from the work requirements. Mothers with children over age 6 would register for work only if adequate day care were available and close to their place of residence or employment. Adequate day care is defined to mean child care services no less comprehensive than those provided for by the 1968 Federal interagency day care requirements.

ASSISTANCE TO THOSE ABLE TO WORK: A PILOT PROGRAM

The most innovative portion of our welfare reform proposal is the opportunities for families—OF—program. It would provide income supplements to those people who work but still have low incomes to insure that it is always financially more profitable to work than simply receive welfare. Such a proposal would also remove the incentive for fathers to leave their families.

In addition, one of the basic tenets of this proposal is that all those who are able to work should be required to do so. Every able-bodied applicant who applies for welfare, including those already on welfare, would have to register for employment or training with the Department of Labor. The only exemption from this requirement would be for those responsible for the care of aged, ill or incapacitated family members or children under age 6. Failure to report for work or training would result in a loss of benefits unless the recipient could show that jobs or day care were unavailable.

Those deemed employable would immediately be referred to suitable employment paying at least the Federal minimum wage. If no jobs were available the Department of Labor would develop employability plans and provide the necessary job training. In addition, in recognition of the fact that the private job market does not have sufficient jobs available for all those able to work, my proposal creates 300,000 meaningful public service jobs in the first year of the program.

Because of the innovative nature of the OFF program, my amendment would require that aid to the working poor be tried out on a limited basis to test out its structure and theories. It is time to try out on a pilot basis any new major social program before committing the resources of the Federal Government to total implementation.

We need to know more about the effect of various earnings disregards on those who work as well as the effect of OFF on work habits and families. We also need to study the possibility of covering single people and childless couples under the OFF program and to develop appropriate administrative procedures.

Upon completion of the pilot programs and an evaluation of its results, the full OFF program would be implemented unless either House of Congress objected within 60 days.

Full implementation of the OFF program would insure that those able to work would always find it more profitable to do so rather than to rely solely on public assistance.

All of us can find parts of this program we would change or vary to some extent. However, I firmly believe that this entire proposal makes a significant step forward in our fight to eliminate poverty in this country and I urge the Senate to adopt it.

I ask unanimous consent that the following tables showing State payment levels under present law be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the tables were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, under my proposal all States with payment levels below $2,600 a year for a family of four would have their entire welfare costs assumed by the Federal Government. For those States with benefit levels above $2,600, the Federal Government would pay the first $2,600 and hold the States harmless for any welfare expenses in excess of their calendar 1971 expenses.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the Senator has very ably stated his views on this subject. I think it deserves the attention of all of us. In due course I shall respond to the Senator's statement. I would like to read it and then explain basically why, as one Senator, and I think as one of a majority of the Committee on Finance, I believe that what we recommended is a far better answer than what the Senator is suggesting with regard to this problem.

The Senator, I believe, plans to offer his amendment some time next week and we will be discussing it well before we vote on it.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, will the Senator yield so I may respond?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, it becomes apparent that we have reached a time to make a decision one way or the other. We have been involved with this matter for 3 years.

Perhaps the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, for whom I have the highest respect, has been involved in a piece of legislation that had more problems and headaches than this, but I would say that in my experience in various segments of public life I have never been involved in a piece of legislation as controversial, which is more diverse, and contains as many emotional, philosophical, economic, and social problems as this piece of legislation.

We have been up and down with this bill. It has had a checkered history. As the history of legislation is written, I think the distinguished chairman and I and every member of the Finance Committee can look back at a missed opportunity.

When this legislation first came to us, it was as controversial then as it is now, and the controversies have not been eliminated. We tried hard in the Finance Committee, with all the diverse thinking in that committee, to come to some solution. And in the committee, in the late fall of 1969, we had reached unanimity and an understanding that we would pilot out this type of program on a 2-year basis. The distinguished chairman, I, Senator Williams of Delaware, and every member of the committee was willing to pilot this out.

We were willing at that time to give the administration whatever it wanted, up to $500 million, to pilot out the various proposals that were in the committee—and there were many constructive ideas, some of them contained in the Senator's proposal, some in my proposal, some in the administration's proposal—to try them in diverse communities—throughout America, in rural areas, suburbs, and big cities—to see whether this program would work.

At that time the administration said it had to have all or nothing.

The irony of it is that 3 years later we are still on the bill. The pilot program could have been completed. If the pilot program were successful, it would have sailed through the Senate in a breeze. If the pilot program proved worthless, the program could have been altered or jettisoned. Now we find ourselves, 6 months after the pilot program would have been finished, arguing this major piece of legislation. What a lost opportunity.

During the course of this time, as the Senator knows, I found myself in a lonely position. I was isolated. I had no allies in the Finance Committee. The allies I thought I had in the administration constantly looked the other way. I tried to get commitments from the administration. They were not forthcoming. I found myself in the ironical position of having to sit by in the Finance Committee and watch while H.R. 1, the President's own proposal, was presented to the Finance Committee and not a single member of the President's party in the Finance Committee voted for the President's proposal.

The irony of it is that if those members of the Finance Committee were men who were consistently independent from the administration, I could understand it, but if there were ever a group of loyalists in this body to the President of the United States, they could be found in the Finance Committee. I would say that if one searched the records as we vote in this body, he could not find a group that has more consistently followed the administration's line. And yet H.R. 1 suddenly became an orphan, and I found myself, as a Democrat, fighting for the administration proposal, opposing the proposal of the man I nominated as the Democratic nominee for the Presidency.

Now I see an opportunity, as the time for the election campaign comes to a close, to take welfare out of the political arena, where it does not belong. It is saddening and tragic that in this great Nation there are 25 million Americans who are poor. And it is even more tragic that these impoverished citizens have no spokesman.

The President of the United States has the duty to be the moral leader of this country. The President of this country has a moral obligation to speak up for those who do not have voices. And yet the President of the United States continually runs away from his own child—the orphaned welfare reform bill.

I would say the most innovative idea of the President of the United States in his 4 years in office was the family assistance plan. I approved of that program and admired him for it, but I must say, after 3 years, I have misgivings as to whether he meant it or wanted it. There is no question that Pat Moynihan, who was his assistant, brought it out as his idea, and I can imagine the conversation, when he was discussing it with the President. He must have said, "Mr. President, you have an opportunity to go down in history as a President who will plow new ground, new thoughts, and new ideas to alleviate one of the great social and economic problems of this Nation. Here is your opportunity. The country calls you conservative or reactionary. You be the leader. You do what no other President has dared to do."

I can imagine the President leaning back in his chair and saying, "You know, they have always kicked President Nixon around. Now I am going to show I am a leader for social justice in this Nation." He went forward and presented his proposal. I remember praising him wholeheartedly when this proposal was put forward.

But as the months went by, his thinking became withdrawn. It became confused. It became contradictory. He started to step back, because he suddenly realized that one of the popular issues in this country was the development of and the continuing of the myth that there are 25 million Americans who are just a bunch of no-good bums. It is very easy to kick around people for whom no one will cast a word—25 million people living in poverty, 25 million people who cannot speak for themselves.

What a lost opportunity there was for the President of the United States. He went to Moscow—and I commend him for it. He went to Peking—and I commend him for it. But I would like to know what the President of the United States is doing for the poor and the dispossessed of the United States. Here is an opportunity, President Nixon, in the closing days of this Congress, which you blame for inaction. You said time and time again that welfare reform is No. 1 on your agenda.

If the President of the United States really means it, let the President of the United States today, wherever he is, say he supports this proposal. This proposal is a brainchild that came from his administration, and my staff and I worked on it, with Secretary Richardson, Secretary Hodgson, and they recommended it and it went down to the White House. His adviser, Mr. Erlichmann, said, "Thumbs down. Let us make welfare another football to be kicked around in an election campaign."

So I call upon the President of the United States today, wherever he is: Are you for welfare reform, Mr. Nixon? If you are, say so. If you are not, say so, too. But it is time for the President to be heard. That is the message I send from the Senate floor to the President of the United States today.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana, when he first read the press reports of the proposed family assistance plan, was very enthusiastic about the proposal. In that respect I suppose that my history has been somewhat like that of Governor Hearnes of Missouri, who came before the Finance Committee representing the Governors' Conference. He said, "If you read the press reports on this family assistance proposal, you would be for it. If you read the bill, you would be against it." And I regret to say that this is the way it worked out with the Senator from Louisiana.

After I first read the press reports, I was happy to have had an opportunity to discuss it with the President. I said, "Mr. President, I have read about the family assistance plan in the press. I think it is a good idea. There is one thing wrong about it, and that is that you are proposing a guarantee of $2,400 for every family for starters. You would like to see it higher, but because, after all, the Federal Government has to think about money problems as everybody else must, you will start at $2,400 and hope to make it more later on."

I said, "That all sounds fine to me, on one condition. I think you ought to be paying them this $2,400 to do something useful, that you should not be paying it to them to do nothing."

It seemed to me at that point as though we really had very little in disagreement.

In the early days when the so-called family assistance plan was proposed—and the Senator's suggestion is, to say the least, a first cousin to it—we found that the opposition was not coming from the Senator from Louisiana; it was coming from persons like former Senator John Williams of Delaware who were conservative Republicans, who probably had had a chance to study it and think about it more than this Senator had, because, after all, like most Democrats, I had had no prior information about what the administration was thinking about, as did the ranking Republican member of the committee at that time.

When I first heard about the proposal, I was much more inclined to be favorable to it than after I had studied it and had been exposed to the arguments, the shortcomings, and the problems with the plan proposed.

As time went by and we discussed and studied problems with our existing welfare programs, the more we thought about it the more we concluded that under the existing welfare programs, in altogether too many cases, we are paying out money encouraging people to do the wrong things—that we did not intend it that way, but that was how it was working out.

We found that the welfare program made it to the cash advantage of a man not to marry the mother of his children, not to live with his family and assume the burden of supporting that family.

It is that sort of undesired effect of this kind of program that can discourage marriage between people who have children, that can encourage family breakup, that can give the welfare programs a bad name despite their intent of helping people.

If the family assistance plan was going to move in the other direction and reward people for doing the sort of things society values, it would have found strong support from the Senator from Louisiana, and I am sure from a majority of the Committee on Finance. It certainly would have found some support on the Republican side of the aisle. But when we analyzed it and found that more and more, it was going to be a guaranteed income for doing nothing, and it was going to work out in such a fashion that it would discourage people from doing the right thing and encourage them to do the wrong thing, this Senator as well as a majority on the committee concluded that while we were willing to spend the amount of money the President had recommended—and we have tried to confine ourselves to something that would cost about the same amount of money—we thought the money ought to be spent in terms of encouraging people to take a job and encouraging people to acknowledge their own children and assume the responsibility of supporting them. We thought we ought to spend it in ways that would encourage mothers to seek support from the fathers of their children, rather than encourage the mother to cooperate with the father in denying the paternity of his own children.

It is this sort of problem, which unfortunately is a part of the present system, and which has caused the system to gain a name which is not too savory today, it is this kind of thing that would be multiplied by the family assistance program, and that is what caused the Committee on Finance to choose to move in another direction instead.

Let us see how some people would make out under this family assistance program. New York has, I suppose, as nearly what one would call a family assistance program as any State at this time. In terms of payment levels, it is even more liberal than the family assistance program would be. Their welfare program has virtually bankrupted New York State. It might have helped elect a Governor up there, and it might have helped elect a mayor of the city of New York, but it has virtually bankrupted New York State, and brought about a taxpayer revolt and a revolt against the welfare system, which one can understand when he realizes that the people who are paying for all this fiercely resent seeing their money spent on things that bring about all the wrong sort of results.

Having let their welfare program get completely out of hand, New York sent people down to advocate to us that we take their welfare problem off their hands, and that the Federal Government take the whole thing over and save New York from the results of that State's own folly.

We do not think we ought to do it that way, Mr. President. It is our view—and I am satisfied that this is the view of the average man on the street—that we should provide adequately to care for people who are aged. We do not have any real argument about that. The committee decision was overwhelmingly that we should provide a very generous level of benefits to the aged, the disabled, and the blind; and I do not think there will be much argument about that. Those are expensive programs, but they do tremendous amounts for people, and in that area there is no real argument worthy of the name, because I am satisfied that the Senate and the House of Representatives also will be willing to go along with a proposal that provides that people who have done the best they could with what they had to work with would be assured of a level of income which would more or less lift them out of poverty. We are willing to provide for those who are unable to work, and we are willing to provide adequately for children.

Where we come to a difference of opinion is where we look at this situation where a program encourages fathers to deny the paternity of their own children and a program that makes welfare more attractive than work, and tends to make work, by comparison, offer very little reward indeed.

We can demonstrate situations where a person has a larger income working half-time than he can make full-time. We can demonstrate how it is very much to a couple's cash advantage for the couple just to decline to marry, to live together without the formal arrangement of marriage, because to do so would cause them to lose their welfare entitlement.

We have seen cases where families receive far more than anyone anticipated because the father is living with a family that is his but for which he acknowledges no legal responsibility.

There have been cases where people were able to get on welfare two and more times.

When we have a program which is in that bad a shape, we have got to correct its deficiencies, not just double the number of welfare recipients and call it reform. We have to try to correct what is wrong with it.

In his statement, the Senator from Connecticut made reference to the fact that very few of these people on welfare could be expected to work. On that matter I have a difference of opinion. More than half of the mothers whose children are of school age in this country do work and bring home income to help support the family. Mr. President, that 50 percent-plus figure includes wives where there is a working father in the home.

There is a higher percentage of wives in middle income families working to supplement the family income than there is of wives in lower income families.

It is simple enough to explain this—that is why those are middle-income families. Those wives are making a contribution to supplement the family income, and that is why it is a middle-income family.

But it is suggested by those in the Department of HEW, and the Senator's speech indicates that he agrees, that out of all these people on welfare, only about 1 or 2 percent could be expected to work to help earn their keep or to do something for society in return for what they are getting from society. That causes me to ask why.

We are perfectly content to put the family on welfare and not ask them to do anything if the mother can be classified as disabled. But if the mothers we are talking about, those with schoolage children, are almost all fully able to work, mentally competent, and sound of body, then why is it that only 1 or 2 percent of mothers who apply for public welfare assistance can be called employable, when more than 50 percent of the mothers with schoolage children in this country in fact choose to work? They prefer to work in order to increase the family income.

Why is it to be said, then, that only about 1 or 2 percent of the mothers of families who prefer to live on the family's welfare could be called employable? What makes them so different from their sisters who choose to work? It is very difficult to understand. Those of us who represent the majority on the Committee on Finance do not understand it.

It has been argued that we ought to do everything that we can to help low-income working persons with families. So we suggest in effect to return to them not only the social security tax that is being collected from them but also return most of what is being collected from the employer in social security taxes. We propose to do this on the theory that it makes sense to relieve low-income persons of taxes before starting to offer them new benefits.

This, Mr. President, might be considered as the equivalent of a refund of a heavy tax burden to a poor family. But we find the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and his cohorts in the Department down there protesting about the refund of this social security tax to the poor. He said the committee plan is an administrative monstrosity. Why would he be complaining? He is not the one who has to collect the tax. He is not the one who would have to refund it. It presents no problem at all in his Department. The people who would have to do this are not complaining about it being an administrative monstrosity. They have not said anything like that. They have not made it known to those on the committee staff with whom we have worked in putting together the technical aspects of this language.

So far as I have been able to determine up to this point, the people who would return this billion dollars of taxes to the poor, from whom it has been collected, find it no particular administrative problem, no more than it is to handle any other tax credit, tax rebate, or tax refund provision of a similar amount of money suggested by Congress or by one of the committees.

Now why would the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare be so worried about this proposal, when his Department does not have to do any of the work? I assume it is only because in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare they are anxious to pay out a similar amount of money, but in ways that are not work-related. They prefer to pay a reward for doing nothing, a reward for denying the paternity of one's own child, a reward for not having married the mother of that child. They seem to be outraged to see someone pay the money to the poor in a way that is work-related, because their thinking just does not run in those channels.

Then we propose to pay supplement to low-income people who are making less than the minimum wage.

Why would the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare be upset about that? It would not be their problem. Somebody else would take care of it. When one wants to design a program to say money should be paid out in ways that encourage people to work, where they get more money the more they work, it does not fit in with HEW's proposal.

Mr. President, I am not one who thinks in disparaging terms of people who are poor, doing the best they can, who, through no fault of their own, find their income very low. We want to help those people. We have a bill before us that seeks to help people who meet that description. It would pay out $14 billion of additional benefits. This is in addition to the $8 billion of increased social security benefits for which most of us voted, and for which I voted in the committee and on the floor. Together the two bills add up to a total overall increase in income maintenance funds and aid to the poor of $22 billion. The taxpayers are going to have to pay for that—$22 billion of additional funds paid to the aged, the little children, the sick, the disabled.

What is the big difference between those of us who advocate the committee bill and those who take the approach suggested by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, which has been in its incubation stage down there for a great number of years? What is the big difference in point of view? It is just the difference between those who think all the problems of this country can be solved just by giving somebody money—the theory that people are poor because they do not have money; therefore, give them money, and that ends all poverty, and those of us who say, we must exercise great care in the way we give people money so as not to do a great disservice to them as well as a disservice to their country. We will make dependent people out of independent people. We will rob them of their self-sufficiency, pride, and independence.

That is the difference in philosophy between those of us who say that the benefits paid to poor persons capable of working should be paid in a work-related fashion, where the more they work the more they get, rather than doing it the other way around, as the family assistance plan would propose, that is, the less they work the more they would get. We should respond to the natural desire of a father to improve the conditions of his children and accept responsibility for them.

It is a question of approach. Those who speak for a majority on the committee are unwilling to pay more money to aggravate the problems the welfare system already has by having the Government guarantee everyone a certain minimal amount of income even though it might undermine what are their strengths today.

That sort of approach, Mr. President, we on the majority of the committee do not think is in the national interest or in the interest of the proposed beneficiaries.

That is why we say, let us do everything that can be done to give financial advantage to a poor man to help him go to work. Let us do everything that can be justified by any reasonable stretch of the imagination that will encourage a man to admit the paternity of his children and to accept the responsibility for his children. Let us do everything that can be done to encourage the formation of families rather than to spend money in ways which will encourage the family to break up. Let us do everything that can be done to encourage an employer to hire a poor person who has children to support, even if that means giving him preference over a single person who does not have that responsibility.

Those are the things that we should do that make for the right answer.

Admittedly, what we have proposed in the committee has several facets to it. I make no apology for the fact that we have proposed to subsidize the low-income working persons, to give them a tax advantage to supplement their income, and to give the employer an advantage if he will hire them and provide training programs for them. Any reasonable thing that the mind of man would propose, this Senator would favor to help the low-income working persons to improve their condition and work their way out of poverty.

I thought that was what we were trying to do around here. The last thing on earth we want to do is to spend the hard-earned tax dollars of the American people to pay people to turn down honest employment which, I regret to say, has altogether too often been the way the existing program worked, and the way we think the family assistance plan and all the variations of that program would work. That is why some of us on that committee have moved away from that approach rather than toward it.

It is interesting to note that practically all the President's declarations on the subject have been in favor of the work ethic. Every time the Senator from Louisiana has discussed this program with the President, everything he has had to say—and I say this without exception—has indicated his belief in the work ethic. He is just as firm, just as determined, and just as sincere about that as he was with his Labor Day speech this year. He was never said anything to conflict with that.

It only leads me to conclude that when it is said that if we are for the President we must vote for the family assistance plan the way it came down here, it was not the President of the United States that brought up this thing, this scheme for a negative income tax under which the Government pays you the most if you do nothing at all.

This idea of the negative income tax was proposed long before President Nixon ran for President and won that job. That is a thought that someone believed would solve all problems, that if we work and make money, we pay an income tax on what we make, but if we do not work then the Government will pay us for what we do not make. This means the Government pays us for not working.

The family assistance plan is a mere variation of the negative income tax which now goes by the name of guaranteed income. I refer to it as a guaranteed income for not working. Everyone, of course, gets an income for working. But if we pass the Ribicoff amendment centering around the family assistance plan, it will be a guaranteed income for doing absolutely nothing. That is what we do not want to agree to.

I think that helps to explain why we have not heard any outrage or explosion. No one—that is, the conservative, or moderate, or even the liberal Republicans on the Finance Committee—seems to have had their arms twisted out of joint by doing what their consciences dictated. The probabilities are that if the President had been in that same committee room, hearing the same arguments, listening to the same discussions, and the same witnesses, and the same evidence day after day and week after week, I can say with complete confidence that the President, would have voted the same way as the Republicans on the committee voted with regard to this problem. He would have voted consistent with his declarations, even thought it might have occasioned to some little degree the lifting of eyebrows for someone to show that this does not seem to meet with exactly the fine points of the family assistance plan.

In the last analysis, Senators are not elected to represent the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. They are not elected to represent the President of the United States. They are elected to represent the people who sent them here. Their duty and responsibility is to represent the people and report back to them. If a Senator finds it disappointing that Members of the Republican side of the aisle have not bowed down to the party lash, let it be said that those men are well aware of the basis upon which this Nation was formed.

A Senator does not represent the President of the United States. He comes down here to represent the people, to represent his own conscience and to vote his conviction of what he thinks is good for the entire United States, as well as for his particular State. Those convictions are reflected in the bill we have here.

I am pleased to say, Mr. President, that the people who came before the committee who advocated that we enthrone the work ethic like this bill. They approve of it. They think that this is the way we should go about it. I regret that the chamber of commerce people have some reservations about it at this time. They are concerned about the costs, but they are equally concerned about the cost of any proposal of any nature. When they see one where the overall cost in a bill will be $14 billion, they know that it must be paid for by taxes which will be levied on them to pay for. I can well understand their concern. But for those of us who think of it as a program to help the poor and those of us who know the harm that has been done to the poor under the current welfare program do not want to see that continue as it has in the past.

We think we have proposed the best answer that the Senators on this committee could work out to this problem.

I do want to express my disappointment that the administration—and I do not blame the President about this because this would be the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Secretary Richardson in particular, as well as his advisers there—did not see fit 2 years ago to take us up on the proposition that was proposed to them, when it was proposed to them, and was opposed by the strongest proponents of Secretary Richardson's proposal, that we provide him with whatever it took to give it a fair test.

I, for one, wanted to see us test the kind of thing that we have in the committee amendment as well, so that we could judge from the tests how both of them were going.

The Secretary, I think, thought that if he held out long enough, he could obtain some sort of arrangement whereby he could conduct some tests, and having done that, he could put into effect by his own volition, without anyone having the power to keep it from happening, the family assistance plan. That could not be agreed upon.

In view of the fact that that type of assurance could not be given to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, he told us that he did not want any tests. So there was no test in that bill.

Now, here we have before us almost a thousand pages of legislation and at least half of it could have been enacted and would have been enacted 2 years ago if the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare was willing to say that all these good things in the bill, that everybody could agree should become law, should be enacted at that time.

I could not persuade him or the President of the United States or those who spoke for the administration to use their influence to persuade Chairman MILLS to go to conference with us and act favorably on the bill that, at that time, would have provided about $7 billion of additional benefits under the social security and welfare programs, including medicare and medicaid. I am convinced at this point that one of the principal reasons that Chairman MILLS did not meet with us in the conference was that the administration did not want him to do that and they were encouraging him to do just the opposite, not to go to conference and save the social security increases as leverage to force the Finance Committee to bend its knee to the family assistance plan.

If this was their plan, it did not succeed. It is very unfortunate that all of these good proposals which are in this bill and do not have one whisper of oppositon have been held up for two long years because of the adamant determination and dogged insistence of those down at the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare that nothing should be done to help the poor, nothing should be done to help the aged, nothing should be done to help the blind, nothing should be done to help the disabled, and nothing should be done to help those on medicare and those on medicaid—that all the provisions to help them should be held hostage to the family assistance plan.

That si what has happened for the last 2 years. And they have had their way. However, I should think that when we have a showdown, it will be fairly clear that they should have taken advantage of this opportunity that we offered them 2 years ago under which they could have had all of the money they wanted to go and try their welfare assistance plan, providing they would experiment with some workfare proposals as well as with some nonworkfare proposals and experiment with things to reward those who are working while they experiment with the negative income tax proposals,, or guaranteed income proposals, so that they can prove to themselves and to everyone else that they would work.

I for one proposed to them—

Why don't you try this idea in the District of Columbia where everyone can see how it would work?

When I proposed that, the representative of the department told me that that was the last place in the world they would try it, in the District of Columbia where everyone could see what happened. They did not want it tried and demonstrated unless they could have the power to put it into effect so that it would become law and so that we could not pass a resolution, either in both Houses or in one House at a minimum, after they had experimented with this so that we could prevent it from becoming the law of the land.

Those of us who tried to cooperate with them found that they were too determined, too adamant, and too unreasonable and that the program lacked merit and therefore could not be sold to the Congress. So, we tried to cooperate with them to the greatest extent we could 2 years ago and in years prior to that. I said to them, and also said on the Senate floor, that from that point forward, when the House refused to go to conference with us 2 years ago, because the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare did not want a bill that would provide $7 billion to assist the poor and the disabled and the sick of this country because they wanted to keep all of those good things as hostage for the family assistance plan, that as far as I was concerned I wanted it clearly understood that starting in the following year, I felt no commitment to this proposal whatever, and I did not expect to support it thereafter.

So, we will have the opportunity to vote on it, Mr. President, and that I welcome. We will also have an opportunity to vote to provide $14 billion of assistance to the poor, the sick, the aged, and the little children of this Nation in a way that we think is calculated to do them the most good.

Mr. President, as the manager of the bill, it does not upset me one bit if a Senator might want to add some additional provisions in here that would help people where we think it might benefit them.

However, I propose to resist—and I am sure that the Senator in charge of this bill on the minority side, the Senator from Utah (Mr. BENNETT), as well as the others on the Finance Committee—will resist strenuously efforts to spend more money in ways that we think will do more harm than good.

And we would hope very much, Mr. President, that the Senate, having heard the arguments, would study them and give us an answer in the fashion that the Senate feels most advances the public interest.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I am sorry I was not here to hear the entire statement made by the chairman of the committee, but I heard enough to be very much impressed with all he had to say, and I am very grateful for his leadership in saying it.

As a member of the Republican Party and the group of Republican Senators on the Committee on Finance that more or less supplied the basis for the majority which reported the workfare approach in title IV of this bill, I am glad we have the support, understanding, and enthusiastic efforts of the chairman, because without him we never would have been able to face up to what I think is the fundamental problem the United States faces today, the question of welfare.

I am leaving out the aged, blind, and the disabled. The committee has tried to be very generous to them and to raise their income in such a way that they would be free as far as possible from any stigma of being dependent on welfare. But we all feel that those people who are getting welfare, who are physically and mentally able to contribute something to their own support and the support of their families, should have the opportunity to make that contribution rather than that we should simply shuffle the present pattern around and provide a new pattern under which more and more people could move into the situation, which the chairman so adequately and emphatically described, where they are not expected to make a single effort in their own support.

A great deal has been made about the family assistance plan. It came to us from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. It has been approved twice on the House side, where their opportunity to examine it is not as great as the opportunity we have on this side.

The chairman has clearly expressed his interpretation of the attitude of the President as he has felt it in conference. I have had the same experience. I feel that the President, both in private discussions and in his public statements, is anxious to find some kind of program under which people can be encouraged, almost required to make a contribution to their own support if they are capable of doing it, and if their personal problems can be solved on a reasonable basis.

For instance, women with children of school age are going to need some kind of provision for child care. There may be other conditions that have to be handled. But it seems to me, to quote the oldest cliche in legislation or in politics, we are at a kind of crossroads in this situation. After all the effort that has been made, if we go forward on the same old path of financial support without personal responsibility, it is going to be a long time before there will be another opportunity to face up to the problem, and if the welfare rolls increase at the rate they have been increasing, the burden will be so heavy it may be impossible to lift it in the ways we believe it can be lifted now.

Fundamentally we are talking about the problem of single parent-headed families whose children, under the present circumstances, are on the program known as aid to dependent children. Ninety-two percent of them are women; the other 8 percent are men. There is a great emotional feeling that we should not require the mother of children to leave the home to earn a living. It is interesting, and I made it clear yesterday and I will repeat for the RECORD today, that one-half of the women in America with children of school age are already voluntarily working. So we are not putting a special burden only on the women who are now dependent on welfare; we are not asking them to do some strange thing that no other women in similar circumstances are willing to do. We are simply trying to make it possible for them to make the same contribution that one-half of the mothers in the United States have chosen voluntarily to make.

In a case of women not on welfare, it is probably to increase the family income, to get a few luxuries or benefits the family could not afford otherwise, or perhaps it is necessary to help the husband carry a burden which for some reason or other he cannot carry himself. But it is done, and it is accepted.

Therefore, in suggesting a way by which these women now on welfare can find the kind of employment that will enable them to contribute to the support of their children, I do not think we are doing a terrible or unusual thing.

The family assistance plan, as it came from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, is another in a series of proposals which come to a certain point and then stop without getting to the point where there is a practical solution.

The family assistance plan, in effect, states that women under certain circumstances will be required to register for work—I repeat, required to register for work. In other words, they would fill out a form, they go to an office, and having done that, they are then qualified to sit home as they have been doing under the previous plan.

I do not know what added virtue there is in saying that a woman must register for work over the fact it is said she has no responsible work. We have had a lot of programs, WIN has been one, where we tried to develop programs for people who wanted to work without any job at the end.

We have felt that we made an important step but we stopped short of the practical solution which depends on either an incentive or requirement for work, and the responsibility to provide a job. That is what we have done in our version of title IV of this bill.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. BENNETT. I am happy to yield to the distinguished chairman of the committee.

Mr. LONG. We have tried down through the years with the work incentive program to provide training for people and to require that they accept training, and that they again register to work, and we have had the frustrating experience that only a small percentage of those people found jobs through that program.

So in this bill we have something that really challenges the sincerity of those people who talk about registering, calling that a work requirement. We provide the job. It is fine to talk about registering for work and then saying that the job is not suitable, it is too easy, it is demeaning; or if the person does not want the job, he goes there with a very poor appearance, bloodshot eyes and breath that would knock someone down, hoping he would not be hired in the first instance, and if he is hired, to proceed to conduct himself with such a disdainful and abrasive attitude toward that fellow's employees that they do not keep the job for a day.

We have seen how easy it is for people to get past the work requirement without taking a job, which is why we say we will provide a job.

If you are going to pay somebody, why not pay them the amount of money you were going to pay them on welfare anyway and ask them to do some simple little thing for their own betterment or the betterment of their community?

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I agree with the chairman of the committee. It is my feeling that this bill not only has a requirement for work and provides a job, but it has provisions in it which also open the way so that the person involved can find a kind of job in which he will be happy and make the transition from welfare to workfare.

I have had enough experience to realize that this is probably the toughest psychological decision that a person who has been on welfare for some time has to make. Welfare, with all its faults, is security. If he does not make the social worker angry, if he does what he is told, if he lives within the limits, then the money will keep coming in, even though those limits are not the best things for her or her children. But when that person steps over the line and moves into a position where he or she has to accept responsibility for his own support, then he accepts a little risk. He accepts the risk that he has to put out in order to succeed at the job. He has to meet the requirements. He has to meet the standards. It is this movement from security to risk that is hard to do.

Mr. LONG. And then, of course, if a person has failed to do the job satisfactorily and loses his job, he is off welfare for a while, until he can try to get back on again.

Mr. BENNETT. Our bill has been written to minimize that risk, as far as we can minimize it. Under our bill, a person in the program who is given a job or takes a job and, for some reason or another that can be defended, the job is not satisfactory, he comes back immediately onto the program and is considered to be an employee of the Government—he is not on welfare—and the Government goes to work to try to find him another job. We have tried to minimize the risk.

The Senator was talking about the fact that because they had to so register, they could never find a job that was suitable. I have told this story a number of times in committee, but I would like to share it with the Senate. About 10 years ago I was in Germany. This was before the Iron Curtain went down in Berlin. There were several thousand persons a day coming across from East Germany to West Germany. The West German Government had a real problem in finding housing and caring for these people and getting them jobs. In the process they had developed a transition system.

They had a housing system into which these people were put immediately, and then, as fast as they could find them jobs, the people were moved out of that housing into housing where they paid something, and so on.

Since I had been in the Housing Committee in the Senate, I was interested in that type of housing. We went into a room where there was a family, I think a father and a mother and three or four children. They had been in West Germany for quite awhile, but they had never made the transition from the first step into the second step. I asked the man who was with me, my interpreter, to ask the man why he could not move to a job. He said, "They have no job that is suitable for him." I said, "What kind of job did you do in East Germany?" He said, "I was employed as a laboratory assistant to a professor who taught beekeeping. There are no professors in West Germany teaching beekeeping. Therefore, I am entitled to wait here until somebody finds that kind of job for me."

It is just that kind of ridiculous situation that can be set up under the family assistance plan. That is the kind of pattern that has existed under the previous program.

I went to work when I was young, and I have worked all my life, and I am still at it. I do not think work has damaged me. I do not think work is demeaning. I do not think when we make it possible for these women to contribute to the support of their children we are tearing them down either morally or economically or socially.

Mr. President, I think I have made my point, which is that the Republicans on the committee certainly support the bill as it came out.

The chairman is right in saying that we have helped develop it and support it. We believe that we are proceeding in the spirit of the statements of the President. There may be some details in our approach that could be criticized, but I do not think the spirit or attitude can be criticized, and I will join with the chairman, and I am sure my other Republican committee members, too, in defending title IV of this bill against all attempts to emasculate it and take out of it any responsibility to work on the part of people who are going to benefit from the payments.

Now I yield the floor.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I send to the desk an unprinted amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of title I of the bill, add the following new section:

On page 18, line 4, strike out ", AND THE EARNINGS TEST".

Beginning on page 30, line 23, strike out all through page 33; line 10.

STUDY OF EARNINGS TEST

SEC. —. (a) The Secretary shall conduct, either directly or by way of grant or contract, a full and complete study of the matter of earnings of individuals entitled to monthly insurance benefits under section 202 of the Social Security Act with a view to determining the feasibility of the elimination or extensive revision of those provisions of title II of such Act which provide for deductions from such benefits on account of earnings. Such study shall give special attention to (A) the extent to which life expectancy is increasing, and the resultant need of individuals to extend the period of their working life; (B) the extent to which individuals entitled to monthly insurance benefits under such section 202 are not eligible for benefits under private pension plans, and the resultant need for individuals to continue work after retirement age; and (C) the desirability of relating any deductions from benefits under such section on account of earnings to the annual income needs of the individuals entitled to such benefits.

(b) The Secretary shall complete the study authorized by subsection (a) and shall submit to the Congress, not later than January 1, 1974, a full and complete report on such study and the findings resulting therefrom, together with such recommendations for the elimination or revision of the provisions of title II of the Social Security Act relating to deductions from benefits on account of earnings as the Secretary deems appropriate.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, first, I would like to make a comment on H.R. 1 and the Senate committee's work in this area. I wish to express my deep appreciation for the dedication of the Senate Finance Committee in once again addressing a tremendous problem. We have differences of opinion on many phases of the problem, but we all agree on one thing—something has to be done. The present system is not working. I think the Senate Finance Committee, both the able chairman of the committee and our ranking Republican member, are due great credit for bringing this matter to a head and bringing to us this bill now so that we have time to deliberate on and debate it.

The reason why I am calling up my amendment is simply that the time is here; let us get down to business and bring such refinements, improvements, or changes that we can get—in terms of groundwork toward eliminating the retirement test—and do it as expeditiously as possible. For that reason, I commend the distinguished majority leader (Mr. MANSFIELD) for presenting to the Senate an amendment which raised the amount of money a social security recipient can earn without losing benefits, from $1,680 to $3,000. As a cosponsor of this amendment and a longtime advocate of a liberalization in the retirement test, I was most pleased with the overwhelming margin by which the Senate approved this proposal.

In December of 1970, I offered a floor amendment to the Social Security Amendments of 1970 to raise the earnings limitation from $1,680 to $2,400. My amendment passed the Senate, but unfortunately died later when the bill failed to go to conference. I, therefore, reintroduced a two-step revised version of this amendment during the 92d Congress. The revised version sought to raise the earnings limitation to $2,400 upon enactment of H.R. 1, and a year later, to $3,000. In the meantime, my proposal called upon the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to conduct a study on the feasibility of eliminating the retirement test entirely, and to report back to Congress on January 1, 1974, with specific recommendations for revising the retirement test.

The Senate acted yesterday not only to raise the earnings limitation from $1,680 to $3,000, but it also defeated an amendment to eliminate the retirement test entirely, offered by the junior senator from Arizona (Mr. GOLDWATER). As the record of yesterday's debate indicates, there is considerable support for eliminating the retirement test altogether, but the primary obstacle is the high cost involved.

The Social Security Administration estimates the cost at $2.2 billion the first year. The Senate Finance Committee says the cost might be as high as $2.5 billion the first year. Furthermore, the committee maintains that only about 80,000 people would benefit from elimination of the test.

It is hard for me to accept without question either of these arguments. With respect to the cost figures of $2.2 to $2.5 billion, it seems to me that there must be certain offsetting factors. For one thing, allowing social security recipients to work without any penalty could mean increased social security revenues derived from the taxes they would pay into the trust fund as well as into the general treasury. For another, allowing people over age 65 to keep all their earnings might mean a decrease in Federal welfare expenditures—particularly after—enactment of H.R. 1 welfare reform, as many social security recipients also receive welfare.

With respect to the estimate that only about 800,000 people would be affected, I am convinced that the number is much higher. Within only a few days, one of my constituents, on her own, collected over 5,000 signatures on a petition urging that the retirement test be abolished. My own mail runs more heavily on this issue than any other, and this has been true over an extended period of several years.

All this notwithstanding, I believe the Congress does need more complete and more accurate information than it now has on the cost of eliminating the retirement test and the number of people affected. In addition, I believe the entire concept of the retirement test should be reevaluated in light of private pension plan deficiencies, and the resultant need for individuals to continue work after retirement. A further factor to consider is the extent to which life expectancy is increasing, and the consequent need and/or desire of individuals to extend the period of their working life.

I have long felt that the whole philosophy of the retirement test is wrong, that it is wrong to penalize people for working—particularly when they need to supplement a meager retirement income. For many people who could never afford to invest in stocks and bonds during their working years, or whose savings were wiped out by prolonged and catastrophic illnesses in their families, working after may be the only method available to them to acquire more than a poverty-level income.

But it is clear that eliminating the retirement test immediately would mean a radical and perhaps costly departure from the present program. If we are to take such a step, we clearly need a more accurate estimate of the cost involved—including offsetting factors—and of the number of people affected. To give the hard, cost-analysis data that we need, I propose an amendment which would mandate the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to conduct an in-depth review of the retirement test, giving special attention to the above two factors—cost and number of people affected—as well as to inquire into such questions as:

First, the extent to which life expectancy is increasing, and the resultant need of individuals to extend the period of their working life;

Second, the extent to which individuals are not eligible for benefits under private pension plans, and resultant need for individuals to continue work after retirement age; and

Third, the desirability of relating the retirement test to the annual income needs of individuals over age 65.

My amendment requires that the Secretray report back to Congress by January 1, 1974, with specific recommendations on the feasibility and desirability of eliminating the retirement test altogether.

Mr. President, I urge the adoption of my amendment as a preliminary step necessary to enable us to eliminate the retirement test completely.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, the suggestion embodied in the amendment of the Senator from Illinois has been around a long time. Every time it has been considered, we come up against the question of cost. We also come up against what is to me an interesting problem: we think in terms, generally, of the man who is retired and then goes out and gets another job. If we eliminate the retirement test, we start to pay social security at age 65 and the man need not retire; he can stay on his job.

The average age at which people claim social security retirement benefits is not 65; it is 68. If that does not change, and we completely eliminate the retirement test, we are going to pay social security, on an average, for 3 years for all employees while they continue to work at the same jobs, in addition to affording the opportunity people will have who have retired to work at any job they please.

I am sure the Senator from Illinois knows that some years ago the committee provided that privilege at age 72; so what we are talking about now is really what we are going to do about people between the ages of 65 and 72.

I agree with the Senator from Illinois that it probably would be helpful for the committee and for Congress as a whole, as well as for the administration, if we could settle once and for all on what real costs are involved, the money and the number of people, and, if we could have a study on the sociological effects of a situation which makes it possible for a man to know that at 65 he can quit work and if he can persuade his employer to continue him on the job, he automatically gets social security. It ceases, then, to be social security and becomes a guaranteed annuity at the age of 65, with no other requirements.

But under the circumstances and since this question has been raised and the figures have been challenged, representing the judgment of the committee and with their specific approval, I am prepared to say to the Senator that we will be happy to accept the amendment, take it to conference, and see what happens to it.

Therefore, Mr. President, I move that the amendment be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Illinois.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I again wish to express my deep appreciation to the committee and to its very able ranking minority member. The basic thrust of this amendment is simply to give us the hard, accurate cost analysis in order to provide the groundwork for eliminating the retirement test.

It is my understanding that the advisory council on social security will be convening shortly, and I think this issue would be a very good issue for that Council to take up.

Mr. BENNETT. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The second assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that either of two members of my staff, Mrs. Julia Bloch or Mrs. Constance Beaumont, be permitted to be present in the chamber during the remainder of the debate on H.R. 1.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The second assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1972

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill (H.R. 1) to amend the Social Security Act, to make improvements in the medicare and medicaid programs, to replace the existing Federal-State public assistance programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. PELL. I ask unanimous consent that Richard Smith, of the staff of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, be accorded the privilege of the floor during the consideration of my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk proceeded to read the amendment.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be waived.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment reads as follows:

On page 268, line 11, insert the following:

EYEGLASSES, DENTURES, HEARING AIDS AND PODIATRIC SERVICES

Sec. 215A. (a) Section 1861(s)(8) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "(other than dental").

(b) Section 1862(a) of such Act is amended—

(1) in clause (7) thereof, by striking out "eyeglasses or eye examinations for the purpose of prescribing, fitting, or changing eyeglasses, procedures performed (during the course of any eye examination) to determine the refractive state of the eyes, hearing aids or examinations therefor,"; and

(2) by inserting "or" at the end of clause (10), and striking out clauses (12) and (13) thereof.

(c) Section 1861(s) of such Act is further amended—

(1) by striking out "and" where it appears at the end of clause (8);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of clause (9) and inserting in lieu thereof"; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(10) eyeglasses and eye examinations for the purpose of prescribing, fitting, or changing eyeglasses, procedures performed (during the course of any eye examination) to determine the refractive state of the eyes, and hearing aids and examinations therefor."

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, this amendment is very much along the lines of one I offered last March, due to changes in the bill, it is offered as a new amendment.

This amendment specifically provides that eyeglasses, dentures, hearing aids, and podiatric services, or foot care, is available under medicare to our older citizens. All it really does is make sure that some of the compelling needs of our older citizens who are covered, theoretically, by medicare but find their expenses mounting, are met.

The need of our older citizens for these services is intense. I know this from personal observation. As a member of the Special Committee on the Aging, I have conducted hearings in Rhode Island, in Providence and in Woonsocket, my own city of Newport. Also from my travels around the State and Nation, I have become conscious of the acute needs of our older citizens for these additional medical services.

When a citizen who needs to buy eyeglasses but has a fixed allowance, that purchase becomes a major expenditure. To buy glasses may mean having to do without food for a week or 2 weeks. We must recognize that the older citizens, those living on a fixed income are affected by inflation—our cruelest tax—more than any other citizens. It is our oldest citizens who often have to eat dog food and cat food because meat is too expensive.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. PELL. Our studies have indicated that many of our oldest citizens have no teeth. Indeed there are many Americans over the age of 55 who do not have teeth. Under the present law they have to make a choice between continuing without teeth or getting dentures and not having the food on which to use those teeth, a hideous and terrible choice.

Due to a need for hearing aids, many of our older citizens do not enjoy more of the amenities of life. They cannot hear what is going on, around them. Nor can they hear what comes out of the television receiver as well as see what the picture shows.

I have included in my podiatric services, or foot care, which is one of the unsung vital medical necessities, a lack of which cripples many of our older citizens.

Mr. President, I think the needs of our oldest citizens are particularly acute at this time. As Americans, we are very concious of the general community, of the people who are reasonably well, have jobs, move around, and are seen in public. However the sick, the poor, and the old are tucked away in little corners, little hovels, little rooms, scarcely perceptible—really perceptible only to those of us who go after them and see them; no matter whether it be priests after their souls, caseworkers after their cases, or those trying to do something about their problems. We go and see those people. The general community is not aware of the degree of misery that is extant in the United States today affecting the poor, the sick, and the old.

I think that we as a nation have an obligation to try to make it a little more possible that the golden years of our citizens are really golden, and not tinsel years, and that they have the amenities which all of us in this room take for granted, eyeglasses, hearing aids, and teeth. We do not realize that for many of our older citizens these are luxuries they cannot afford. These items are not included under medicare. I believe they should be.

This is an amendment which I have had before the Senate for 6 months in one form or another, and I hope it will secure the support of this body.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, this amendment would cost the Government $3,700 million a year. If we could afford it, and if the taxpayers were willing to pay for it—and that is something that we have to trust to the conscience and judgment of every Senator—it would be nice to provide people with free eyeglasses, free hearing aids, and free dentures. But we are taxing the taxpayers right now, Mr. President, more than $80 billion annually for income maintenance arrangements, the way it is now, if medicare and medicaid veterans pensions are included.

The bill before the Senate is a most generous bill as far as the aged are concerned. It increases the benefits for the aged far beyond anything that the administration recommended—so much so that this could well be regarded as a budget-busting bill the way it is now.

The bill before us proposes that those who are on social security, if they have had 30 years of covered employment—and anyone who has only social security to rely upon for the future will have that 30 years of employment, unless he has additional pensions as well as social security from other employment—are assured $200 a month minimum. We provide in this bill a supplemental security income supplement which would supplement the $50 of assured social security income to persons with any social security benefits with an additional $130, to guarantee that person $180. Even if a person never had been associated with the social security program, and had no pension of any nature, he would be guaranteed at least $130 a month.

We can assume that he would use some of that money to provide eyeglasses for himself, if he needed them, or a hearing aid, or dentures.

I should point out that for people over 65, eyeglasses almost fall into the category of a hat or a pair of shoes, because most people over 40 need an adjustment for vision.

While, of course, eyeglasses are something they ought to have, just as food or housing or clothes, it is something they can provide for themselves; and they can judge in terms of priority as to whether they ought to spend the additional money to buy a new suit of clothes or to buy a pair of eyeglasses.

This amendment does not propose the tax to pay for it, but the taxpayers will have to pay for it. It comes out of their hide, in any event.

So, although we would like to do many things for people—this item does not claim a higher priority than many other things which would be nice to do for people, if we had $3.5 billion to spend.

So I hope that the amendment will not be agreed to. I applaud the Senator for his good intentions and his desire to help the aged, but there has to be some stopping point where we decide it is about as much as the taxpayers can pay for now.

We have already passed an $8 billion across-the-board social security benefit increase. This bill provides another $14 billion in social security related and public welfare items for the aged as well as for the poor in the family category, and we have added another $600 million by raising the earnings limitation with the Mansfield amendment yesterday. So this bill, when taken together with the social security across-the-board increase which was spun off from it, results in a total increase of expenditures in this area of almost $23 billion in just 1 year.

About this time, someone is going to start saying, "How about the taxpayer? Should not someone come to his aid?" I think that, in conscience, we ought to start thinking about the taxpayer, because he would have to pay $3.7 billion more for something of this sort, and somebody will have to collect the taxes. You cannot get all this money out of the rich. There are not that many of them. We would have to tax middle-income and low-income people to pay for the things called for in this category.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. BENNETT. If this is to be a social security benefit, theoretically, we should raise the social security tax. The Senator from Louisiana and I already are hearing from people back home who like the 20-percent increase they are going to get; but the workers are very disturbed to find that the average worker will have $200 a year added to his tax.

If favored by a payroll tax this proposal would increase the tax. We have raised the tax from 5.2 percent of payroll to 6 percent of payroll in this bill. This proposal would force us to increase the tax further, to about 6.4 percent.

The committee has always prided itself on including the necessary tax changes to finance the benefits we have put into the bill. I do not think the Senate is ready to add to the tax in order to satisfy this particular need, which is more limited than the Senator from Rhode Island would seem to think.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. CURTIS. I am sure that we all listened with interest when the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island talked about the aged people who are in need of the benefits that his amendment would provide. Since this is a social security bill—these benefits are provided for as a matter of right—these added benefits would be paid to all aged people. We would be imposing a tax upon all workers to give these added benefits to all people over 65, not limited to the group that the distinguished Senator was talking about—to wit, those who are in need and who must go without these things or cut down their food budget or something of that nature.

Certainly, if aged people are suffering because of the lack of the things provided in the Senator's amendment, society should take care of them; but it does not follow that the whole social security system should be enlarged and the tax increased to give those things to all aged people, including those who can afford them. We are at a point at which there cannot be any increase in benefits without an immediate increase in taxes.

Not too long ago, we had a reserve in the social security fund that would carry it on for 3 years. Then it became less and less. Now there is sufficient money in the reserve to send out the checks to those on the rolls for about a year. But with the action of some weeks ago on the raise in benefits, the reserve is going to go down to less than a year—about 9 months, which is getting rather close.

So any proposal to raise benefits of any kind, in reality, is a proposal to increase the tax on taxpayers, who are already very much overburdened.

Twenty-two million Americans who pay a social security tax do not make even enough money to pay a Federal income tax. This, in reality, is a proposal to tax the poor, or at least the lower income, in their working years in order to pay a benefit to everybody over 65, including the well-to-do and the wealthy. I think the need should be met, but I do not think it should be met in the manner the Senator proposes, because it would have to be paid to everybody.

Mr. LONG. I point out that this amendment would provide these benefits under social security or medicare. Under the medicaid program, many States do; and all States can, if they wish, provide these benefits. They can provide the eyeglasses and the dentures and a hearing aid, under medicaid. That is need-related.

Compared to the other needs we have, I would have to insist we have many things that would claim a higher priority than this, when we are talking about providing something under social security for a person who presumably has assets and does not qualify for public welfare.

We voted yesterday to say that every older person on social security can have $3,000 a year of income without reducing his social security check at all. Why should we provide the benefits in this amendment to people not in need at all to the tune of $3,700,000,000, while as yet we do not feel that we can afford to provide catastrophic health insurance?

We have 5,000 good citizens a year who need kidney transplants, yet because they cannot afford a kidney transplant, which costs about $8,000, many die. They have to die because they cannot pay for the health care and they have not reached 65 for medicare to take care of them. So we have many good people in their productive years who will die because they cannot afford to pay for health care and we have not been able to provide for it. I am not pressing for a catastrophic health insurance amendment at this time because of the great cost of this bill the way it stands at this point. When we are proceeding in this manner, considering lower priority benefits I say that we are putting the cart before the horse. Other benefits take a higher priority.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. BENNETT. I think the Senator could use me as exhibit A. I am a social security recipient because I have passed the age to be a social security beneficiary and the benefits come to me automatically whether I work or not. I have a very nice pair of glasses. Under the Senator's amendment, I could charge these glasses to the social security system.

Mr. PASTORE. Mr. President, will my colleague yield to me?

Mr. PELL. I am happy to yield to my senior colleague.

Mr. PASTORE. Mr. President, I realize that there are some economic difficulties involved in this amendment and I believe my junior colleague is conscious of that fact. But there is a human element to be considered that I do not believe can be easily disregarded.

Things have changed in this world. There was a time when a son or daughter felt it their obligation to take care of their parents when they became old.

Today, the fashion is that the son and daughter have worries of their own. We establish our own little house with our charming wife and two or three little babies. We find in many instances where one mother and one father have taken care of 10 children, but 100 children do not seem to be able to take care of one father or one mother these days.

That is what is happening in our society today. Sadly enough, that is the result of the evolution of our attitudes. It exists not only in this country, not only in this district, but throughout the entire world.

What we are talking about here is the little old man, not some millionaire out in Utah who does not need the money to buy glasses. As a matter of fact, anyone who has got more than half a million dollars in the bank and wants to charge his eyeglasses to the Government should be ashamed of himself. We are not talking about him, although there may be a handful of those people around.

I say, quite frankly, that is not the question before the Senate this afternoon. What we are talking about here is the little old lady who cannot see without glasses. She cannot read the newspapers because she cannot buy the glasses. We are also thinking about the little old man who cannot hear because he does not have a hearing aid. He cannot buy the hearing aid because he does not have the money. No one seems to be worrying about that.

We can say to the little man or the little old lady, "You can get your glasses or your hearing aid by going on social welfare, declare yourself to be a pauper and put yourself on the relief rolls." Yes, but if it does not come out of the right pocket it will come out of the left pocket, but the money must somehow, come out. But these aged citizens have got to lose their dignity as human beings to put themselves on relief.

That is what has been happening, and let us face it.

Now we are saying "But the worker has to pay." Well, I have never had anyone complain to me too much about that, because he realizes that, somehow, it is doing some good in his community, dignifying human life in his community. It may be his father. It may be his mother. I do not think he begrudges the fact that he might have to pay a tenth of one percent more in social security. Maybe we will come to that. I realize that it gets to a point of no return.

But I am saying, we are not in here now pleading as bleeding hearts today. This is a humanistic amendment. I repeat, I know it will cost $3 billion. But on June 30 last, the President of the United States asked for $3 billion for Vietnam. Somehow the money comes up. The money we pour into Vietnam, according to the administration, does not do anything to inflation, but when we vote for $1.6 billion more than he asked for in HEW for the people, they say that is inflationary. When we want to buy eyeglasses for the elderly poor, that is inflationary. When we want to buy a hearing aid for this little old man that cannot hear and he cannot buy a hearing aid because he does not have the money, they say that is inflationary. All we are saying, this is not a punishment of the workers of America—and they are not complaining. The people who seem to complain are the well to do, who resist these things—all I am saying is that one of the tragedies of our time, in such a beautiful society like the United States of America, where we have over 205 million people, so many ride around in big black limousines, smoking big cigars, with a radio in the car and a telephone in the back, and on the street corner, as the car goes by, there are some people who do not know where their next meal is coming from. It is a pity.

Today, the New York Times wrote an editorial endorsing Senator McGOVERN for the Presidency of the United States. I wish everyone would read it. I hope that everyone will read it, about what this man is trying to do. He may have been born 30 years before his time. I do not know. Maybe some of his ideas, according to our present-day concepts, are far-fetched and far-reaching. I do not know. I am telling you, Mr. President, if we want to bring back morality in our society, if we want to bring back stability in this society, if we want to make America work, we had better listen once again to those eloquent words of John F. Kennedy when he said:

> If a free society cannot take care of the many who are poor, how can it save the few who are rich?

That is it today.

Who can save the few that are rich? I say to those of you who are rich: Beware.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, we are not debating here about what we should do for the poor. The poor already benefit from medicaid. Under medicaid we provide for those poor who need eyeglasses, dentures, and hearing aids that the amendment refers to.

We are talking about people who are not sufficiently poor to be eligible for benefits under a public welfare program.

Just this year, we provided for a 20-percent across-the-board increase for the same beneficiaries in terms of cash social security benefits. If they want to buy eyeglasses, then they can use some of that 20 percent and buy them with that.

Mr. President, in this bill we have more than $3 billion additional benefits for aged, blind, and disabled people whom we will lift out of poverty, not calling it welfare as the President suggested in his Miami convention speech, but calling it a supplemental security income. It will be liberal. Aged people can get, if they have any social security income coming to them at all, $180. Those with 30 years of social security coverage, no matter how low their wages might be, get $200.

All of that puts them above the established poverty level as defined today, and we expect to keep them out of poverty.

If we want to provide more for these aged people 65 and over, would it not make a lot better sense just to give them more cash, just give them the money and let them decide for themselves. If they want to spend it on eyeglasses or if they want to spend it on dentures or if they want to spend it on hearing aids, let them do it. I will say with all the confidence of one who has been through this fight before, they will get a lot better buy if we give them the cash, than if we say, "All right, you get free eyeglasses. Go down and get your free eyeglasses."

We found when we put medicare into effect, that it cost much more than anybody estimated. I was predicting this back at that time, for a very simple reason. We have people asking for the service who really would not be asking for it if they had to pay for it themselves. And they just came in droves, once the Government was going to pay for it. And then when they came to ask for services they would have not asked for, they asked for more than they would have asked for in the first instance, if the Government was not going to pay for it. They would go to the hospital and stay, where they would not have gone, and when they are there, in any event, they would stay a lot longer than they would have stayed if they were paying for it themselves.

my proposal Monday, when it is introduced, but needless to say, I will be delighted to discuss the measure now with any of my colleagues, in order to benefit from comments they may have.

Mr. MOSS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my staff assistant, Mr. Val Halamandaris, be permitted to be on the floor during the debate on the pending measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I am going to suggest the absence of a quorum in a moment or two, unless a Senator cares to offer an amendment, because I understand there are a number of amendments that will be offered.

I would like to suggest to Senators who have in mind offering amendments to prepare them and to send them to the desk, today if possible, or as soon as they can, so we can have the amendments printed and know what they are.

We have been working on this matter for a long time, Mr. President, and Senators who want to offer amendments really should have come before the committee and made their suggestions known to us so the committee could consider them. I know that Senators have the privilege of waiting until a Senate committee reports a bill, and then offer amendments on the floor. Every Senator has that right, but I would think Senators would be asking a great deal of the Senate to ask it to consider amendments to a bill that is this long a bill, particularly when they send unprinted amendments to the desk, that have not been suggested to the committee, as occurs from time to time. I hope Senators will get their amendments printed and give Senators an opportunity to look at them, and give our committee a chance to study them, and give our staffs time to analyze them, and have them available as soon as possible.

We on the committee are ready to proceed and to vote on any amendments Senators want to offer, but at this moment there is no one ready to move ahead with his proposal. I do know there are Senators who want to offer amendments and not be foreclosed of that right. Therefore, Mr. President, reluctantly I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The second assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Also, with eyeglasses—it is always nice to have an extra pair around some place, three or four pairs, so if you have one pair in the house and one pair some place else, in case you misplace one, you have one pair to get along with; so you have a surplus of them and you need not have the inconvenience of looking for them.

Mr. President, we get into all of these problems if we are going to provide these things for people and they get no cash advantage for not claiming them. We would have been far better off if we had said, "Let us provide an additional 5 percent benefit across-the-board for all aged people." We could do that at less cost than this amendment. We could provide almost a 10-percent increase for all beneficiaries under the old age and survivors insurance program, a 10-percent across-the-board increase for them for what it would cost us to provide eyeglasses, dentures, and hearing aids to people who are able to pay for them. And we are not talking about people who are unable to pay, who are eligible for medicaid. We are talking about people who are able to pay for a number of things we provide for here. We provide generous benefits in the bill. We provide more than $3 billion of additional benefits for the aged in the welfare sections of the bill alone. We are not calling it welfare any more, because they will be well off enough that we should not talk of it as welfare. The means test is so liberal that we cannot regard it as a means test any more. This provides about $2½ billion beyond anything the administration recommended, and this administration was not niggardly in suggesting some assistance themselves. So, with all of those benefits, we are going to heap on top of it something that would cost $3.7 billion, something that would have a tax increase connected with it and something that claims a lower priority compared to other things that people of the country need more.

If I had to give one example, I would give the example I referred to. There are people in this country dying today who have not reached the age of 65. They are working people who have worked for everything that they have. They come down with kidney trouble and need dialysis treatment or need a kidney transplant and they cannot afford it. To put something like eyeglasses ahead of a catastrophic illness program, for example, makes no sense at all.

For that reason, Mr. President, I hope that the Senate would not add this measure to the bill.

I think that there comes a time when we ought to have some small pity for the taxpayer. And I think that there are other things which claim a higher priority than this amendment.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, all the words spoken here are correct. It is an expensive amendment. It is a question of priorities. There are some people who are of the age of 65 and can afford the benefits I provide for. They will be able to receive these amenities without paying for them, just as they can now receive social security benefits and still work if they are over the age of 72, just as they can receive social security benefits and earn a certain amount if they are over 65, and just as they can receive medicare benefits. I agree the tax is very high now and would favor amending the whole concept under which funds for social security are raised. I would get away from the present regressive system which hits the middle- and low-income man the hardest.

I would like to see the emphasis put the other way. In any event, I think that both sides have expressed their views. I would suggest that we vote on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Rhode Island. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. I announce that the Senator from Louisiana (Mrs. EDWARDS), the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. HARRIS), the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. MCGOVERN), the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. MCINTYRE), the Senator from Montana (Mr. METCALF), and the Senator from Alabama (Mr. SPARKMAN) are necessarily absent.

So Mr. PELL's amendment was rejected.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was defeated.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, a number of Senators have asked me about my intention to offer an amendment to provide for the testing of H.R. 1. I think it is appropriate for me to speak to that point at this time. We are currently having the amendment drafted, and I am hopeful I will be able to have it offered no later than Monday of next week.

As Senators know, last March 22 I introduced an amendment—No. 1077—to H.R. 1, then pending before the Finance Committee. The measure called for a 2-year pilot test of both the workfare and family assistance portions of H.R. 1, as passed by the House June 22, 1971. I was joined in this amendment by seven other Senators who felt, as I did, that the Congress should carefully evaluate the trial results of these programs before enacting more permanent legislation.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, may we have order in the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is not in order.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. There are too many conversations going around along the wall of the Chamber.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. Since that time, the Finance Committee has reported out a very different bill. It seems to me, Mr. President, that this latter measure is equally deserving of a carefully designed and conducted test, along with the House version of title IV. Each speaks in a different way to the sadly deteriorating current patchwork of welfare programs.

Therefore, it is my intention next week to introduce an amendment which will call for a test of these proposals, in different localities. I hope in this way to persuade the Senate to authorize and then weigh actual field results, rather than rely on predictive data alone.

Mr. President, as a second-term Congressman in 1970, I urged that such a pilot test of family assistance—as described in H.R. 16311—be enacted. Perhaps if it had, we could be working toward a nationwide solution of the welfare problem today.

I will try to elaborate on the terms of

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1972

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill (H.R. 1) to amend the Social Security Act, to make improvements in the medicare and medicaid programs, to replace the existing Federal-State public assistance programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, what is the pending matter before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is H.R. 1, to amend the Social Security Act.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. I thank the Presiding Officer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to amendment.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I call up my amendment No. 1619, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order. The aisles will be cleared.

Will the Senator from California send a copy of his amendment to the desk?

The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk proceeded to read the amendment.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CRANSTON's amendment (No. 1619) is as follows:

On page 615, after line 5, insert the following new section:

SEC. 306. Title XI of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"AUTOMATIC INCREASE IN STANDARDS OF NEED UNDER PUBLIC ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

"SEC. 1311. (a)(1) In addition to the requirements imposed by other provisions of law as a condition of approval of a State plan of any State (other than the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, or the Virgin Islands) to provide aid or assistance to individuals under title I, X, XIV, or XVI, there is hereby imposed the requirement (and the plan shall be deemed to require), for the period beginning October 1, 1972, and ending December 31, 1973, that the standard of need (as defined in paragraph (2)) applicable under any such plan shall be increased by the amounts certified in the certifications of the Secretary made pursuant to subsection (b).

"(2) For purposes of this section, the term 'standard of need', when used in connection with any approved plan referred to in paragraph (1), means the income amount (not otherwise disregarded under the plan) used to determine (in the case of each category of applicants for and recipients of aid or assistance under the plan) eligibility of such applicants and recipients for aid or assistance under such plan.

"(b)(1) Whenever there is enacted any provision of law providing a general increase in monthly benefits payable to individuals under title II, the Secretary shall (at the earliest practicable date after the enactment of such provision) determine the average rate of such increase and shall certify to each State agency administering or supervising the administration of any State plan approved under title I, X, XIV, or XVI, the average so determined.

"(2) Any such certification shall be effective, in the case of the standard of need applicable under any approved State plan referred to in subsection (a), for months beginning more than 30 days after such certification is made to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of such State plan, or, if the general increase (referred to in paragraph (1)), on the basis of which such certification is made, will not be effective by such date, then it shall be effective on the first month for which such general increase will be effective."

SEC. 2. (a) Subject to subsection (b), the amendment made by the first section of this Act shall be effective in the case of general increases in monthly benefits payable to individuals under title II of the Social Security Act resulting from the enactment of provisions of law enacted after January 1972.

(b) For purposes of section 1131 of the Social Security Act (as added by the first section of this Act), any certification under subsection (b) of such section on account of any general increase in monthly benefits payable to individuals under title II of the Social Security Act resulting from the enactment, prior to the enactment of this Act but after January 1972, shall be made at the earliest practicable date after the enactment of this Act and shall be effective with respect to months beginning two months after the month of enactment of this Act.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I yield to my colleague from California.

Mr. TUNNEY. Mr President, I ask unanimous consent that, during the consideration and the debate on H.R. 1, two members of my staff, Tony Davis and Jesus Melendez, be permitted to be present in the Chamber.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, who and how many people?

Mr. TUNNEY. Tony Davis and Jesus Melendez, two of my assistants.

Mr. LONG. How many does the Senator wish to bring in?

Mr. TUNNEY. Two legislative assistants.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, this measure was originally introduced by myself and my colleague from California (Mr. TUNNEY) as S. 3328.

Also, I would like to note that my distinguished colleague from the California congressional delegation, Representative PHILLIP BURTON, has long been a leader in the effort to assure equitable treatment of social security beneficiaries and aged, blind and disabled assistance recipients as embodied in S. 3328, and I would like to commend Congressman BURTON for his continued efforts on behalf of the elderly and express my appreciation or his invaluable assistance and support.

Following the introduction of S. 3328 by Senator TUNNEY and myself, it was referred to the Senate Finance Committee for consideration during deliberations on H.R. 1. Although I applaud the many progressive and important changes in the present law which have been adopted by the committee, and extend my deep appreciation for the committee's inclusion of an amendment I offered with Senator GURNEY to extend medicare benefits to persons under 65 who elect 'to "buy in" to medicare—I was dismayed to note that the committee did not incorporate S. 3328 into H.R. 1.

Consequently, Senator TUNNEY and I are offering this amendment to enable those needy individuals who are aged, blind, or disabled to receive an increase in their assistance payments commensurate with increases in social security benefits.

This would be achieved by requiring States to increase by a rate corresponding to the rate of the social security increase, the standard of need used to determine eligibility for assistance under these programs.

This provision would take effect in October of 1972 and continue through December of 1973—when the aged, blind, and disabled assistance program would be federalized under the Senate Finance Committee proposal.

This concept, in a somewhat different form, was recommended in 1970 by the Senate Finance Committee in its consideration of H.R. 17550, the proposed Social Security Amendments of 1970. The committee report—No. 91-1431, page 43—said:

PASS ALONG OF SOCIAL SECURITY INCREASES TO WELFARE RECIPIENTS

Under other provisions of the bill, social security benefits would be increased by 10 percent, with the minimum basic social security benefit increased to $100 from its present $64 level. If no modification were made in the present welfare law, however, many needy aged, blind and disabled persons would get no benefit from these substantial increases in social security since offsetting reductions would be made in their welfare grants. To assure that such individuals would enjoy at least some benefit from the social security increases, the Committee bill requires States to raise their standards of need for those in the aged, blind, and disabled categories by $10 per month for a single individual and $15 per month for a couple. As a result of this provision, recipients of aid to the aged, blind, or disabled, who are also social security beneficiaries would enjoy an increase in total monthly income of at least $10 ($15 in the case of a couple).

The method I am proposing to assure that the aged, blind, or disabled enjoy the benefits from social security increases eliminates the discriminatory effect of the so-called pass-along provision, which results in the granting of cost-of-living increases only to those public assistance recipients who are also beneficiaries of social security or railroad retirement benefits.

The original pass-along provisions, included in the 1965 and 1967 social security amendments permitted States, in determining an individual's need for public assistance payments, to exclude $5 and $7.50 per month, respectively, from any source—although these provisions were designed with the 1965 and 1967 social security increases in mind. Later pass-along provisions, however, limited their applicability to social security and railroad retirement beneficiaries.

The amendment now offered by Senator TUNNEY and myself would rectify this situation by substituting the increase in the standard of need concept for the pass-along concept.

It is important to note that the Finance Committee has included a $50 disregard of outside income in H.R. 1, and the committee is to be commended for this very excellent provision. This provision would not take effect, however, until the federalization of aged, blind, and disabled assistance programs in January of 1974. Thus, the 20-percent increase in benefits would not be received by assistance recipients—unless we adopt a measure to deal with this interim period. The amendment I have offered would assure that every aged, blind, and disabled person receiving social security will receive the increase in benefits intended by the Congress, and that those who have no other source of income other than their assistance payments—surely the most needy individuals—will also receive an increase in benefits.

Throughout the spring and summer I have received thousands of letters from elderly persons—persons who rely on old age assistance grants and social security for their very existence—relating to their despair upon receiving from the California State Department of Public Social Services a notice that their public assistance check would be reduced by the amount of their social security increase. It is a cruel blow to deal to so many of the more than 2 million recipients of old age assistance in the United States, 60 percent of whom are also recipients of social security benefits. In California 362,000 recipients of aid to the aged blind and disabled also receive social security benefits, and thus will not benefit at all by the 1972 social security increase. An additional 159,000 individuals in California received no other income than the assistance payments under the aged, blind, and disabled category.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to join with me in support of this amendment to assure that all social security recipients receive the full benefit enacted by Congress—and which mandates an increase in equal proportion to the improvements Congress has made in social security benefits for recipients of aged, blind, and disabled payments.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CRANSTON. Yes, I am delighted to yield to the distinguished Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. HUMPHREY. First, I want to commend the two Senators from California (Mr. CRANSTON and Mr. TUNNEY).

I had offered a similar amendment. I was checking my amendment No. 1618, and I believe it would perform the same purpose—in other words, to simplify it—so that the 20-percent increase we legislated here recently on social security benefits would not be obligated or would not be checked off by the denial of other benefits under old age assistance, medical care, housing, food stamps and so forth. Is that correct?

Mr. CRANSTON. That is correct.

Mr. HUMPHREY. So the purpose of the amendment of the Senators from California is to make realistic, meaningful, and practical the 20-percent increase.

Mr. CRANSTON. Exactly. And it is totally consistent with the objectives and purposes of the Finance Committee.

Mr. HUMPHREY. And it would not remove the $50 provision in the Finance Committee bill?

Mr. CRANSTON. No, it would not.

Mr. HUMPHREY. There is no sense in my thinking about calling up my amendment. I would like to be associated with the distinguished Senators of California in this matter, because I am confident that Congress would want to do what the Senators propose.

I just say this: Nothing has caused more consternation among the senior citizens of our country and among people who are concerned about the plight of our senior citizens than this giving with one hand and taking away with another. Congress gave a 20-percent increase and took away, under administrative action, more than the increase.

I go home to my State of Minnesota, and people come to me by the dozens and say, "What happened down there?" I recall going back and addressing a group of senior citizens, and I was proudly proclaiming that we had just passed a 20-percent social security increase. Immediately, a little delegation called on me and said, "Thanks for nothing," because the 20-percent increase was eaten up by an increase in rents, in housing, loss of food stamps, and loss of old age assistance benefits that were coming to some of the beneficiaries of social security.

I want to join the Senator, if he will permit me, in support of his amendment, and I hope I can be a cosponsor of his amendment, because I think this is something that needs to be done. I am pleased that the Senators from California have taken the initiative on this important matter of social and economic justice.

Mr. CRANSTON. I thank the Senator very much for his stanch, eloquent, and direct support.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the names of the distinguished Senators from Minnesota (Mr. HUMPHREY and Mr. MONDALE) be added as cosponsors of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CRANSTON. I think the point should be clearly understood that no direct expense to the Federal Government is involved in this amendment. What it does is to prevent State governments from taking, as a windfall, aid that we intended to go to the aged, the blind, and the disabled.

Mr. President, I yield to my distinguished colleague and good friend, Senator TUNNEY.

Mr. TUNNEY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, I am most pleased to be able to join my senior colleague from California in this most important amendment.

The subject has been debated on the floor in the past few weeks with the chairman of the Committee on Finance in a rather fulsome manner. As a matter of fact, I have appreciated very deeply the statements of concern by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, the chairman of the Finance Committee, with respect to the need of these senior citizens who happen to be on old-age assistance programs as well as receiving social security.

I think this is the kind of amendment that anybody who has looked at the subject matter would have to support overwhelmingly. We have more than 1,250,000 senior citizens in this country receiving old age assistance as well as social security benefits.

I am deeply concerned about the problem that exists in some States, as has been stated, where, when we increase social security old-age assistance benefits, welfare benefits go down by an equal amount of the increase in social security, so the senior citizen is left with nothing by way of an increase. This is a gross injustice.

After the colloquy I had a couple of weeks ago with the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, which was publicized in California, I received 40 or 50 letters from senior citizens who pleaded that at the nearest point in time possible this amendment be offered to some other legislation, in the hope that the distingiushed chairman of the Finance Committee would accept it.

I am pleased that Senator CRANSTON and I and Senator HUMPHREY were able to join in offering this amendment today.

Mr. CRANSTON. I thank my colleague for his support and for the effort he has made in this regard. I think the three Senators who have spoken have made an ironclad case for this amendment. I discussed it with the chairman of the committee before proceeding at this time, and I hope it can be accepted.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, starting January 1, 1974, the provisions of H.R. 1 would be far more generous than what is being suggested by the Senators from California and the Senator from Minnesota. On that date, there would be a disregard of $50 of social security or other income and an additional disregard of $85 of earned income, plus a disregard of one-half of any earned income beyond that. So the committee bill is far more generous than what the Senators from California are seeking, starting on January 1, 1974.

It was the effort of the Senator from Louisiana to try to have that program begin as soon as possible, hopefully soon enough so that this amendment would not be needed. Unfortunately, the Department contends that they need until January 1, 1974, to institute the ambitious program that appears in title III of this bill, which has the supplemental security income program, a program that would go far beyond what the Senators are suggesting.

I realize that the Senators have a good point; that while it is nice to talk about what we are going to do for the aged, blind, and disabled in 1974, something should be done to help them in the meantime. I think that something should be done along this line. I am not sure that this is the best way to work it out, but it is better than nothing; and unless we can work out a better way to meet the problem, I am persuaded that something should be in the bill to help this situation.

For that reason, Mr. President, I do not find any objection to the amendment, so far as the Senator from Louisiana is concerned. There may be Senators who might find it objectionable. I have not had an opportunity to take up this problem with the committee, although I have discussed it with some Members, and I would simply trust this to the conscience of the Senate. Personally, I will vote for it.

Mr. CRANSTON. I thank the Senator very much. His understanding of the need and his desire to fill this gap is understood and appreciated.

Mr. LONG. If this amendment were offered 12 years ago, it would have been the Long amendment rather than the Cranston amendment, because I have offered proposals along this line in the past.

Mr. CRANSTON. Perhaps the Senator would like his name added as a cosponsor.

Mr. LONG. There is no point in diluting credit for the amendment. The Senators from California and the Senator from Minnesota can take credit for it. I am aware of the problem, and I have offered similar proposals in the past.

Mr. CRANSTON. Now that we can loosely call this amendment the Long-Cranston——

Mr. LONG. I insist that it be the Cranston-Tunney-Humphrey amendment, for the Senators who offered it and raised the point. I will vote for it.

Mr. CRANSTON. The amendment is rather long; and for that reason, anyhow, I think it should be referred to as the Long amendment.

I yield to my colleague from California.

Mr. TUNNEY. Madam President, I should like to extend my personal thanks to the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee for accepting this amendment. I recall in the colloquy we had a few weeks ago, he indicated deep concern to help those who would be adversely affected, but at that time he could not say whether he would be able to accept this specific language. I completey understood that. I, therefore, deeply appreciate his consideration today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. EDWARDS). The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from California (Mr. CRANSTON).

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I believe that Senators would like to record themselves on the very important matter which is contained in title III of the pending bill. I say that because with differing opinions with regard to other things in the bill, some will want to vote for the bill as a whole and some will want to vote against it because of other items in the bill; but one of the most ambitious things in this measure is the proposal of the Finance Committee for a program that would provide $3.1 billion additional income for the aged, the blind, and the disabled. This is a program which undertakes to provide a Federal program for the aged, blind, and disabled which I think will, in large measure, replace present State programs for the same people.

We would not call it a welfare program in the future. The benefits this would provide would be so far beyond that which is being provided for these same beneficiaries, and in terms so much more generous, that we think this should be not regarded as a welfare program hereafter, that it should not be called welfare.

It is for that reason that we refer to it as supplemental security income for the aged, blind, and disabled.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent, notwithstanding the fact that the Senate has agreed by unanimous consent to agree to the committee amendments en bloc, that the provisions of title III, beginning on page 568, line 12 through page 615, line 5, may be considered as an amendment and voted on in its own right separately, and that having been agreed to by the Senate, the amendment remain subject to amendment.

The title III amendment reads as follows:

"PART A—DETERMINATION OF BENEFITS

"ELIGIBILITY FOR AND AMOUNT OF BENEFITS

"Definition of Eligible Individual

"SEC. 1611. (a)(1) Each aged, blind, or disabled individual who does not have an eligible spouse and—

"(A) whose income, other than income excluded pursuant to section 1612(b), is at a rate of not more than $1,560 for the calendar year 1974 or any calendar year thereafter, and

"(B) whose resources, other than resources excluded pursuant to section 1613(a), are not more than $2,500,

"(B) whose resources (together with the resources of such spouse), other than resources excluded pursuant to section 1613(a), are not more than $2,500,

"(2) The benefit under this title for an individual who has an eligible spouse shall be payable at the rate of $2,340 for the calendar year 1974 and any calendar year thereafter, reduced by the amount of income, not excluded pursuant to section 1612(b), of such individual and spouse.

"Period for Determination of Benefits

"(c)(1) An individual's eligibility for benefits under this title and the amount of such benefits shall be determined for each quarter of a calendar year except that, if the initial application for benefits is filed in the second or third month of a calendar quarter, such determinations shall be made for each month in such quarter. Eligibility for and the amount of such benefits for any quarter shall be redetermined at such time or times as may be provided by the Secretary.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection an application shall be considered to be effective as of the first day of the month in which it was actually filed.

"Special Limits on Gross Income

"(d) The Secretary may prescribe the circumstances under which, consistently with the purposes of this title, the gross income from a trade or business (including farming) will be considered sufficiently large to make an individual ineligible for benefits under this title. For purposes of this subsection, the term 'gross income' has the same meaning as when used in chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

"Limitation on Eligibility of Certain Individuals

"(e)(1)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), no person shall be an eligible individual or eligible spouse for purposes of this title with respect to any month if throughout such month he is an inmate of a public institution.

"(B) In any case where an eligible individual or his eligible spouse (if any) is, throughout any month, in a hospital, extended care facility, nursing home, or intermediate care facility receiving payments (with respect to such individual or spouse) under a State plan approved under title XIX, the benefit under this title for such individual for such month shall be payable—

"(i) at a rate not in excess of $300 per year (reduced by the amount of any income not excluded pursuant to section 1612(b)) in the case of an individual who does not have an eligible spouse;

"(ii) at a rate not in excess of the sum of the applicable rate specified in subsection (b)(1) and the rate of $300 per year (reduced by the amount of any income not excluded pursuant to section 1612(b)) in the case of an individual who has an eligible spouse, if only one of them is in such a hospital, home, or facility throughout such month; and

"(iii) at a rate not in excess of $600 per year (reduced by the amount of any income not excluded pursuant to section 1612(b)) in the case of an individual who has an eligible spouse, if both of them are in such a hospital, home, or facility throughout such month.

"(2) No person shall be an eligible individual or eligible spouse for purposes of this title if, after notice to such person by the Secretary that it is likely that such person is eligible for any payments of the type enumerated in section 1612(a)(2)(B), such person fails within 30 days to take all appropriate steps to apply for and (if eligible) obtain any such payments.

"(3)(A) No person who is under the age of 65, is not blind, and is medically determined to be a drug addict or an alcoholic shall be an eligible individual or eligible spouse for purposes of this title.

"(B) The Secretary shall refer to the State or appropriate local agency administering the plan of such State approved under this XV any individual described in subparagraph (A) who—

"(i) is applying for or receiving benefits under this title, and

"(ii) would be eligible for such benefits but for the provisions of such subparagraph (A).

"(4) No person shall be an eligible individual or an eligible spouse for purposes of this title if, within one year immediately preceding his application for benefits under this title, he disposed of property (of any type) to a relative for less than fair market value, if the retention by him of such property would have caused him to be found ineligible for benefits under this title.

"Suspension of Payments to Individuals Who Are Outside the United States

"(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, no individual shall be considered an eligible individual for purposes of this title for any month during all of which such individual is outside the United States (and no person shall be considered the eligible spouse of an individual for purposes of this title with respect to any month during all of which such person is outside the United States). For purposes of the preceding sentence, after an individual has been outside the United States for any period of 30 consecutive days, he shall be treated as remaining outside the United States until he has been in the United States for a period of 30 consecutive days.

"(4)(A) if such individual (or such spouse) is blind (and has not attained age 65, or received benefits under this title (or aid under a State plan approved under section 1002 or 1602) for the month before the month in which he attained age 65), (i) the first $1,020 per year (or proportionately smaller amounts for shorter periods) of earned income not excluded by the preceding paragraphs of this subsection, plus one-half of the remainder thereof, (ii) an amount equal to any expenses reasonably attributable to the earning of any income, and (iii) such additional amounts of other income, where such individual has a plan for achieving self-support approved by the Secretary, as may be necessary for the fulfillment of such plan,

"SEC. 1613. (a) In determining the resources of an individual (and his eligible spouse, if any) there shall be excluded—

"(3) other property which, as determined in accordance with and subject to limitations prescribed by the Secretary, is so essential to the means of self-support of such individual (and such spouse) as to warrant its exclusion; and

In determining the resources of an individual (or eligible spouse) an insurance policy shall be taken into account only to the extent of its cash surrender value; except that if the total face value of all life insurance policies on any person is $1,500 or less, no part of the value of any such policy shall be taken into account.

"DISPOSITION OF RESOURCES

"(b) The Secretary shall prescribe the period or periods of time within which, and the manner in which, various kinds of property must be disposed of in order not to be included in determining an individual's eligibility for benefits. Any portion of the individual's benefits paid for any such period shall be conditioned upon such disposal; and any benefits so paid shall (at the time of the disposal) be considered overpayments to the extent they would not have been paid had the disposal occurred at the beginning of the period for which such benefits were paid.

"MEANING OF TERMS

"Aged, Blind, or Disabled Individual

"SEC. 1614. (a)(1) For purposes of this title, the term 'aged, blind, or disabled individual' means an individual who—

"(A) is 65 years of age or older, is blind (as determined under paragraph (2)), or is disabled (as determined under paragraph (3)), and

"(B) is a resident of the United States, and is either (i) a citizen or (ii) an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence.

"(2) An individual shall be considered to be blind for purposes of this title if he has central visual acuity of 20/200 or less in the better eye with the use of a correcting lens. An eye which is accompanied by a limitation in the fields of vision such that the widest diameter of the visual field subtends an angle no greater than 20 degrees shall be considered for purposes of the first sentence of this subsection as having a central visual acuity of 20/200 or less. An individual shall also be considered to be blind for purposes of this title if he is blind as defined under a State plan approved under title X or XVI as in effect for October 1972 and received aid under such plan (on the basis of blindness) for December 1973, so long as he is continuously blind as so defined.

"(3)(A) An individual shall be considered to be disabled for purposes of this title if he is unable to engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of any medically determinable physical or mental impairment which can be expected to result in death or which has lasted or can be expected to last for a continuous period of not less than twelve months. An individual shall also be considered to be disabled for purposes of this title if he is permanently and totally disabled as defined under a State plan approved under title XIV or XVI as in effect for October 1972 and received aid under such plan (on the basis of disability) for December 1973, so long as he is continuously disabled as so defined.

"(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), an individual shall be determined to be under a disability only if his physical or mental impairment or impairments are of such severity that he is not only unable to do his previous work but cannot, considering his age, education, and work experience, engage in any other kind of substantial gainful work which exists in the national economy, regardless of whether such work exists in the immediate area in which he lives, or whether a specific job vacancy exists for him, or whether he would be hired if he applied for work. For purposes of the preceding sentence (with respect to any individual), 'work which exists in the national economy' means work which exists in significant numbers either in the region where such individual lives or in several regions of the country.

"(C) For purposes of this paragraph, a physical or mental impairment is an impairment that results from anatomical, physiological, or psychological abnormalities which are demonstrable by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques.

"(D) The Secretary shall by regulations prescribe the criteria for determining when services performed or earnings derived from services demonstrate an individual's ability to engage in substantial gainful activity. Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (B), an individual whose services or earnings meet such criteria, except for purposes of paragraph (4), shall be found not to be disabled.

"(4)(A) For purposes of this title, any services rendered during a period of trial work (as defined in subparagraph (B)) by an individual who is an aged, blind, or disabled individual solely by reason of disability (as determined under paragraph (3) of this subsection) shall be deemed not to have been rendered by such individual in determining whether his disability has ceased in a month during such period. As used in this paragraph, the term 'services' means activity which is performed for remuneration or gain or is determined by the Secretary to be of a type normally performed for remuneration or gain.

"(B) The term 'period of trial work', with respect to an individual who is an aged, blind, or disabled individual solely by reason of disability (as determined under paragraph (3) of this subsection), means a period of months beginning and ending as provided in subparagraphs (C) and (D).

"(C) A period of trial work for any individual shall begin with the month in which he becomes eligible for benefits under this title on the basis of his disability; but no such period may begin for an individual who is eligible for benefits under this title on the basis of a disability if he has had a previous period of trial work while eligible for benefits on the basis of the same disability.

"(D) A period of trial work for any individual shall end with the close of whichever of the following months is the earlier:

"(i) the ninth month, beginning on or after the first day of such period, in which the individual renders services (whether or not such nine months are consecutive); or

"Eligible Spouse

"(b) For purposes of this title, the term 'eligible spouse' means an aged, blind, or disabled individual who is the husband or wife of another aged, blind, or disabled individual and who has not been living apart from such other aged, blind, or disabled individual for more than six months. If two aged, blind, or disabled individuals are husband and wife as described in the preceding sentence, only one of them may be an 'eligible individual' within the meaning of section 1611(a).

"Definition of Child

"(c) For purposes of this title, the term 'child' means an individual who is neither married nor (as determined by the Secretary) the head of a household, and who is (1) under the age of eighteen, or (2) under the age of twenty-one and (as determined by the Secretary) a student regularly attending a schol, college, or university, or a course of vocational or technical training designed to prepare him for gainful employment.

"Determination of Marital Relationships

"(d) In determining whether two individuals are husband and wife for purposes of this title, appropriate State law shall be applied; except that—

"(1) if a man and woman have been determined to be husband and wife under section 216(h)(1) for purposes of title II they shall be considered (from and after the date of such determination or the date of their application for benefits under this title, whichever is later) to be husband and wife for purposes of this title, or

"(2) if a man and woman are found to be holding themselves out to the community in which they reside as husband and wife, they shall be so considered for purposes of this title notwithstanding any other provision of this section.

"United States

"(e) For purposes of this title, the term 'United States', when used in a geographical sense, means the 50 States and the District of Columbia.

"Income and Resources of Individuals Other Than Eligible Individuals and Eligible Spouses

"(f)(1) For purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of benefits for any individual who is married and whose spouse is living with him in the same household but is not an eligible spouse, such individual's income and resources shall be deemed to include any income and resources of such spouse, whether or not available to such individual, except to the extent determined by the Secretary to be inequitable under the circumstances.

"(2) For purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of benefits for any individual who is a child under age 21, such individual's income and resources shall be deemed to include any income and resources of a parent of such individual (or the spouse of such a parent) who is living in the same household as such individual, whether or not available to such individual, except to the extent determined by the Secretary to be inequitable under the circumstances.

"REHABILITATION SERVICES FOR BLIND AND DISABLED INDIVIDUALS

"SEC. 1615. (a) In the case of any blind or disblade individual who—

"(2) is receiving benefits (or with respect to whom benefits are paid) under this title, the Secretary shall make provision for referral of such individual to the appropriate State agency administering the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, and (except in such cases as he may determine) for a review not less often than quarterly of such individual's blindness or disability and his need for and utilization of the rehabilitation services made available to him under such plan.

"(b) Every individual with respect to whom the Secretary is required to make provision for referral under subsection (a) shall accept such rehabilitation services as are made available to him under the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act; and the Secretary is authorized to pay to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of such State plan the costs incurred in the provision of such services to individuals so referred.

"(c) No individual shall be an eligible individual or eligible spouse for purposes of this title if he refuses without good cause to accept vocational rehabilitation services for which he is referred under subsection (a).

"OPTIONAL STATE SUPPLEMENTATION

"SEC. 1616. (a) Any cash payments which are made by a State (or political subdivision thereof) on a regular basis to individuals who are receiving benefits under this title or who would but for their income be eligible to receive benefits under this title, as assistance based on need in supplementation of such benefits (as determined by the Secretary), shall be excluded under section 1612(b)(6) in determining the income of such individuals for purposes of this title and the Secretary and such State may enter into an agreement which satisfies subsection (b) under which the Secretary will, on behalf of such State (or subdivision), make such supplementary payments to all such individuals,

"(b) Any agreement between the Secretary and a State entered into under subsection (a) shall provide—

"(2) such other rules with respect to eligibility for or amount of the supplementary payments, and such procedural or other general administrative provisions, as the Secretary finds necessary (subject to subsection (c)) to achieve efficient and effective administration of both the program which he conducts under this title and the optional State supplementation.

"(c) Any State (or political subdivision) making supplementary payments described in subsection (a) may at its option impose as a condition of eligibility for such payments, and include in the State's agreement with the Secretary under such subsection, a residence requirement which excludes individuals who have resided in the State (or political subdivision) for less than a minimum period prior to application for such payments.

"(d) Any State which has entered into an agreement with the Secretary under this section which provides that the Secretary will, on behalf of the State (or political subdivision), make the supplementary payments to individuals who are receiving benefits under this title (or who would but for their income be eligible to receive such benefits), shall, at such times and in such installments as may be agreed upon between the Secretary and such State, pay to the Secretary an amount equal to the expenditures made by the Secretary as such supplementary payments.

"PART B—PROCEDURAL AND GENERAL PROVISIONS

"PAYMENTS AND PROCEDURES

"Payment of Benefits

"SEC. 1631 (a)(1) Benefits under this title shall be paid at such time or times and in such installments as will best effectuate the purposes of this title, as determined under regulations (and may in any case be paid less frequently than monthly where the amount of the monthly benefit would not exceed $10).

"(2) Payments of the benefit of any individual may be made to any such individual or to his eligible spouse (if any) or partly to each, or, if the Secretary deems it appropriate to any other person (including an appropriate public or private agency) who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of such individual (or spouse).

"(3) The Secretary may by regulation establish ranges of incomes within which a single amount of benefits under this title shall apply.

"(4) The Secretary—

"(A) may make to any individual initially applying for benefits under this title who is presumptively eligible for such benefits and who is faced with financial emergency a cash advance against such benefits in an amount not exceeding $100; and

"(B) may pay benefits under this title to an individual applying for such benefits on the basis of disability for a period not exceeding 3 months prior to the determination of such individual's disability, if such individual is presumptively disabled and is determined to be otherwise eligible for such benefits, and any benefits so paid prior to such determination shall in no event be considered overpayments for purposes of subsection (b).

"(5) Payment of the benefit of any individual who is an aged, blind, or disabled individual solely by reason of blindness (as determined under section 1614(a)(2)) or disability) as determined under section 1614 (a)(3)), and who ceases to be blind or to be under such disability, shall continue (so long as such individual is otherwise eligible) through the second month following the month in which such blindness or disability ceases.

"Overpayments and Underpayments

"(b) Whenever the Secretary finds that more or less than the correct amount of benefits has been paid with respect to any individual, proper adjustment or recovery shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this subsection, be made by appropriate adjustments in future payments to such individual or by recovery from or payment to such individual or his eligible spouse (or by recovery from the estate of either). The Secretary shall make such provision as he finds appropriate in the case of payment of more than the correct amount of benefits with respect to an individual with a view to avoiding penalizing such individual or his eligible spouse who was without fault in connection with the overpayment, if adjustment or recovery on account of such overpayment in such case would defeat the purposes of this title, or be against equity or good conscience, or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration of this title.

"Hearings and Review

"(c)(1) The Secretary shall provide reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing to any individual who is or claims to be an eligible individual or eligible spouse and is in disagreement with any determination under this title with respect to eligibility of such individual for benefits, or the amount of such individual's benefits, if such individual requests a hearing on the matter in disagreement within thirty days after notice of such determination is received.

"(2) Determination on the basis of such hearing, except to the extent that the matter in disagreement involves the existence of a disability (within the meaning of section 1614(a)(3)), shall be made within ninety days after the individual requests the hearing as provided in paragraph (1).

"(3) The final determination of the Secretary after a hearing under paragraph (1) shall be subject to judicial review as provided in section 205(g) to the same extent as the Secretary's final determinations under section 205; except that the determination of the Secretary after such hearing as to any fact shall be final and conclusive and not subject to review by any court.

"Procedures; Prohibitions of Assignments; Representation of Claimants

"(d)(1) The provisions of section 207 and subsections (a), (d), (e), and (f) of section 205 shall apply with respect to this part to the same extent as they apply in the case of title II.

"(2) To the extent the Secretary finds it will promote the achievement of the objectives of this title, qualified persons may be appointed to serve as hearing examiners in hearings under subsection (c) without meeting the specific standards prescribed for hearing examiners by or under subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code.

"(3) The Secretary may prescribe rules and regulations governing the recognition of agents or other persons, other than attorneys, as hereinafter provided, representing claimants before the Secretary under this title, and may require of such agents or other persons, before being recognized as representatives of claimants, that they shall show that they are of good character and in good repute, possessed of the necessary qualifications to enable them to render such claimants valuable service, and otherwise competent to advise and asist such claimants in the presentation of their cases. An attorney in good standing who is admitted to practice before the highest court of the State, Territory, District, or insular possession of his residence or before the Supreme Court of the United States or the inferior Federal courts, shall be entitled to represent claimants before the Secretary. The Secretary may, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, suspend or prohibit from further practice before him any such person, agent, or attorney who refuses to comply with the Secretary's rules and regulations or who violates any provision of this paragraph for which a penalty is prescribed. The Secretary may, by rule and regulation, prescribe the maximum fees which may be charged for services performed in connection with any claim before the Secretary under this title, and any agreement in violation of such rules and regulations shall be void. Any person who shall, with intent to defraud, in any manner willfully and knowingly deceive, mislead, or threaten any claimant or prospective claimant or beneficiary under this title by word, circular, letter, or advertisement, or who shall knowingly charge or collect directly or indirectly any fee in excess of the maximum fee, or make any agreement directly or indirectly to charge or collect any fee in excess of the maximum fee, prescribed by the Secretary, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall for each offense by punished by a fine not exceeding $500 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

"(e) (1) (A) The Secretary shall, subject to subparagraph (B), prescribed such requirements with respect to the filing of applications, the suspension or termination of assistance, the furnishing of other data and material, and the reporting of events and changes in circumstances, as may be necessary for the effective and efficient administration of this title.

"(B) The requirements prescribed by the Secretary pursuant to subparagraph (A) shall require that eligibility for benefits under this title will not be determined solely on the basis of declarations by the applicant concerning eligibility factors or other relevant facts, and that relevant information will be verified to the maximum extent feasible from independent or collateral sources and additional information obtained as necessary in order to assure that such benefits are only provided to eligible individuals (or eligible spouses) and that the amounts of such benefits are correct.

"(2) In case of the failure by any individual to submit a report of events and changes in circumstances relevant to eligibility for or amount of benefits under this title as required by the Secretary under paragraph (1), or delay by any individual in submitting a report as so required, the Secretary (in addition to taking any other action he may consider appropriate under paragraph (1)) shall reduce any benefits which may subsequently become payable to such individual under this title by—

"(A) $25 in the case of the first such failure or delay,

"(B) $50 in the case of the second such failure or delay, and

"(C) $100 in the case of the third or a subsequent such failure or delay, except where the individual was without fault or good cause for such failure or delay existed.

"Furnishing of Information by Other Agencies

"(f) The head of any Federal agency shall provide such information as the Secretary needs for purposes of determining eligibility for or amount of benefits, or verifying other information with respect thereto.

"PENALTIES FOR FRAUD

"(2) at any time knowingly and willfully makes or causes to be made any false statement or representation of a material fact for use in determining rights to any such benefit,

"(3) having knowledge of the occurrence of any event affecting (A) his initial or continued right to any such benefit, or (B) the initial or continued right to any such benefit of any other individual in whose behalf he has applied for or is receiving such benefit, conceals or fails to disclose such event with an intent fraudulently to secure such benefit either in a greater amount or quantity than is due or when no such benefit is authorized, or shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

"(4) having made application to receive any such benefit for the use and benefit of another and having received it, knowingly and willfully converts such benefit or any part thereof to a use other than for the use and benefit of such other person,

"ADMINISTRATION

"SEC. 1633. The Secretary may make such administrative and other arrangements (including arrangements for the determination of blindness and disability under section 1614 (a) (2) and (3) in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as provided with respect to disability determinations under section 221) as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out his functions under this title.

"DETERMINATIONS OF MEDICAID ELIGIBILITY

"SEC. 1634. The Secretary may enter into an agreement with any State which wishes to do so under which he will determine eligibility for medical assistance in the case of aged, blind, or disabled individuals under such State's plan approved under title XIX. Any such agreement shall provide for payments by the State, for use by the Secretary in carrying out the agreement, of an amount equal to one-half of the cost of carrying out the agreement, but in computing such cost with respect to individuals eligible for benefits under this title, the Secretary shall include only those costs which are additional to the costs incurred in carrying out this title."

SEC. 302. The Social Security Act is amended, effective January 1, 1974, by adding after title V the following new title:

"TITLE VI—GRANTS TO STATES FOR SERVICES TO THE AGED, BLIND, OR DISABLED

"APPROPRIATION

"SEC. 601. For the purpose of encouraging each State, as far as practicable under the conditions in such State, to furnish rehabilitation and other services to help needy individuals who are 65 years of age or over, are blind, or are disabled to attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year, subject to section 1130, a sum sufficient to carry out the purposes of this title. The sums made available under this section shall be used for making payments to States which have submitted, and had approved by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, State plans for services to the aged, blind, or disabled.

"STATE PLANS FOR SERVICES TO THE AGED, BLIND, OR DISABLED

"SEC. 602. (a) A State plan for services to the aged, blind, or disabled, must—

"(1) except to the extent permitted by the Secretary, provide that it shall be in effect in all political subdivisions of the State, and if administered by them, be mandatory upon them;

"(2) provide for financial participation by the State;

"(3) either provide for the establishment or designation of a single State agency to administer the plan, or provide for the establishment or designation of a single State agency to supervise the administration of the plan;

"(4) provide (A) such methods of administration (including methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis, except that the Secretary shall exercise no authority with respect to the selection, tenure of office, and compensation of any individual employed in accordance with such methods) as are found by the Secretary to be necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan, and (B) for the training and effective use of paid subprofessional staff, with particular emphasis on the full-time or part-time employment of persons of low income, as community service aides, in the administration of the plan and for the use of non-paid or partially paid volunteers in a social service volunteer program in providing services under the plan and in assisting any advisory committees established by the State agency;

"(5) provide that the State agency will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may from time to time require, and comply with such provisions as the Secretary may from time to time find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports;

"(6) provide safeguards which permit the use or disclosure of information concerning applicants or recipients only (A) to public officials who require such information in connection with their official duties, or (B) to other persons for purposes directly connected with the administration of the State plan;

"(7) provide, if the plan includes services to individuals in private or public institutions, for the establishment or designation of a State authority or authorities which shall be responsible for establishing and maintaining standards for such institutions;

"(8) provide a description of the services which the State agency makes available under the plan including a description of the steps taken to assure, in the provision of such services, maximum utilization of other agencies providing similar or related services;

"(9) provide that, in determining whether an individual is blind, there shall be an examination by a physician skilled in the diseases of the eye or by an optometrist, whichever the individual may select;

"(10) include reasonable standards, consistent with the objectives of this title, for determining eligibility for and the extent of services under the plan;

"(11) if the State plan includes services to individuals 65 years of age or older who are patients in institutions for mental diseases—

"(A) provide for having in effect such agreements or other arrangements with State authorities concerned with mental diseases, and where appropriate, with such institutions, as may be necessary for carrying out the State plan, including arrangements for joint planning and for development of alternate methods of care, arrangements providing assurance of immediate readmittance to institutions where needed for individuals under alternate plans of care, and arrangements providing for access to patients and facilities, for furnishing information, and for making reports;

"(B) provide for an individual plan for each such patient to assure that the institutional care provided to him is in his best interests, including, to that end, assurances that there will be initial and periodic review of his medical and other needs, that he will be given appropriate medical treatment within the institution, and that there will be a periodic determination of his need for continued treatment in the institution; and

"(C) provide for the development of alternate plans of care, making maximum utilization of available resources, for persons receiving services under the State plan who are 65 years of age or older and who would otherwise need care in such institutions; for services referred to in section 603(a)(1)(A)(i) and (ii) which are appropriate for such persons receiving services and for such patients; and for methods of administration necessary to assure that the responsibilities of the State agency under the State plan with respect to such persons receiving services and such patients will be effectively carried out;

"(12) if the State plan includes services to individuals 65 years of age or older who are patients in public institutions for mental diseases, show that the State is making satisfactory progress toward developing and implementing a comprehensive mental health program, including provision for utilization of community mental health centers, nursing homes, and other alternatives to care in public institutions for mental diseases.

Notwithstanding paragraph (3), if on October 1, 1972, the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title X (or so much of the plan of such State approved under title XVI as applies to the blind) was different from the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title I and the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title XIV (or so much of the plan of such State approved under title XVI as applies to the aged and disabled), the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of such plan approved under title X (or so much of the plan of such State approved under title XVI as applies to the blind) may be designated to administer or supervise the administration of the portion of the State plan for services to the aged, blind, or disabled which relates to blind individuals and a separate State agency may be established or designated to administer or supervise the administration of the rest of such plan; and in such case the part of the plan which each such agency administers, or the administration of which each such agency supervises, shall be regarded as a separate plan for purposes of this title.

"(b) The Secretary shall approve any plan which fulfills the conditions specified in subsection (a), except that he shall not approve any plan which imposes, as a condition of eligibility for services under the plan—

"(1) an age requirement of more than sixty-five years; or

"(2) any residence requirement which excludes any individual who resides in the State; or

"(3) any citizenship requirement which excludes any citizen of the United States.

"PAYMENTS TO STATES

"SEC. 603. (a) From the sums appropriated therefor, the Secretary shall, subject to section 1130, pay to each State which has a plan approved under this title, for each quarter—

"(1) in the case of any State whose State plan approved under section 602 meets the requirements of subsection (c)(1), an amount equal to the sum of the following proportions of the total amounts expended during such quarter as found necessary by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan—

"(A) 75 per centum of so much of such expenditures as are for—

"(i) services which are prescribed pursuant to subsection (c)(1) and are provided (in accordance with the next sentence) to applicants for or recipients of supplementary security income benefits under title XVI to help them attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care, or

"(ii) other services, specified by the Secretary as likely to prevent or reduce dependency, so provided to such applicants or recipients, or

"(iii) any of the services prescribed pursuant to subsection (c)(1), and of the services specified as provided in clause (ii), which the Secretary may specify as appropriate for individuals who, within such period or periods as the Secretary may prescribe, have been or are likely to become applicants for or recipients of supplementary security income benefits under title XVI, if such services are requested by such individuals and are provided to such individuals in accordance with the next sentence, or

"(iv) the training of personnel employed or preparing for employment by the State agency or by the local agency administering the plan in the political subdivision; plus

"(B) one-half of so much of such expenditures (not included under subparagraph (A)) as are for services provided (in accordance with the next sentence) to applicants for or recipients of supplementary security income benefits under title XVI, and to individuals requesting such services who (within such period or periods as the Secretary may prescribe) have been or are likely to become applicants for or recipients of such benefits; plus

"(C) one-half of the remainder of such expenditures.

The services referred to in subparagraph (A) and (B) shall, except to the extent specified by the Secretary, include only—

"(D) services provided by the staff of the State agency, or of the local agency administering the State plan in the political subdivision: Provided, That no funds authorized under this title shall be available for services defined as vocational rehabilitation services under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act (i) which are available to individuals in need of them under programs for their rehabilitation carried on under a State plan approved under such Act, or (ii) which the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan approved under such Act are able and willing to provide if reimbursed for the cost thereof pursuant to agreement under subparagraph (E), if provided by such staff, and

"(E) under conditions which shall be prescribed by the Secretary, services which in the judgment of the State agency cannot be as economically or as effectively provided by the staff of such State or local agency and are not otherwise reasonably available to individuals in need of them, and which are provided, pursuant to agreement with the State agency, by the State health authority or the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act or by any other State agency which the Secretary may determine to be appropriate (whether provided by its staff or by contract with public (local) or nonprofit private agencies), except that services described in clause (ii) of subparagraph (D) hereof may be provided only pursuant to agreement with such State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services so approved. The portion of the amount expended for administration of the State plan to which subparagraph (A) applies and the portion thereof to which subparagraphs (B) and (C) apply shall be determined in accordance with such methods and procedures as may be permitted by the Secretary; and

"(2) in the case of any State whose State plan approved under section 602 does not meet the requirements of subsection (c)(1), an amount equal to one-half of the total of the sums expended during such quarter as found necessary by the Secretary for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan, including services referred to in paragraph (1) and provided in accordance with the provisions of such paragraph.

"(b)(1) Prior to the beginning of each quarter, the Secretary shall estimate the amount to which a State will be entitled under subsection (a) for such quarter, such estimates to be based on (A) a report filed by the State containing its estimate of the total sum to be expended in such quarter in accordance with the provisions of such subsection, and stating the amount appropriated or made available by the State and its political subdivisions for such expenditures in such quarter, and if such amount is less than the State's proportionate share of the total sum of such estimated expenditures, the source or sources from which the difference is expected to be derived, and (B) such other investigation as the Secretary may find necessary.

"(2) The Secretary shall then pay, in such installments as he may determine, to the State the amount so estimated, reduced or increased to the extent of any overpayment or underpayment which the Secretary determines was made under this section to such State for any prior quarter and with respect to which adjustment has not already been made under this subsection.

"(3) Upon the making of any estimate by the Secretary under this subsection, any appropriations available for payments under this section shall be deemed obligated.

"(c)(1) In order for a State to qualify for payments under paragraph (1) of subsection (a), its State plan approved under section 602 must provide that the State agency shall make available to applicants for and recipients of supplementary security income benefits under title XVI at least those services to help them attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care which are prescribed by the Secretary.

"(2) In the case of any State whose State plan included a provision meeting the requirements of paragraph (1), but with respect to which the Secretary finds, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency, administering or supervising the administration of such plan, that—the Secretary shall notify such State agency that further payments will not be made to the State under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) until he is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure to comply. Until the Secretary is so satisfied further payments with respect to the administration of such State plan shall not be made under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) but shall instead be made, subject to the other provisions of this title, under paragraph (2) of such subsection.

"(A) the provision has been so changed that it no longer complies with the requirements of paragraph (1), or

"(B) in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with such provision,

"(d) Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this section, the amount determined under such provisions for any State for any quarter which is attributable to expenditures with respect to individuals 65 years of age or older who are patients in institutions for mental diseases shall be paid only to the extent that the State makes a showing satisfactory to the Secretary that total expenditures in the State from Federal, State, and local sources for mental health services (including payments to or in behalf of individuals with mental health problems) under State and local public health and public welfare programs for such quarter exceed the average of the total expenditures in the State from such sources for such services under such programs for each quarter of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1965. For purposes of this subsection, expenditures for such services for each quarter in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1965, in the case of any State shall be determined on the basis of the latest data, satisfactory to the Secretary, available to him at the time of the first determination by him under this subsection for such State; and expenditures for such services for any quarter beginning after December 31, 1965, in the case of any State shall be determined on the basis of the latest data, satisfactory to the Secretary, available to him at the time of the determination under this subsection for such State for such quarter; and determinations so made shall be conclusive for purposes of this subsection.

"OPERATION OF STATE PLANS

"SEC. 604. If the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of the State plan approved under this title, finds—

"(1) that the plan no longer complies with the provisions of section 602; or

"(2) that in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with any such provision;

the Secretary shall notify such State agency that further payments will not be made to the State (or, in his discretion, that payments will be limited to categories under or parts of the State plan affected by such failure), until the Secretary is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure to comply. Until he is so satisfied he shall make no further payments to such State (or shall limit payments to categories under or parts of the State plan not affected by such failure).

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. EDWARDS). Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Louisiana? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I have before me a thumbnail summary of this provision, which is now being placed on the desk of each Senator.

It reads as follows:

SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME FOR THE AGED, BLIND AND DISABLED

H.R. 1, as reported by the Senate Finance Committee, will replace the present State programs of aid to the aged, blind and disabled with a new wholly Federal program of supplemental security income effective January 1, 1974.

Aged, blind and disabled persons with no other income would be guaranteed a monthly income of at least $130 for an individual of $195 for a couple. In addition, the Committee bill would provide that the first $50 of Social Security or other income would not cause any reduction in supplemental security income payments. As a result, aged, blind and disabled persons who also have monthly income from Social Security or other sources (which are not need-related) of at least $50 would, under the Committee bill, be assured total monthly income of at least $180 for an individual or $245 for a couple.

In addition to the disregard of $50 of Social Security or other income, there would be an additional disregard of $85 of earned income plus one-half of any earnings above $85. Any rebate of State or local taxes (such as real property or food taxes) would not be counted as income.

Under the new supplemental security income program, there would be a uniform Federal definition of "disability" and "blindness." These defintions would be similar to those under the social security program.

States wishing to pay an aged, blind or disabled person amounts in addition to the Federal supplemental security income payment would be free to do so. The Committee bill would permit States to enter into agreements for Federal administration of State supplemental benefits. Under these agreements, supplemental payments would have to be made to all persons eligible for Federal supplemental security income payments, except that a State could require a period of residence in the State as a condition of eligibility.

Eligibility for supplemental security income would be open to an aged, blind or disabled individual if his resources were less than $2,500. In determining the amount of his resources, there would be excluded the value of the home, household goods, personal effects, including an automobile, and property needed for self support.

Madam President, it is estimated that the cost of this proposal on an annual basis would be approximately $3.1 billion beyond the existing cost of Federal assistance for the aged, blind, and disabled.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Madam President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I have an amendment before me that relates, as I indicated to the Senator yesterday when I proposed the amendment to him, to food stamp allowances. I have been back in my home State every weekend and I have had several meetings with senior citizens groups who are most interested in H.R. 1 and in the whole revision of social security.

May I commend the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG) for what he has done on this monumental bill now before the Senate.

The amendment I have here, and which I want to engage the Senator in some conversation, simply provides that where one gets 20 percent in social security benefits and the cost of living increase, this would not act to deny those who are eligible for food stamps in August of this year to have those food stamps on a continuing basis.

The purpose of the amendment is that, since the Senate and Congress felt there should be an increase of 20 percent in social security benefits, we built in a cost of living escalator clause so that it would have a leveling effect. As the cost of living went up, so would the benefits go up. My amendment would say that Congress, having taken those decisions, would not cut back on the food stamp program to which these people would be eligible had they not received the cost-of-living benefit increase.

Frankly, a social security recipient is not going to have too much money anyway, as we have to be careful in terms of the trust fund, and all of us are concerned about that, as well as our resources. So that I wonder whether the Senator has had a chance to look over my amendment. I am going to call it up and I would hope that the Senator might see fit to take it. I am asking for his comments now.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I am anxious to exchange views with the distinguished chairman of the Agriculture and Forestry Committee, the Senator from Georgia (Mr. TALMADGE) with regard to this matter, because I believe that he has a better understanding of the problem than does the Senator from Louisiana, because of the special competence one would have, serving on the Agriculture and Forestry Committee, in addition to being a member of the committee. So that I would think he would be able to advise the Senator from Louisiana and some of us on the Finance Committee about this problem.

Has the Senator discussed this matter with the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I might refresh the Senator's memory by saying that at the time the Committee on Appropriations and the Subcommittee on Agriculture, the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. MCGEE) who handled that appropriation had that bill before us, I brought up an amendment to increase funds for the food stamp plan, and during discussion of that increase of funds, we talked about the possibility of social security increases and what effect it would have on the food stamp program.

It was then told to me by the distinguished Senator from Wyoming that if I would cut back my request—because I cut the request for food stamps appreciably—and that if I would go along with what the committee was doing to make sure when and if there were increases in social security, it would not deny the people who are now recipients of food stamps their chance to continue receiving their food stamps, it would be agreeable. This is not a big item. I put in the RECORD the information that in my State it would affect in Hennepin County—which has a population of about 1 million people—about 2,000. It is not going to be a large or monumental amount of money, just a modest amount of money. But it is sheer justice. I would hope that the chairman of the committee would at least take it with him to the conference and discuss it in any detail he wishes. Because I have entered into the RECORD the data that would support it. It is not opening up a whole new category of assistance. It is merely in a sense a kind of grandfather clause.

My amendment says that notwithstanding any other provision of law:

Any individual who is entitled to monthly benefits under the insurance program established under title II, disregard any part of such benefits which results from (and would not be payable but for) the general increase in benefits under such program provided by section 201 of Public Law 92-336 or any subsequent cost-of-living increase in such benefits occurring pursuant to section 215(i) of this Act. * * * shall not be considered as income or resources or otherwise taken into account for purposes of determining the eligibility of such individual or his or her family or the household in which he or she lives for participation in the food stamp program under the Food Stamp Act of 1964.

Really, all we are simply saying is, "Look, we have given you a cost of living increase, which means we are just holding ground. We have given you a 20-percent increase in social security benefits." For which many people that are single, may I say that that benefit, while it is surely very helpful, it is not overly generous. It is generous within what the bill can provide. All this does is give a little extra in terms of food stamps, so these people have enough to eat.

I do not think there is a problem on the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry at all. When we discussed at the time of the appropriations my amendment, which was about half of what I originally proposed, it went through there unanimously. As the Senator knows, there is great support for the food stamps.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, the reason we have a committee system is to try to have a source of knowledge about the many facets of the legislation we consider. We have not had the opportunity to do justice to the Senator's amendment and to check it out. However, we will, I think, between now and Monday.

I am hopeful that I could support the Senator's amendment. I think I will know, perhaps, before the day is out. However, in any event, I would think that by Monday we would be adequately advised so that we could take a position on it. If we know as much as I hope that we do by that time, I hope that I will be able to support the amendment.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Madam President, I do not claim to be an expert on food stamps. However, along with the distinguished Senator from Vermont (Mr. AIKEN), the Senator from Minnesota pioneered the program back in the fifties, and then subsequently had it enacted into permanent legislation in the sixties.

I rather think I am one who is able to say and to know something about this. It is one of those areas of legislation on which I put a Humphrey label.

Mr. LONG. If the Senator from Minnesota is not an expert on that subject, he can pass for an expert until one comes along.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Madam President, I will be back on Monday. I appreciate what the Senator has said. If the Senator could look at this, it would be beneficial. I know that we have time on this bill. I hope also that the distinguished ranking minority member of the committee would also take a look at it. However, if the Senators would like to accept the amendment today, we could clean up the matter now and have it in the bill. Do the Senators have any second thoughts on that?

Mr. LONG. No. I do not. However, I would be glad to have a second thought about it by the date I have indicated.

Mr. HUMPHREY. By Monday?

Mr. LONG. By Monday, the Senator is correct.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President. I accept that. My good friend, the Senator from Louisiana, is so kind and considerate. No man is a better friend of the poor and the elderly than the Senator from Louisiana. And if the Senator from Louisiana says that he will be ready to give an answer on this by Monday, I will go home to my dear wife in Minnesota and I will be able to tell her: "My good friend, the Senator from Louisiana, has practically accepted my amendment."

Mr. COOK. Madam President. I ask unanimous consent that a member of my staff, Betty Hottell, be allowed the privilege of the floor during the consideration of the debate today in H.R. 1.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Madam President. I ask unanimous consent that a member of my staff. Mr. Tom Owsley, be permitted on the floor during the consideration of H.R. 1.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Madam President. I support title III of H.R. 1 which establishes a new title XVI program to replace the present State programs of aid to the aged, blind, and totally and permanently disabled. The legislation provides for supplemental security income for this significant segment of our population who are most needy. What we have here is a specific means of adding security and dignity to the lives of so many who have contributed so much to this country, and who are caught today in the crushing vice of rising prices and limited income. As chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on the Handicapped, and as a member of the Special Subcommittee on Aging, I have heard much testimony of hopelessness from witnesses who feel they have been abandoned by their fellow citizens. They live in isolation, ill-housed, ill-fed and ignored by the mainstream of society. Title XVI is designed to encourage each State, as far as practicable, to furnish equitable assistance to these needy and neglected individuals.

Under this provision, aged, blind, and disabled persons with no other income would be guaranteed a monthly income of at least $130 for an individual and $195 for a couple. In addition, the bill would provide that the first $50 of social security or other income would not cause any reduction in supplemental security income payments.

As a result, aged, blind, and disabled persons—and I remind you that there are many instances where a single individual fits into all three categories—who have a monthly income from social security or other sources of at least $50 would be assured a total monthly income of at least $180 for an individual or $245 for a couple.

In addition to the disregard of $50 of social security or other income which is not needs-related, there would be an additional disregard of $85 of earned income plus one-half of any earnings above $85. It is important that those who, despite their infirmities or disability, want to work be encouraged to do so. Another desirable feature of this legislation would provide that any rebate of State or local taxes, such as real property or food taxes, not be counted as income.

Eligibility for supplemental security income would be open to an aged, blind, or disabled individual if his resources were less than $2,500. In determining the amount of his resources, there would be excluded the value of the home, household goods, personal effects, including an automobile, and property needed for self-support.

Madam President, this is just and humane legislation, and I urge my fellow Senators to support this supplemental income program to assure our elderly, blind, and disabled citizens that this Congress believes in the dignity of life.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I welcome the remarks of the distinguished Senator from West Virginia (Mr. RANDOLPH). I know of his keen interest in the problems of the aged, blind, and disabled, both as a member of the Special Committee on Aging and as the chairman of the Subcommittee on the Handicapped of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare. I am delighted with his support of what I consider one of the best features of the committee bill.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment to which I made reference, the supplemental security income proposal. I do not see a quorum present on the floor. Therefore I suggest the absence of a quorum for the purpose of getting the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The second assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LONG. Madam President. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. LONG, Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The second assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Madam President. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. COOK. Madam President, before the quorum call——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator withdraw his suggestion of the absence of a quorum?

Mr. LONG. No, I insist.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The second assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the pending amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment, inserting title III in the bill, which includes all the language beginning at line 12 on page 568, and extending down through and including line 5 on page 615.

I further announce that the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. JORDAN) and the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. MCGEE) are absent on official business.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. MCINTYRE) would vote "yea."

Mr. SCOTT. I announce that the Senators from Colorado (Mr. ALLOTT and Mr. DOMINICK), the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. BAKER), the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BOGGS), the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. CASE), the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. COTTON), the Senator from Michigan (Mr. GRIFFIN), the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. HANSEN), the Senator from Illinois (Mr. PERCY), and the Senator from Texas (Mr. TOWER) are necessarily absent.

The Senator from South Dakota (Mr. MUNDT) is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Vermont (Mr. STAFFORD) and the Senator from Ohio (Mr. TAFT) are absent on official business to attend the Interparliamentary Union meetings.

If present and voting, the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BOGGS), the Senator from Illinois (Mr. PERCY), and the Senator from Texas (Mr. TOWER) would each vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 75, nays 0, as follows:

So the committee amendment, embracing title III, was agreed to.

Mr. CRANSTON. Madam President, I send to the desk an amendment submitted earlier in the day by Senator TUNNEY and myself, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

At the end of title I of the bill, add the following new section:

ELIMINATION OF DURATION-OF-RELATIONSHIP REQUIREMENT IN CERTAIN CASES INVOLVING SURVIVOR BENEFITS (WHERE INSURED'S DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL OR OCCURRED IN LINE OF DUTY WHILE HE WAS A SERVICEMAN)

SEC. —. (a) The first sentence of section 216(k) of the Social Security Act (as amended by section 115 of this Act) is further amended—

(1) by striking out "and he would satisfy such requirement if a three-month period were substituted for the nine-month period" and inserting in lieu thereof "unless the Secretary determines that at the time of the marriage involved the individual could not have reasonably been expected to live for nine months"; and

(2) by striking out "except that this subsection shall not apply" and inserting in lieu thereof "except that paragraph (2) of this subsection shall not apply".

(b) The amendments made by this section shall apply only with respect to benefits payable under title II of the Social Security Act for months after December 1972 on the basis of applications filed in or after the month in which this Act is enacted.

Mr. CRANSTON. Madam President, Senator TUNNEY and I now offer an amendment which seeks to correct an injustice which has been brought to our attention by our colleague from the California delegation, Representative SISK, relating to survivor benefits.

The present law states that in order to be eligible for benefits, the surviving spouse must have been married to the deceased individual for at least 9 months prior to his death. This requirement is then reduced to 3 months if the insured individual's death was accidental, and if at the time of marriage he could reasonably have been expected to live at least 9 months.

That provision is a very sensible procedure in the law. However, there is a quirk in it that was brought to the attention of Representative SISK because of a tragic death that occurred in California, and this simple and, I think, noncontroversial amendment is designed to deal with that situation.

I would like to relate to the Members an incident which occurred in California which I think will clarify the necessity for this amendment. The late Eric R. Larsen, who resided in Fresno, Calif., had been married to Yvonne Larsen approximately 2½ months prior to his tragic death in a motorcycle accident. His wife and stepson are barred from receipt of social security survivors benefits because of the duration of relationship requirement which has been included in the social security law since 1939. Eric Larsen served his country in the U.S. Marine Corps for 4 years and spent 13 months in Vietnam. In 1968 he was honorably discharged, and worked in California for 3 years. There is absolutely no reason to believe that this young man could not, at the time of his marriage, been reasonably expected to live for many, many years after his marriage had it not been for his tragic accidental death.

The legislative history of this provision indicates that the duration of marriage requirement was written into law as a precautionary measure, the main thrust being the prevention of so-called death bed marriages soley for the purpose of getting monthly survivor's benefits. While it was recognized that there would rarely be such a motive for marriage, the Congress apparently felt, at that time, that some safeguard against the payments of benefits in such cases was appropriate and desirable. While the concern of Congress at that time may have had merit, it does not seem to be a rational or reasonable requirement in the case of accidental death.

The amendment Senator TUNNEY and I have offered would prevent inequitable situations such as that involving the Larsens from arising. At the same time it would avoid the payment of social security benefits in situations which the Congress intended to rule out, because—and I emphasize this—it would retain the part of the requiremnet that provides that the individual must reasonably have been expected to live for 9 months had he not died accidently.

Representative SISK informs me that, although departmental reports requested on this matter by the House Ways and Means Committee have not yet been received, Commissioner Ball of the Social Security Administration has expressed total agreement that the duration of marriage requirement, with respect to accidental death, is inequitable and he recommended that the law be amended accordingly. The amendment Senator TUNNEY and I have offered conforms with the Commissioner's recommendations.

Madam President, that explains the purpose of the amendment. I hope that it will be supported, and I have every hope that the committee will accept the amendment.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, if the Senator had brought this amendment to us in committee, I think we would have agreed to it, because it does have merit. That is what we have a committee for, to consider matters of this sort and pass judgment on them.

I have no objection to the amendment.

Mr. BENNETT. Madam President, I would join the chairman in accepting the amendment.

Mr. CRANSTON. I thank the Senators very much, and I apologize for not bringing the amendment to the committee. It was not called to my attention until after the committee had acted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from California.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, the Senate, I am pleased to say, voted by a unanimous vote to sustain the committee's judgment with regard to the proposal which will lift almost all of the aged, blind, and disabled out of poverty.

That proposal will cost more than the administration had been able to budget for the aged, blind, and disabled, and I believe that it is for budgetary reasons alone that the Nixon administration was unable to urge us to report the provision that the Senate has unanimously voted for.

We have another proposal in the bill before us which also has much merit. It was not recommended to us by the administration, and there had been some controversy, even some criticism by some theorists as to the philosophy of social security, which I think the Senate also should vote upon, because that would be an important item in conference, and I believe the House of Representatives would want to know to what extent the Senate supports the proposal.

That is the proposal which says that a person who has worked at least 30 years under social security should be entitled to receive a minimum of $200 per month, or $300 for a couple.

I, therefore, ask unanimous consent that the matter beginning on page 43, line 16, through page 48, line 10 of the bill be subject to a vote of the Senate, notwithstanding the fact that it has been agreed to as one of the committee amendments en bloc, and that when agreed to, the language shall remain subject to amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Louisiana?

The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The committee amendment upon which a separate vote was agreed to reads as follows:

SPECIAL MINIMUM PRIMARY INSURANCE AMOUNT

SEC. 101. (a) Section 215(a) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "paragraph (2)" in the matter preceding subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraphs (2) and (3)"; and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (2) the following:

"(3) Such primary insurance amount shall be an amount equal to $10 multiplied by the individual's years of coverage in excess of 10 in any case in which such amount is higher than the individual's primary insurance amount as determined under paragraph (1) or (2).

For purposes of paragraph (3), an individual's 'years of coverage' is the number (not exceeding 30) equal to the sum of (i) the number (not exceeding 14 and disregarding any fraction) determined by dividing the total of the wages credited to him (including wages deemed to be paid prior to 1951 to such individual under section 217, compensation under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937 prior to 1951 which is creditable to such individual pursuant to this title, and wages deemed to be paid prior to 1951 to such individual under section 231) for years after 1936 and before 1951 by $900, plus (ii) the number equal to the number of years after 1950 each of which is a computation base year (within the meaning of subsection (b)(2)(C)) and in each of which he is credited with wages (including wages deemed to be paid to such individual under section 217, compensation under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937 which is creditable to such individual pursuant to this title, and wages deemed to be paid to such individual under section 229) and self-employment income of not less than 25 percent of the maximum amount which, pursuant to subsection (e), may be counted for such year."

(b) Section 203(a) of such Act is amended by striking out "or" at the end of paragraph (3), by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (4) and inserting in lieu thereof ", or", and by inserting after paragraph (4) the following new paragraph:

"(5) whenever the monthly benefits of such individuals are based on an insured individual's primary insurance amount which is determined under section 215(a)(3) and such primary insurance amount does not appear in column IV of the table in (or deemed to be in) section 215(a), the applicable maximum amount in column V of such table shall be the amount in such column that appears on the line on which the next higher primary insurance amount appears in column IV, or, if larger, the largest amount determined for such persons under this subsection for any month prior to October 1972."

(c) Section 215(a)(2) of such Act is amended by striking out "such primary insurance amount shall be" and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"such primary insurance amount shall be—

"(A) the amount in column IV of such table which is equal to the primary insurance amount upon which such disability insurance benefit is based; except that if such individual was entitled to a disability insurance benefit under section 223 for the month before the effective month of a new table (whether enacted by another law or deemed to be such table under subsection (i)(2)(D)) and in the following month became entitled to an old-age insurance benefit, or he died in such following month, then his primary insurance amount for such following month shall be the amount in column IV of the new table on the line on which in column II of such table appears his primary insurance amount for the month before the effective month of the table (as determined under subsection (c)) instead of the amount in column IV equal to the primary insurance amount on which his disability insurance benefit is based. For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'primary insurance amount' with respect to any individual means only a primary insurance amount determined under paragraph (1) (and such individual's benefits shall be deemed to be based upon the primary insurance amount as so determined); or

"(B) an amount equal to the primary insurance amount upon which such disability insurance benefit is based if such primary insurance amount was determined under paragraph (3)."

(d) Section 215(f)(2) of such Act is by striking out "subsection (a)(1)(A) and (C)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsections (a)(1)(A) and (C) and (a)(3)".

(e) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of such Act is amended by striking out "under this title" and inserting in lieu thereof "under this title (but not including a primary insurance amount determined under subsection (a)(3) of this section)".

(f) Whenever an insured individual is entitled to benefits for a month which are based on a primary insurance amount under paragraph (1) or paragraph (3) of section 215(a) of the Social Security Act and for the following month such primary insurance amount is increased or such individual becomes entitled to benefits on a higher primary insurance amount under a different paragraph of such section 215(a), such individual's old-age or disability insurance benefit (beginning with the effective month of the increased primary insurance amount) shall be increased by an amount equal to the difference between the higher primary insurance amount and the primary insurance amount on which such benefit was based for the month prior to such effective month, after the application of section 202(q) of such Act where applicable to such difference.

(g) The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to monthly insurance benefits under title II of the Social Security Act for months after December 1972 (without regard to when the insured individual became entitled to such benefits or when he died) and with respect to lump-sum death payments under such title in the case of deaths occurring after such month.

Mr. LONG. I ask for the yeas and nays on that committee amendment, Madam President.

For lack of a sufficient second, the yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The second assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that my request be amended to include the fact that the amendment, if agreed to by the Senate, shall remain open to further amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent, the question is on agreeing to the matter on page 43, line 16, through page 48, line 10, entitled "Special Minimum Primary Insurance Amount," even though it has previously been agreed to.

On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

So Mr. LONG's amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, yesterday I introduced a welfare reform proposal which I called the last, best chance for reform. It represents the results of months of consultation and negotiation with the Departments of Health, Education, and Welfare, and Labor. It is imperative that the Senate put aside partisan considerations in designing a system to aid the truly needy and relieve the taxpayers of the inefficiences of the present public assistance system.

Last June Secretaries Richardson and Hodgson met with the President to urge that he work with the supporters of my proposal to fashion a workable welfare agreement. At that time 19 Republican Senators sent a letter to the President urging him to work out an agreement with those of us in the Senate who are supporting meaningful welfare reform.

The leadership of these distinguished Senators in advancing the cause of true reform is commendable.

I ask unanimous consent that the letter and the names of the signers be inserted at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, D.C., June 15, 1972.

The PRESIDENT,
White House,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Since you first offered your welfare reform proposal over two and a half years ago, the welfare situation, as we all know, has worsened, making the reform you proposed even more imperative.

Those of us who deeply care about the well-being of the impoverished have watched with dismay the development of growing divisions in the Congress over the question of welfare reform. Unfortunately, neither the Senate Finance Committee's Workfare proposal nor an unamended H.R. 1 entirely meets, in our judgment, the requirements for genuine welfare reform.

We do not feel it necessary for the Administration to now engage in a whole new line of reasoning or even undertake a substantial change in approach, but the time has now come when we, together, must fashion a humane and decent compromise reform measure that would be acceptable to a majority of the Congress and to the Administration. Without that compromise and a final effort now by the Administration and those members of both parties, certainly including Senator Ribicoff, who wish to see a successful and acceptable program adopted, we firmly believe welfare reform is almost certain to die.

In this critical hour, we ask that you reaffirm your often stated commitment to welfare reform and request the appropriate agencies to work with us toward such a compromise.

Sincerely,

Percy, Pearson, Cook, Schweiker, Brooke, Dole, Fong, Packwood, Taft, Beall, Stafford, Saxbe, Javits, Cooper, Stevens, Case, Weicker, Mathias, and Hatfield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. EDWARDS). The Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. PELL) is recognized.

Mr. JAVITS. Madam President, will the Senator from Rhode Island yield to me for an amendment which, if not accepted within 2 minutes, I will take down?

Mr. PELL. I yield to the Senator for that purpose.

Mr. JAVITS. Madam President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

On page 465 between lines 11 and 12, insert the following:

MEDICAL ASSISTANCE IN PUERTO RICO, THE VIRGIN ISLANDS, AND GUAM

SEC. 271A. Section 227(b) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 is amended by striking out "June 30, 1972" and inserting in lieu thereof "June 30, 1975".

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be effective from and after July 1, 1972.

Mr. JAVITS. Madam President, the problem here involves an extension of the so-called free choice deadline which poses a great problem to the government of Puerto Rico.

I offer this amendment at the request of Mr. CÓRDOVA, the Delegate. Congress has not given Puerto Rico enough money so that it can work out a freedom of choice as quickly as the law requires. So, Madam President, they request that we give them an added period of 3 years.

I understand this is satisfactory to the manager of the bill on the majority and minority sides.

The reason for this proposed amendment is that it has been determined by both the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and by the Puerto Rico Department of Health that it would be impossible with the resources available at this time to implement the freedom of choice provision under the medicaid program.

The funds Puerto Rico receives under this program have been limited ever since 1967 by a statutory ceiling of $20 million per year under section 1108(c)(1) of the Social Security Act. The Puerto Rican Government invests more than $70 million a year out of their own resources for this program to provide medical care for the poor. At present the program serves more than 6½ million cases of indigent patients throughout several district hospitals and clinics on the island.

The Puerto Rican Government is aware that freedom of choice of physician and hospitals should not be denied to anyone and as a matter of fact is taking steps on its own to implement a limited program that would provide a limited freedom of choice to about 1.7 million people or to all members of families earning less than $5,000 a year. This free choice will at first, include only general practitioners and in time will be expanded to include some specialists, laboratories and X-rays. Plans have also been made for a complete free choice program—these plans were and are contingent upon the approval of an additional $10 million in Federal funds authorized in title II of H.R. 1.

The plan was designed as a gradual development into free choice to be completed by fiscal year 1973 when free choice is to go into effect in Puerto Rico, as mandated in the Social Security Act.

Congress has not yet authorized the additional $10 million under the medicaid program for Puerto Rico and therefore they have not been able to implement this plan. They will have to start free choice very soon if this amendment is not adopted, and there is no time for a gradual changeover. The Puerto Rican Government feels that it cannot afford the fiscal burden this abrupt change would necessitate.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, it is my understanding that those who would be likely to understand this proposal best and the people in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and speaking for the administration, they feel that this is a good amendment and that it should be agreed to.

I am willing to support the amendment and take it to conference.

Mr. JAVITS. Madam President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New York (Mr. JAVITS).

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PELL. Madam President, I send to the desk an amendment and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk proceeded to state the amendment.

Mr. PELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with and that the amendment be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 268, line 11, insert the following:

EYEGLASSES, DENTURES, HEARINGS AIDS AND PODIATRIC SERVICES

SEC. 215A. (a) Section 1861(s)(8) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "(other than dental").

(b) Section 1862(a) of such Act is amended—

(1) in clause (7) thereof, by striking out "eyeglasses or eye examinations for the purpose of prescribing, fitting, or changing eyeglasses, procedures performed (during the course of any eye examination) to determine the refractive state of the eyes, hearing aids or examinations therefor,"; and

(2) by inserting "or" at the end clause (1), and striking out clauses (12) and (13) thereof.

(c) Section 1861(s) of such Act is further amended—

(1) by striking out "and" where it appears at the end of clause (8);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of clause (9) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(10) eyeglasses and eye examinations for the purpose of prescribing, fitting, or changing eyeglasses, procedures performed (during the course of any eye examination) to determine the refractive state of the eyes, and hearing aids and examinations therefor.".

(d)(1) The amendments made by this section shall be effective only with respect to (A) individuals from families with annual adjusted gross incomes which do not exceed $6,000, and (B) individuals who are not members of families with annual adjusted gross incomes of $3,000. Determinations of annual adjusted gross income under the preceding sentence shall be made by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare in accordance with regulations promulgated by him.

(2) The Secretary shall establish reasonable limitations with respect to the provision of such services, the frequency thereof, and the amounts payable.

(3) The amendments made by this section shall be effective on July 1, 1973.

Mr. PELL. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. PELL. Madam President, I will continue with the presentation of my amendment until we do have a sufficient number of Senators present for the yeas and nays.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that Stephen J. Wexler and Richard Smith of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare be permitted on the floor during the consideration of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PELL. Madam President, this is the amendment I presented yesterday. However it does contain several substantial changes in order to meet the objections of the Committee on Finance, which were discussed on the floor. It provides for an effective date of July 1, 1973. Second, following the advice of the Senator from Utah, it provides a limitation on the income level of persons who would be covered. The only people who would receive benefits under this amendment would be those over 65 who have an adjusted gross income of $3,000 if single, or $6,000 in the case of a family. This would not include their social security, but it would be limited in this respect. It would mean that with respect to the example cited yesterday, men like ourselves would not be able to benefit from this amendment. Only those who are of modest means would be included.

In addition, the amendment is designed to make sure that many individuals who need dentures, eyeglasses, hearing aids, or the podiatric care would not be forced to go to medicaid but would be able to preserve their dignity and self-respect to whatever degree they wish and still be able to receive these services as part of medicare.

I would hope very much that this amendment could be accepted and will ask for a rollcall vote.

Mr. PASTORE. Madam President, would the Senator yield?

Mr. PELL. I would be glad to yield to my colleague.

Mr. PASTORE. Madam President, I wonder why the Senator made it $6,000 for a couple and not a little less.

Mr. PELL. Madam President, if the Senator thinks that would be preferable, I would be willing to change it.

Mr. PASTORE. Madam President, I think it should be $3,000 for a single person and $5,000 for a married couple.

Mr. PELL. Madam President, I modify my amendment in that respect, so that it would provide for $3,000 for a single person and $5,000 for a married couple.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is so modified.

Mr. PASTORE. Madam President, yesterday I joined with my colleague from Rhode Island and spoke in support of his amendment, because I thought it was a worthy amendment.

The argument was made very dramatically at the time by one of our more affluent Members of this body. And when I talk about affluence, I am talking about financial affluence.

He very dramatically took off his glasses and said that he could if he wished under the amendment, leave the cost of those eyeglasses up to the Government because he is over 65. All of us were surprised at that, as I said before, because any wealthy person who charged his eyeglasses to the Government ought to be a little ashamed of himself. However, we ought to provide against such abuse.

Now that the amendment has been modified it would apply to a single person earning $3,000 and a married couple earning $5,000.

If a single person earns $3,000 a year, that is $60 a week. That means that he has to pay his rent, buy his clothes, his food, and pay for his gas, his electric, and his telephone bills. He would have to pay everything out of $60 a week. All of us know how badly affected these people are by inflation.

For that reason, Madam President, I think all we are saying here is that if a person wants to read about all the good and bad things we do in the Senate and cannot do it unless he has a pair of eyeglasses and he cannot afford to buy them, we ought to buy them for him. And if someone cannot hear too well and he wants to hear what is going on in this great country of ours and he has no hearing aid, I think we ought to help him out.

Madam President, a married couple, I do not care where they live, that rents any decent abode, would certainly have to pay $60, $70, or $80 a week. Five thousand dollars a year is less than $100 a week for a couple. I think that in that particular case we ought to be helpful. I do not think it would cost too much money. I think this is one thing we ought to do.

I would hope that the chairman would accept this amendment and, if the amendment is not accepted, I hope it will pass.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Madam President, does the Senator from Rhode Island wish to ask for the yeas and nays?

Mr. PELL. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. PELL. Madam President, a further point with respect to the modification of yesterday's amendment: It was pointed out that there could be abuses. To cover that, we have given the Secretary of HEW, a man not noted for his bleeding heart, the right to promulgate regulations so that we can be sure there is no abuse. He could preclude the buying of several pairs of eyeglasses every year, or hearing aids which usually last 2 or 3 years. And I am sure this would be strictly enforced. Yet, we would be sure that those over 65 will be able to eat, will have the eyeglasses to see that which is around them, will be able to see that those have the foot care they require and do not have and be able to hear.

Madam President, I hope very much that my colleagues would approve the amendment.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR.). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, at the time that H.R. 1 was reported favorably by the Committee on Finance, I caused this statement to be inserted in the minutes of the committee:

H.R. 1 contains some Social Security amendments which are much needed, in which I have been interested. There are other features of the bill that fall into the same category. I favor the general concept of workfare as contrasted to welfare, and I favor the provisions that would increase the State and local control over the administration of welfare as it involves the unemployed.

There are certain cross-aspects of H.R. 1 to which I am very much opposed. There are features of H.R. 1 under various titles and sections to which I am opposed, but because of a commitment made that a bill should be reported out before the session ends in 1972, and because I believe there are some parts that should be advanced for passage, I am voting to report the bill from the committee to the Senate. I reserve all rights to oppose and to offer amendments.

Mr. President, there are a number of features in this bill that correct various inequities and meet certain problems, that need correction in the statutes. The employees of States and municipalities have their social security by reason of compacts that are entered into between the States and the Federal Government It requires the consent of Congress to amend those compacts. There are two or three States that have matters pending in H.R. 1 for which they have waited for some time.

I can think of another provision of H.R. 1 that is a very worthy situation. We have at Bellevue, Nebr., the headquarters for the St. Columban Fathers. This is a missionary organization, and these priests are engaged in carrying the Gospel to all parts of the world. They are American citizens, recruited for service in this country. Their business office is in this country. The money is collected here to pay their salaries. When they reach retirement years, they come back to the United States to retire.

Yet, those missionaries are not covered by social security. If it so happens that an American corporation finds it necessary to send its employees abroad to carry on its business, their social security taxes and benefits go on just the same as if they were here. This is also true of employees of religious organizations in the main. If they represent a church in this country, or if they serve an all-American congregation abroad, they are covered by social security.

In the case of the Columban Fathers that I just mentioned, it so happens that the highest ecclesiastical authority is in Ireland. Yet, as I say, they have their business headquarters in the United States, they are American citizens, they are recruited here, they are paid by funds raised in this country, and they return here, yet without social security.

This is one of the many items in the social security section of H.R. 1 that need attention and should be passed. It has been pending a long time.

Mr. President, the reason that H.R. 1 has not been enacted a long time ago is that too much was undertaken in one bill. Here we have the bill, H.R. 1, consisting of 990 pages. Title IV relates to welfare reform. If we were to ask a number of people, "Do you favor welfare reform?" I daresay that we would get a 100-percent affirmative answer. But when it comes to the definition of welfare reform, that is where differences arise.

I have a very high regard for the House of Representatives, and especially for its Committee on Ways and Means, but I must say that that part of H.R. 1 that came from the House of Representatives called welfare reform certainly is not welfare reform. It would double the number of people who are eligible for welfare. It would increase the cost by several billion dollars. And what is more, it would inaugurate a system of a guaranteed income in the United States—a guaranteed income whether people work or not. Not only would it be expensive at the start, but it would be a great departure in our handling of welfare in this country.

I am told that our beloved and distinguished colleague from Connecticut (Mr. RIBICOFF) will offer an amendment. Actually, it is no different, basically, from the House version, other than that it is worse because it puts more people on welfare, makes more of them eligible, and will cost more billions of dollars; and it, too, would establish the system of a guaranteed income from people in the United States. Even though they might be able bodied, it would guarantee them an income without working.

Mr. President, if such an amendment prevails, there will be no legislation this year, because we cannot let it pass. If either the original administration proposal, modified by the House, or the Ribicoff amendment is agreed to by the Senate, there can be no legislation this year, because we would be embarking on something that would be a grave mistake.

Now, it is rather easy to understand how this universal idea of desire for welfare reform could lead to a situation in which the term "welfare reform" is used as a slogan by which to inaugurate a guaranteed income for everybody in the United States.

Oftentimes we hear criticism of welfare. It is pointed out that there is a certain family on welfare; perhaps they are not disclosing all their assets or their income; there are certain disregards in the law; the children have income, and so forth. Nearby will live a family that never has been on welfare, that gets along on much less money than the family on welfare. Up to that point in the efforts to secure welfare reform, we have identified the problem. But the wrong answer has been applied.

Instead of doing something about the welfare case where there is an abuse, they came along with the idea and said, "Let's give a benefit to this family that has never been on welfare, and raise the minimum for everybody." When they do that, it is a guaranteed income for all Americans.

What a great day for the politicians. Somebody says, "A family of four should have $2,400." The next bidder says, "A family of four should have $3,600." Finally, somebody wants to be President of the United States and says, "A family of four should have $6,500"—and it would put 97 million Americans on welfare.

One of the most shameful things in the annals of the political history of the United States is that one of the candidates for the Presidency of the United States is offering to put 97 million Americans on welfare, trying to buy half of the population.

The root of the evil is the beginning of this system of guaranteeing to everybody a minimum income. That is the evil in the House bill; that is the evil in the Ribicoff amendment. They are all alike, except that the last bidder raises the figure. That is why if either of these proposals—the House bill in regard to welfare reform, or alleged welfare reform, or the Ribicoff amendment—should remain, we cannot permit any legislation to be advanced for passage. Consequently, it is my hope that, without too much more delay, title IV of this bill can be set aside, so that we can do the things that should be done and enact some laws that need to be enacted.

Mr. President, I want to say something about the Finance Committee's version of welfare reform. It is referred to as workfare. It has some very fine features. I support its basic proposal, its basic plan. A couple of features in it make it a little more costly than I would like.

Principally, I would do away with the system of disregards of income. Furthermore, I would limit the application of the workfare plan to those who are actually established as being on welfare, and not extend it to others, and thus not give it any resemblance of a guaranteed minimum income.

Basically, the idea of the Finance Committee plan, the Long plan, is sound. It would divide our welfare recipients and potential welfare recipients into two classes: employable and unemployable. The unemployable would continue to get welfare. The Federal Government would continue to pay its share. But in it we would grant more authority to write rules and regulations, with more administration by the States and the localities and less by the Federal Government. Every Governor who appeared before our committee, every State welfare director, said he could clean up his welfare rolls if it were not for the Federal regulations. So the first step in any welfare reform that amounts to anything is to lessen the authority of the Federal Government and to give more authority to the people back home, who are close to the problem.

Mr. President, I do not want to be misunderstood. There are unfortunate people in the United States who must and should have welfare. There are people who are poor; there are people who are disadvantaged; there are people who face problems and situations over which they have no control. They are entitled to generous and fair and compassionate treatment, and I believe that the taxpayers are glad to do that. The criticism arises when we go beyond that and when abuses creep in.

The worthy poor are not entitled just to the meager necessities, but to fair and compassionate treatment. But we are never going to get the abuses weeded out by a bureaucracy in Washington. It can only be done by less authority in Washington and more authority back home among the people. The Finance Committee version, the Long version, with respect to people on welfare who cannot work, does that very thing: It grants more authority to the States, which in turn can delegate the authority to the local units of government.

I have confidence in the American people. I do not believe that the American people will let their neighbors suffer. I think the American people have more kindness and more generosity than any faraway bureaucracy that gets lost in its own regulations and its own statistics. Therefore, I think that local control not only will eliminate abuses, but also will result in a program for the worthy needy of the land that is more just, more generous, more fair, and more compassionate than what we have.

The Finance Committee proposal, the Long proposal, as I have said, would separate our welfare load into those who are unemployable and those who are employable, and for the latter there would be a work plan. Simply stated, those people would no longer get welfare. They would have an opportunity to report and work and earn as much money as they have been getting on welfare, and the Federal Government would pick up the tab. Thus, it would relieve some welfare costs of our States.

This workfare plan is in accord with everything that is fine and good. There is nothing wrong with the work ethic. If it were not for the work ethic, there would not be anything worth while in the United States. Everything we have, everything we enjoy, everything handed on to us exists because somebody worked. A Government program that perpetuates the work ethic is right and sound and forward looking. Those who ridicule it and call it "slave fare" are backward looking. Abolish work in this country and nothing will be built.

Now, Mr. President, under the Long plan, an able-bodied person who has been getting welfare, reports for this work, and efforts will be made to get him a job in private enterprise. If that fails, there will be a Work Authority of the last resort, to do necessary work, whether it be in the streets, the parks, the hospitals, or wherever. I think many of them will be glad to do it. Visit the neighborhoods in any of our great cities where the bulk of the people are on welfare, and right in those neighborhoods will be enough work just to clean up the many streets, to pick up the litter, the paper, the cans, and other things left lying around.

What is wrong with that? If they are able bodied, if everyone is being taxed to support some people, is it asking too much that the recipients keep their neighborhoods clean a little bit?

I have heard my chairman, the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG), point out that very same thing. That is one of the things that is in there.

We hear a great deal about the welfare cycle, how someone has been on welfare, his parents have been on welfare, and his grandparents have been on welfare. That is true. I invite attention to the fact that the individual who is a victim of the welfare cycle has a hard time getting out of it. He goes out to get a job and they say to him, "Where did you work before? What are your recommendations? Where are your references?" So he or she is discouraged before ever getting started.

The Finance Committee worked on a plan that will do something about it. Let us take the individual who is a victim of the welfare cycle. Think for a moment of the man or woman who has known nothing but welfare, whose parents have been on welfare and whose grandparents have been on welfare. Where on earth would they ever go to get a job?

Under this plan, they would report to the Work Authority and they would be required to perform some useful work. They would learn how to do that work. They would learn, for the first time in their lives, perhaps, what it means to report at a given time. They would learn for the first time, perhaps, what it means to follow simple directions. They would have the experience of performing something worthwhile and then receiving something that they had earned, which would do more to lift their spirits and improve their well-being than anything that had ever happened to them before.

This workfare program, if properly handled, can be a training ground that will be welcomed by the unfortunate because it will give them work experience and it will give them sufficient knowledge and self-confidence so that they will be able to go out and apply for another job. It will do something toward breaking the welfare cycle.

There is much merit in the Finance Committee's workfare plan. As I said a minute ago, it is a little more expensive than I can buy. There are a couple of changes that I think should be made, but it is far superior in its basic concept and plan to the House-passed bill or the proposal to be offered by the distinguished Senator from Connecticut (Mr. RIBICOFF).

Mr. President, I mentioned a while ago what a large and complex bill H.R. 1 is. If we could pass it as reported by the committee, with some improvements and changes in the welfare plan that would be acceptable to the House, that will be fine. However, the House is committed to its own plan and we may have a close vote here.

I think it would be wise statesmanship on the part of the leadership of the Senate if they would just lay aside the whole subject of welfare reform and let Congress and the Senate approach it next year, away from all of the competition for ideas and proposals that exist in an election year. Then, I think, the other titles that will go to conference can be ironed out rather shortly.

But, again, I would think that the principle of a guaranteed minimum income is so wrong and so adverse to the basic American idea, and so contrary to the work ethic, that should either the version of welfare reform adopted by the House or that of the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. RIBICOFF) be adopted, it will be the end of all legislation for this year. It is so wrong. We cannot let it pass. We cannot let it be considered.

So, Mr. President, on behalf of all the people that need much of the legislation that is in this bill, I hope that the leadership will take such action as will set aside the whole idea of welfare reform until such time as we are not engaged in an election and when we have the time to work out this difficult problem, so that we can be just and generous and kind to the poor and the unfortunate who cannot help themselves and, at the same time, eliminate from the rolls those who are classified as abuses and who are really abusing the system, and so that we can improve the administration thereof as well as lower the costs.

Mr. President, I want to commend the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG) for his stanch opposition to the idea of a guaranteed minimum income for doing nothing.

That is the issue here.

We would render a great disservice to every recipient of the benefits of such a program. We would render a great disservice to our country.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nebraska yield?

Mr. CURTIS. I yield.

Mr. LONG I thank the distinguished Senator from Nebraska for the kind references he made to the junior Senator from Louisiana, but permit me to say to the able Senator that the position of the Senator from Louisiana was not lightly arrived at. This Senator first read of the measure as something he thought he could support. In conversations with the President and others, the Senator from Louisiana made it clear that he very much favored the idea of assuring——

Mr. ERVIN. Mr. President, if the Senator from Louisiana will permit me to interject here, I want to correct an error he made. The Senator referred to himself as the junior Senator from Louisiana. I am satisfied that the distinguished lady from Louisiana (Mrs. EDWARDS) is far the junior of the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee.

Mr. LONG. I thank the Senator.

Mr. CURTIS. That only proves that gallantry has not disappeared from the Union.

Mr. LONG. I thank the Senator for the correction. May I say that this Senator had applauded the President for his good intentions in deciding to see to it that the needy and poor and children of this country would be protected against dependency and against poverty.

The only reservation in the mind of the Senator from Louisiana is that if we are going to pay out such a large amount of money, we should pay it out on some basis that is work-related so that it would encourage people to accept jobs and so that the work ethic would be enthroned, rather than to encourage people to do the things society does not want them to do.

I might say that every expression that the Senator from Louisiana could gain from the President of the United States was to the effect that he had just that in mind and that that was the direction in which we ought to be moving.

It was only after hearing the Senators who had expressed doubt, such as the Senator from Nebraska, the former Senator from Delaware, Mr. Williams, and others, who pointed out the dangers inherent in this proposal that it became apparent to the Senator from Louisiana that it was our duty to oppose this measure and to oppose it as strongly and logically and with all the determination we could muster, because this was something that posed a grave threat to this form of government.

The problem was that if we want to get started down this track, we cannot stop unless we turn around and move in the other direction. We cannot stop just by guaranteeing someone $2,400 or $2,600 for doing nothing. If it is a family of four we are speaking of, we cannot logically say that we should keep them below a poverty level of $4,000. And we cannot reduce their benefits one dollar for every dollar they earn. No one can logically contend we ought to deny them what they earn by their own efforts.

But if they can keep 50 cents on the dollar earned, then they do not come off the welfare rolls until they are making $8,000 a year. Then they will not be satisfied. The National Welfare Rights Council is campaigning strongly and fervently, as it did at the Democratic National Convention this year, to guarantee a $6,500 income for a family of four.

As the Senator so well knows, that would put us to the point where when the people started working, if we permitted them to keep half of what they earned, they would be making $13,000 a year before they came off the welfare rolls. At that point we would have to have 112 million people drawing welfare checks. And it does not solve the problem just to call it something else. It is still a welfare check whether we call it by that name or not. It is a grant and a gift from the Government for doing nothing. So, we would have 112 million people drawing welfare checks and only 98 million people on the putting up end who would pay for that. We would have more people on the taking down end than we would have on the putting up end.

And, Mr. President, if that is not bad enough, that is assuming that everyone is going to be honest. If there is widespread cheating, it may very well cost far more than that. We might have 130 million or 140 million receiving welfare checks.

I would think, to be practical about the matter, that we would almost need as many investigators as we would have beneficiaries if we wanted to keep up with that sort of thing.

The cost of the NWRO program would be about $70 billion a year. When the committee bill goes into effect, we will be providing more than $80 billion a year in income maintenance programs. However, why should we provide another $70 billion a year in ways that encourage people to do the wrong things, in ways that encourage fathers not to admit the paternity of their children, and in ways to discourage people from joining in wedlock when they decide to start producing a family?

Why should we spend our money in ways that tend to bring into disrepute the American institutions and tear down those that exist? Why should we not instead spend money in ways to encourage people to do the right sort of things, to take jobs, to marry the women who are mothers of their children, or to try to do something to improve their communities, and to offer some services, the services that society needs.

Those are the kinds of questions which persuaded the Senator from Louisiana, just as it persuaded the Senator from Nebraska, that the family assistance plan should not pass and should not become law.

That persuaded me that we ought to try to find out as hard as we knew how the answer to this matter. And we ought to try to persuade the Senate to accept the right answer rather than the wrong answer.

I congratulate the Senator from Nebraska for being one who was not fooled about this matter from the very beginning. I was told by former democrats who later became White House advisers that this was something that could only happen under a Republican President. And, the more I thought about it, the more I thought they were right. I think they knew what they were saying.

If people could persuade a Republican President to recommend a program such as this, the people would not believe that it was actually quite what it was, because they would not believe that a Republican President could recommend something that would work out in that fashion.

May I say that I do not think the President ever for a moment imagined or conceived many of any of the dangers implicit in this family assistance plan or the Ribicoff version of the family assistance plan. His declarations are too consistent. Everything he said about the subject was consistent. The people who talked with him indicated the contrary to the Senator from Louisiana.

I know that I have had the privilege of discussing this matter with the President of the United States many times. Every time I discussed it with him, the one thing that came through loud and clear was that the President of the United States believes in the work ethic and does not believe in loading the welfare rolls down with untold millions of additional recipients.

I may ask the Senator from Nebraska whether the President of the United States has ever conveyed to the Senator from Nebraska any high degree of displeasure because he has worked for the workfare program rather than the guaranteed income proposal?

Mr. CURTIS. No, definitely not. I think that the country owes a great debt of gratitude to President Nixon for emphasizing the need for welfare improvements. The President's utterances on welfare are sound and the Senate Finance Committee bill, the workfare program, sponsored by the chairman of the committee, come nearest to meeting the objectives stated in the statements and utterances of the President of the United States, than does either the House bill, the original proposal sent to Congress, or the Ribicoff proposal.

Unfortunately, after these fine declarations were made by the President, from that point on certain people have to take over and work out things. It goes to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

In my opinion, they ended up with something that defeats many of the fine objectives stated by the President of the United States. The President of the United States realizes that without the work ethic, the United States is headed for deterioration. Without the work ethic, there would not be anything worth while in this country, because everything that we enjoy, we enjoy because somebody works.

I believe that we would render a great disservice to the President of the United States if we enacted this proposal that was sent to Congress, or that was passed by the House, or proposed by he Senator from Connecticut. I think we must take the approach the Committee on Finance has taken, and that is to take care of those people who cannot work, but for those who can work, to have a program where they can get a job if there is not one available and to give them work experience. Give them the opportunity to know what it means to be at a certain place, to do something, and to be able to earn. That is doing a favor to the unfortunate person who is a victim of the welfare cycle. Just to perpetuate the cycle and send out checks in situations where the people are neither aged, disabled, nor handicapped, is a disservice both to the people who pay for it and the people who receive it.

Mr. President, we have reached a time in the Senate when we need leadership. We need leadership to move in and prevent the Senate from enacting some bad legislation during these hurried times just before an election. If the workfare plan of the Committee on Finance cannot be agreed to—I am convinced if it goes to conference some of the objections I have to it will be ironed out, but if that cannot be done, this matter should go over to a time when candidates for office are not in favor of giving people more for doing less.

Mr. President, just one more thought and then I shall yield the floor. With respect to the guaranteed minimum income, sometimes it is mentioned as $2,400 for four people, sometimes $4,000, and if one is speaking about one of the candidates for the Presidency, it is $6,500. That is only part of the story. People raise the question, How could a family of four live on less than $2,400? It is not limited to $2,400. There are certain disregards. The first $100 a month is disregarded, one-third of earnings above that, the earnings of children, certain casual earnings are eliminated, subsidies for housing; many of them are recipients of medicare. If one adds it all up, it is not just $2,400; it more than twice that. My point is, that is only part of the story.

Mr. President, were we able to submit to the rank and file of the American people from one end of the country to the other the question, "Should the unfortunate and disadvantaged, and people unable to work be continued on in welfare?" the answer would be "Yes." That is what the bill of the Committee on Finance does. But it vests more authority in the people close to the problem.

If we were to ask the same question of the people across the land, "Do you believe those able to work should perform some useful work, and do you believe they would benefit by it and welcome it?" the great majority would answer "Yes."

Mr. President, again I call attention to the size and complexity of this legislation. We should not, in these closing, hectic days of the session, pass any bill of this complexity, let alone one that would represent a new departure, a move toward guaranteeing a minimum income to people throughout the land who do nothing. There is nothing practical or workable in either the House bill or the Ribicoff proposal that will increase the number of people leaving welfare and going to work. That is one of the things the President stressed, and those who worked out a bill and submitted it here, submitted a bill that has nothing in it to bring that about. It will not work.

I yield the floor.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The second assistant legislative clerk called the roll and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ervin	Miller	Williams
Fannin	Moss	Young

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum is present.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, in some respects, the Pell amendment is an even more objectionable proposal than the previous one. This proposal would put a needs test in the social security program. As it stands today, there is only a retirement test; but this amendment would provide certain services if you had income of less than $3,000; you would not get the services if your income was more than $3,000. If a couple had an income of $5,000 or less, they would get the services, but they would not get the services if their income were more than that.

Furthermore, not one nickel of tax is attached to this amendment to pay for the cost which is estimated initially at some $2.5 billion a year. It would bankrupt the social security medicare fund, because there is no surplus in the fund. It would result in the Senate having a totally irresponsible proposition when it sent conferees to talk with the House.

It would be similar, I regret to say, to some of the "Christmas Tree" proposals that the Senate has voted on occasion—totally irresponsible tax cuts or spending proposals which could bankrupt the country. In this case, it would be a totally irresponsible spending addition that would bankrupt the social security medicare trust fund through enormously increasing the cost of the program without providing any tax to pay for it.

Mr. President, this proposal is not viewed by the Social Security Administration as something which should be done, for the reason that items such as eyeglasses, hearing aids, and podiatric services—which could be anything from having your corns trimmed to having your toenails cut by a foot doctor—are things which people can budget. This could even include a foot massage. You could go in to the podiatrist's office and the man could rub your feet for you. This proposal makes no distinction between a foot service that is essential and a foot service that is not essential. These are the kinds of things for which we provide people with cash income so they can decide and provide for themselves in these budgetable areas.

Every Senator over the age of 40 knows that after age 40 things may start going wrong with the body which do not seem to repair themselves the way they do when one is younger. Eyes get worse and do not correct themselves the way they did when one was younger. One might suffer a broken bone or a sprain, which does not heal or correct itself the way it did earlier. All sorts of things tend to go wrong that people have to live with the rest of their lives; they have to adjust to those things.

In these areas, we should think in terms of priorities. Any State in the Union which wants to provide the services advocated by the Senator from Rhode Island has the privilege of providing them under medicaid and the Federal Government will pay for at least 50 percent of the costs. But let us see how much priority the States place on these items.

Look at Alabama. They do not provide the dentures or the eyeglasses, even though the Federal Government will pay for some 75 percent of the cost. They do not provide this, because they can find a better use for the money in providing something else with a higher priority. Here the Senator proposes to spend at least $2.5 billion to provide these items and services for those who do not need it.

Colorado does not provide these items, because they can find a higher priority for the same money, even with liberal Federal matching.

Delaware does not provide it for the needy, because they can find a better use for this money somewhere else.

Florida does not provide it, and that is one of the most generous welfare States in the Nation, with respect to the aged.

Here is Georgia, one of the States leading in social services. Even though Georgia could have 75 percent Federal money for this, they do not provide it, because they can find a higher priority use somewhere else—child care or another higher priority need.

In the State of Rhode Island, they do provide eyeglasses, dental and podiatric care. They provide it for the needy and for the medically indigent. One might ask, if Rhode Island is providing for this, with the Federal Government paying half the cost, why would the Senator want to insist on providing for it at Federal expense, without any State contribution, under social security?

The answer is that the Senator would like to avoid having to require the people of his State to meet a needs test in order to get eyeglasses, in order to have somebody rub their feet for them or trim their toenails.

On the other hand, in trying to provide it and to avoid a needs test, he would then seek to put the first needs test into the social security program. What sense does it make? In order to avoid a needs test under medicaid, he puts a needs test into the social security program for the first time. It does not make sense.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield.

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. BENNETT. Does not the chairman believe that if we really feel that it is necessary to put a needs test in the social security program, it should be for some reason more urgent than foot care and dentures?

Mr. LONG. I would certainly think so.

Mr. President, the Senate voted today to provide $4 billion of additional income to people who are 65 years of age and older, and to the blind and to the disabled—$4 billion of additional income. The Senate—I think quite correctly—by unanimous vote regards that as a high priority expenditure. That is money which those people can spend however they wish. They can buy as many pairs of glasses as they think they need, and as many hearing aids, and they can secure the routine foot services they want. Would that not make better sense covering those items elsewhere?

Just to propose an amendment to bankrupt the social security medicare fund does not mean that Congress should be that irresponsible. If we take it to conference with the House, as though we were going there with a Christmas tree, I am sure that the House would not look on it seriously but might insist on knocking out the good things in the bill which the Senate conferees would want retained. This amendment would put us in an irresponsible light. Here is a proposal which appears to bankrupt the social security medicare trust fund by $2.5 billion a year. Suppose some of us with a sense of responsibility should insist on putting additional taxes on the amendment to pay for it, what would that mean?

The average family with $10,000 a year would have to pay some $25 a year more in taxes for this. The employer would have to pay another $25 a year.

As a practical matter, everyone knows that the social security tax goes into the cost of doing business. When the consumer buys something, he is absorbing the cost of the social security tax, plus other expenses and what it takes for the American businessman to make a profit; so that, in the last analysis, the average working family would have to absorb another indirect tax of $25 a year. In other words, $50 a year in taxes from the average working family in order to provide a service to those not necessarily needing it and for a very low priority type of expenditure.

I would say, Mr. President, that the people of this country, looking at all the needs we have elsewhere, would not approve of this. They would not approve of us bypassing other high-priority items, such as those I have suggested on occasion, such as catastrophic insurance so that we would be able to help those who have to spend $5,000 or $10,000 in meeting medical bills in a single year. We would be able to help with those medical expenses, rather than let a person die or go bankrupt because he needs a kidney transplant or dialysis or other things which are so enormously expensive—for diseases which last a very long time.

This amendment would bypass those things which are essential, things which are a matter of life or death, and we would spend money on things which people should and could budget and be able to take care of for themselves.

The Senator has modified his amendment to reduce the cost by $1 billion, but it is still altogether too high. People find ways to meet these problems.

This is not the kind of high-priority item that would compare to other items in H.R. 1. In H.R. 1, we are increasing medicare benefits, I believe, by about $3 billion a year. Just look at some of the items of cost here. For drugs for the aged, we require that they pay $1 toward the cost of a prescription and we will provide the rest, but not for everything, because if we did, it would cost a great deal of money to try to do the whole thing. We do not provide drugs in many situations. We provide only so-called maintenance drugs to keep the cost of the program down to about $700 million. We could have approved drug proposals that would have cost $3 billion and they would have higher priority claims than this present amendment would. We could have provided catastrophic insurance proposals that would have cost $2.5 billion, about the same cost as this amendment, or provided much more desperately needed services. But we restrained ourselves from doing that because of the taxes necessary to pay for what we have already provided.

We could have provided additional days in the hospital beyond what we do now, but we did not do that. We could have eliminated the part B and part A deductibles. Everyone knows that under part B, which is the doctors' part of medicare, aged people pay $50 a year and they pay $68 now under part A when they go to the hospital.

We could have eliminated those requirements. It would have claimed a higher priority than optional eyeglasses for what people should be able to budget for themselves when they need a change of eyeglasses. But we did not provide for that because it would cost a great deal of money. So there are many other things in the bill which claim a higher priority by any fair standard.

This amendment claims a lower priority than some of the recommendations of the administration which were left out. It claims a lower priority than many of the recommendations the committee left out. It is a low priority. It means that, so far as the average American family is concerned, they would have to pay some $50 a year in additional taxes just to provide for something that claims such a low priority that 18 States do not provide for these items even though the Federal Government will put up from 50 to 83 percent of the cost of doing it.

For example, in Mississippi, the Federal Government will pay 83 percent of the cost of providing these services for the needy, and they do not provide it because other things claim a higher priority on the tax money of the people in Mississippi. They use the available money for things that the people need more, those required to keep people alive and to protect their health. With 83 percent Federal matching, the State still has not elected to provide coverage for those lower priority needs.

The Senator would now suggest that we do it for those that do not need it. I would say that if we are going to do something of this sort, the starting point would be not to do something which would cost the average working family $50 a year in taxes that they would have to absorb out of their incomes. We could provide that under medicaid we would do all of this for people in need and pay 100 percent—and it would cost only a fraction of what he is suggesting in here. That would be the logical way, but that would not achieve the Senator's objective. We already have those services in the State of Rhode Island for anyone who has need of it. All the Senator wants is to provide for those who have no need for it.

This would be a most unwise thing for the Senate to do, particularly without providing one nickel in revenue to pay for it, to ask Senators to go to a conference with the House with a proposal that would bankrupt the social security medicare trust fund. That, to me, does not make any sense at all.

I urge that the amendment be rejected.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I have listened with interest to the distinguished chairman of the committee. I understand his viewpoint, yet I would point out that yesterday, without a limitation, the Senate in its wisdom almost agreed to this amendment. It was six votes short, I think. I have sought, in order to make the amendment more acceptable to my colleagues, to bring in an income limitation so that, as the Senator from Utah pointed out, one great means would not benefit from this amendment.

For that reason I brought in an income limitation which I thought would have made it more acceptable, not less acceptable.

As far as whether foot massage and corn removal could be included, I would think those would be excluded, because the amendment very carefully specifies that the regulations for establishing the service limits will be promulgated by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. I would very much doubt whether any Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would permit foot massage and corn removal to be within the scope of those regulations.

As far as irresponsible legislation goes, as to priorities, this is truly a question of priorities. When we raise the Defense Department budget by $4 billion, when we scatter military assistance all around the world, I think that is a question of mistaken priorities. That is irresponsible legislation from my viewpoint. If when we give dentures, glasses, hearing aids and podiatric care to older people it is to be irresponsible legislation and if it is said that to do these other things is responsible legislation, then I want to be for irresponsible legislation, if that is the definition of it, because to my mind this is where the national interest is, I believe our people need these things, and their not having them is wrong.

Another advantage of this amendment would be that it would reduce the forcing of older people to go on medicaid, which is a greater expense to the American taxpayer and with a loss of their own dignity, sometimes just to acquire hearing aids and eyeglasses and things of that sort that they need.

I realize there are other important elements in H.R. 1 that were dropped because of so-called fiscal responsibility.

I myself had one amendment that was considered by the committee that would drop the deductible plans in A and B. I am not pressing that at this time. I realize the expenses involved. I do think it should be adopted eventually.

This pending amendment simply provides that eyeglasses, dentures, hairing aids, and podiatric care should be made available to those of our citizens with adjusted gross incomes of less than $3,000 as an individual and $5,000 as a family. It is not an irresponsible type of legislation. It is a proper question of priorities.

I would very much hope that this amendment would be accepted.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, with regard to the podiatric services which the Senator's amendment would provide, the medicare program already provides for nonroutine podiatric services. In other words, if an aged person breaks his foot or if he has to have an operation to remove some growth that impedes or impairs his walking or if he has anything that could be described as a nonroutine podiatric service, that is already taken care of in medicare.

The only thing that the Senator's amendment would appear to afford so far as podiatric services are concerned would be routine services, such as the case of a man with fallen arches who would go to a podiatrist from time to time to let the podiatrist massage his foot or periodically remove some of his toenail or do the kind of things that are ordinarily the routinely occurring type of service.

Those services that are nonroutine, that a person cannot budget or plan for in advance are already taken care of in medicare.

Mr. President, I hope very much that the amendment is not agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Rhode Island. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PASTORE. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Mr. David Affelt, counsel for the Senate Committee on Aging, and Mr. Kenneth Dameron, professional staff member for the Committee on Aging, be allowed to remain on the Senate floor during the consideration of H.R. 1.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I am aware of the fact that other Senators wish to offer amendments. Therefore, I do not think we should go to third reading at this time. I would hope Senators who have in mind offering amendments would seek to have their amendments printed so that we may have them before us and analyze those amendments.

Unless other Senators care to offer amendments at this point, I suppose that is as much as we can do on the bill today. Those of us on the committee are ready to vote, but I understand that Senators who would wish to offer amendments are not prepared and are not ready at this moment, so I suggest that we turn to something else, and we will be here in the morning.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, may I inquire whether any Senator has any amendment which he is ready to call up to H.R. 1?

I see no Senator who indicates he has an amendment ready to call up.

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1972—AMENDMENTS

AMENDMENT NO. 1653

(Ordered to be printed and to lie on the table.)

Mr. TUNNEY (for himself, Mr. GAMBRELL, Mr. BAKER, Mr. BURDICK, Mr. DOMINICK, Mr. HART, Mr. HARTKE, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. MCGOVERN, Mr. METCALF, and Mr. STEVENS) submitted an amendment, intended to be proposed by them, jointly, to the bill (H.R. 1) to amend the Social Security Act to increase benefits and improve eligibility and computation methods under the OASDI program, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis on improvements in their operating effectiveness, to replace the existing Federal-State public assistance programs with a Federal program of adult assistance and a Federal program of benefits to low-income families with children with incentives and requirements for employment and training to improve the capacity for employment of members of such families, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENTS NOS. 1654, 1655, AND 1656

(Ordered to be printed and to lie on the table.)

Mr. HUMPHREY submitted three amendments, intended to be proposed by him, to the bill (H.R. 1), supra.

AMENDMENT NO. 1657

(Ordered to be printed and to lie on the table.)

Mr. BROOKE. Mr. President, I submit an amendment to H.R. 1, and I ask that it be printed. My amendment would strike section 511 of title V, part A of H.R. 1, entitled "Treatment of Rent Under Public Housing."

The intention of the Committee on Finance was laudable. Unfortunately their efforts to remove one inequity in the rental payments made by welfare agencies to local housing authorities will result in an even greater inequity amongst public housing tenants living side by side. Let me explain.

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1969 contained a provision that limited rents paid by public housing tenants to 25 percent of their incomes. Prior to the enactment of this rent-to-income limitation, we found that many of the tenants were paying 50 and 60 percent of their incomes for rent. Food, clothing and the other necessities of life were forced to take a second priority to shelter. The elderly in particular, living on fixed incomes, were hit the hardest as inflation and spiraling operating costs pushes public housing rents out of the reach of many low-income families for whom the program was designed. It must be kept in mind that while public housing tenants were paying 50 and 60 percent of their incomes for rent, the rest of the Nation was averaging less than 20 percent.

The language of the 1969 amendment contained a proviso. In substance it said that in the case of tenants on welfare, they would have to continue paying a disproportionate amount of their income for rent if they were unfortunate enough to be residing in States that paid welfare grants for rent on an "as paid" basis; that is, whatever rent was charged the tenant. Without this proviso, a reduction of a welfare tenant's rent would have resulted in a reduction in his grant. We would then have had the Department of Housing and Urban Development subsidizing the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare with no benefit accruing to the tenant.

We then found that more than two-thirds of the States used this "as paid" basis for determining grants for shelter. It is not difficult to see the inequity of two tenants living side by side in the same project in identical units with the welfare tenant paying, in some cases, twice as much rent as the nonwelfare tenant.

Therefore, in 1971, Congress saw fit to enact corrective legislation in the form of section 9 of Public Law 92-213. The thrust of this measure was to eliminate the inequity and to give welfare tenants the same benefits that their neighbors were getting under the 1969 amendment.

Section 511 of H.R. 1 is now before us a short 9 months later. It seeks to undo our good-faith attempt to correct this situation before we have had time to evaluate effectively our efforts. Let us also keep in mind that a repeal of Public Law 92-213, section 9, would throw local housing authorities into hopeless confusion. They have just completed a substantial revision of their rent schedules pursuant to the recent statute and would be faced with an intolerable administration burden if section 511 of H.R. 1 is permitted to stand.

Aside from the premature timing, section 511 is premised on an apparent misunderstanding of Public Law 92-213. According to the "Summary of the Principal Provision of H.R. 1 as Determined by the Committee on Finance," dated June 13, 1972, on page 81:

> Public Law 92-213 . . . would require welfare agencies in some circumstances to pay as a rental allowance more than the actual cost of rent.

In reality, the "actual cost of rent" or the operating cost for each public housing unit has far exceeded the inadequate rental allowance given welfare families in most States. If welfare agencies had been willing to pay the operating costs of units in public housing, we would have not needed Public Law 92-213 in the first place. As a matter of fact, if my colleagues on the Finance Committee will assure me that sufficient funds will be made available to welfare agencies so that they can provide rental allowances equal to the "actual cost of rent." I will withdraw my amendment.

The purpose of Public Law 92-213 and a companion measure, Public Law 91-152, was to enable low-income families to live in public housing without having to pay out most of their meager incomes for rent. The intent of the combined measures is to permit the Department of Housing and Urban Development to pay the difference between the actual cost of operating the public housing unit and 25 percent of the tenants' incomes. Most often a welfare agency's rental allowance falls somewhere between the two. If we allow section 511 of H.R. 1 to repeal Public Law 92-213 we are saying to the welfare tenants in public housing, "We realize that you will not be given a rental allowance sufficient to pay for your unit. That's unfortunate. You must now use all of your rental allowance plus money earmarked for food and clothing." We thus tell these tenants that it is unimportant that 60 percent of their incomes must go for shelter. I, for one, cannot bring myself to tell them that.

In this connection it is worth pointing out that whether Public Law 92-213 is repealed or not, the welfare agencies will have to spend the same amount of money. Public Law 92-213, in no way, increases or decreases the welfare outlay.

Nearly 40 percent of the tenants in public housing are elderly. Fifty-six percent of the tenants are minors. Surely my colleagues do not want to tell these tenants that they are getting too much of a break when they must pay one-fourth of their monthly incomes for rent while the rest of us average less than one-fifth of our incomes?

Mr. President, to allow section 511 to remain in H.R. 1 is to give these tenants the bad news. I urge that my amendment to strike this section be adopted.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of my amendment be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the amendment was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMENDMENT No. 1657

On page 933, strike out lines 9 through 14.

On page 33, line 17, strike out "sec. 512" and insert in lieu thereof "Sec. 511".

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the yea-and-nay vote on this amendment occur at 10 minutes past 11 a.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, my amendment proposes two changes to the Social Security Act. First, it would amend the Social Security Act so as to reduce to 50 the age at which a woman may begin to receive actuarially reduced widow's benefits thereunder, and it would reduce to 60, the age at which monthly benefits generally, when based upon the attainment of retirement age, would be payable on an actuarially reduced basis.

Throughout my 20 years in Congress, I have consistently worked and voted for legislation aimed at providing realistic social security benefits, and legislation designed to strengthen the structure, administration, and financing of the social security program. I have previously introduced, as separate legislation, bills to lower to 50 the age at which actuarially reduced widow's insurance benefits could be received, and to lower to 60, the age at which actuarially reduced monthly benefits could be received. The Senate has upon several occasions given its approval to lower the age to 60, but the House has never seen fit to agree. I hope, however, that the need for updated social security legislation—such as this amendment—is now clearly recognized by Members in both Houses of Congress, and I am hopeful that my amendment will be accepted and subsequently enacted into law. First, I will discuss the age 50 computation point for widows.

Mr. President, beyond the 26 million citizens already drawing social security benefits, there are many widows between the ages of 50 and 60 who have lost their husbands and who, at this stage in their lives, are unable to establish a new career, or to reactivate an old one. It is this group of widows that my amendment is aimed at assisting. Under the provisions of my amendment, the Social Security Administration estimates that approximately 440,000 widows would claim benefits the first year, creating an initial cost of about $700,000,000. But in the long run there would be no, or very little, increased cost because it would balance out.

In order that we can understand what these benefits would mean, I would like to cite some examples, which have been computed by the actuarial experts of the Social Security Administration.

First. Widow A is 50 years old and her husband had average monthly earnings of $500 per month. Her reduced benefits at age 50 would be $135 per month. If Widow A were 55, her benefits would be $164 per month.

Second. Widow B is 50 years old and her husband had average monthly earnings of $600 per month. Her reduced benefits would total $155 per month. If Widow B were 55, her monthly benefits would total $188.

Third. Widow C is 50 years old and her husband had average monthly earnings of $700. Her reduced benefits would total $171 per month. If Widow C were 55 years old, her reduced benefits would total $208 per month.

In West Virginia, approximately 6,500 widows would become eligible for actuarially reduced benefits, if the age requirement were lowered from 62 to 50. The increase in benefits for West Virginians would be approximately $10,000,000.

This provision of my amendment, if adopted and enacted into law, will provide benefits for a group of persons who need it most—widows in their 50's who are unable to work and who desperately need these benefits, but have been unable to obtain them because of the social security age requirement. These are people whose deceased husbands had paid into the program, and these are people who deserve to receive some type of benefits now.

I will now discuss that portion of my amendment which will amend the Social Security Act to provide that monthly benefits, when based upon the attainment of retirement age, will be payable on an actuarially reduced basis at age 60.

Mr. President, there are, as present, over 26 million Americans receiving social security benefits. For many of them, these benefits are their only source of income. However, beyond these 26 million citizens already drawing social security benefits, there are many other Americans who are being forced out of the labor market because of the early retirement policies of many business and companies or the closing of plants, and individuals who are too ill to work, but who cannot meet social security disability regulations. It is this group of citizens that this portion of my amendment is aimed at assisting.

Under the provisions of my amendment allowing actuarially reduced benefits to be received at age 60, the Social Security Administration estimates that approximately 1,040,000 persons would claim benefits the first year, creating an initial cost of about $1.35 billion. But in the long run there would be no increased cost; because the recipients would have chosen to accept their benefits at an earlier age, but on an actuarially reduced balance. The cost would, therefore, balance out in the long run.

In West Virginia, approximately 11,000 persons would become eligible for actuarilly reduced benefits, if the age were lowered from 62 to 60. The overall increase in benefits for West Virginia under this amendment would be approximately $11 million.

This amendment, if adopted and enacted into law, will provide benefits for persons who need it desperately—citizens who have been forced to retire, or who because of ill health should retire or would like to retire but have been unable to do so because the social security disability benefits program at the present time would not cover them inasmuch as they cannot qualify.

These are people who have been paying into the program for a long time and I believe they are people who deserve to be covered by the program now. They would have the option, under my amendment, to continue working if they chose to do so—until they were 60, 62, or 65. They would not be mandatorily forced to retire. They could retire on a voluntary basis, but at least, they would have the additional option they do not now have.

Mr. President, I urge the adoption of this amendment.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, will the Senator from West Virginia yield?

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. COOPER. I support strongly the purpose of the Senator's amendment which would allow men to receive reduced social security benefits beginning at age 60, rather than age 62, and which would allow widows to begin receiving reduced benefits at age 50 rather than age 60 as provided for in existing law. I have received a great deal of mail from people on this subject, particularly from widows who are left in destitute circumstances.

It is my understanding that this amendment would not alter the provision in the committee bill to increase from 82.5 to 100 percent the amount a widow could receive on her deceased husband's account. Benefits applied for before the age of 65 would still be reduced according to the widow's age at the time of application. Under the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from West Virginia, Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD, a widow could now apply for the reduced benefits at age 50.

I would ask though, whether the Senator would consider changing the age from 50 to 55 years. Decreases in the age limitations have usually covered 5-year periods, and a 5-year period would place less strain on the present social security system. The amendment would still provide substantial assistance to many widows and I am sure that in time the age limit will be moving down to 50 years anyway.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. I would personally like the age to go to 50 years so that they have that option. If they wish to wait longer, they can then do so. I realize that lowering the age to 50 years is a great step and it might be more logical to proceed with a lesser step. If it would enhance the chances of adoption of the amendment in the Senate and later in the conference, perhaps it would be advisable to modify my amendment to that extent, but I should like to hear first what some other Senators have to say on the subject.

Mr. COOPER. I appreciate that and I would like very much to be a cosponsor of the Senator's amendment if he would permit me. I think the change is very much needed.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the names of the distinguished Senator from Kentucky (Mr. COOPER), the distinguished Senator from Indiana (Mr. HARTKE), and my distinguished colleague Mr. RANDOLPH be added as cosponsors of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BENTSEN). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I regret that I cannot support the pending amendment. As much as we might like to lower the retirement age, we must recognize that we are already providing full social security benefits which are not reduced at all to those who are disabled. It is true that persons who lose their jobs, let us say between the ages of 60 and 62, have a problem, but unemployment insurance is available to them.

The proposal in the pending amendment to lower the retirement age to 60 would increase the cost of the bill in the beginning by $1.35 billion. To reduce the retirement age for widows to 50, as originally introduced, the cost would be an additional $700 million. I would assume that by modifying the amendment as the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. COOPER) has suggested, that would reduce the cost by perhaps $300 million, but it still would cost about $1.65 billion, I should think, to do the kind of thing the Senator is suggesting here.

Senators should think in terms of what some of these proposals are going to cost. The Senator makes the point that in the long run there would be no cost because the actuarial reduction is such that they would get smaller benefits, but that overlooks the fact that the Senate has now voted, and obviously has every intention of insisting on, supplemental security income benefits for people when they retire at the age of 65. When they reach 65, they would have available to them supplemental security inome which would assure them of $180 a month if they have at least $50 of social security income or some other income.

Therefore, the idea that the cost to the social security trust funds would be absorbed in the long run by the actuarial reduction fades into oblivion when one recognizes the fact that we have provided the supplemental security income benefit to be paid out of general revenues, which would cause anyone with a social security check of $180 or less to receive the difference up to $180, so that the actuarial reduction that would tend to save or offset the social security cost of this would, for the most part, be wiped out by the supplemental security income benefit that is provided elsewhere from general funds in the committee amendment.

Therefore, Mr. President, there would be an additional general fund cost in the proposal, in addition to the heavy additional social security costs in the early years.

I would point out that we have passed the equal rights amendment. I should think that when that is ratified by the States, without ever having intended to do so, we might find that we have provided not only to widows but also to widowers the opportunity to retire at 50 years. Those who have a low income record would receive just as much after 65 because of the supplemental security income benefits that the Senate has already voted.

So, as a practical matter, while the amendment was originaly conceived at a time prior to the supplemental security income proposal, with the idea that beneficiaries would take lower retirement benefits now and receive less later on—because of the supplemental security income benefits, the great majority of the people who would take less now would receive just as much in total income later on as they would have received anyway. The additional amount they would receive would provide an incentive, when the equal rights amendment goes into effect, for able-bodied men who qualify for jobs elsewhere to retire at 50—or if the amendment is modified make it 55 years—if they are widowers.

I am sure that the Senator did not have this effect in mind when he originally put his amendment together.

In other words, I have serious doubts that the Senator ever intended to provide for a widower whose wife died, that he should have the privilege of retiring at age 55. And yet when the equal rights amendment goes into effect, it seems to me that that would be the effect.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 11:10 having arrived, under the previous agreement the Senate will proceed to vote on the amendment.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a 5 minute extension of the time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BENNETT. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. BENNETT. I have been trying to add up the arithmetic. Yesterday we added $2.2 billion to the cost of the social security programs, without the necessary financing. Today we are about to add an immediate burden on the social security trust fund of $1.35 billion for persons who retire at age 60 and something like $300 or $400 million for widows, plus perhaps, a billion-dollar eventual loss to the general fund.

Let us say we are about to add $1.650 billion or $1.7 billion to the trust fund without financing, plus a billion-dollar burden to the general revenue.

I hope the Senate realizes what it is doing, both in terms of the overall budget and of the social security trust fund.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, the supplemental benefit to which reference has been made will be available at age 65 or earlier if the person is blind, or if a person were disabled. What about the widow who is not blind, who is not disabled, but who has reached age 50, and who cannot get a job because she doesn't possess the skills to compete in today's labor market? I am simply trying to provide for those widows who are not blind, who are not disabled, and who are not yet age 65, and who could not therefore, receive the supplemental benefits.

Several Senators have now approached me and asked me to modify my amendment, which I will be glad to do if I can get unanimous consent. I ask unanimous consent that the age 50 provision for widows be amended to read at 55, as suggested by the able senior Senator from Kentucky.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the modification? There being no objection, the amendment will be so modified.

Is all time yielded back?

Mr. LONG. I yield back my time.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. I will yield back my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has been yielded back. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from West Virginia. On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

So Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD's amendment, as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, there is a proposal in the bill, a committee amendment, on which the Senate should vote. I believe this vote would be very helpful and useful to the House to decide whether or not to accept the Senate committee amendment on drugs. I refer to the committee proposal which would make maintenance drugs available under medicare. That provision runs from line 23 of page 252, through line 11, page 268 in the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the committee amendment will be printed in the RECORD.

The committee amendment reads as follows:

"(B) The proprietary names under which products of a drug entity listed in the Formulary by established name (and dosage form and strength) are sold and the names of each supplier thereof.

"(C) Any other information with respect to eligible drug entities which in the judgment of the Committee would be useful in carrying out the purposes of this part.

"(c) In considering whether a particular drug entity (or strength or dosage from thereof) shall be included in or excluded from the Formulary, the Committee is authorized to obtain (upon request therefor) any record pertaining to the characteristics of such drug entity which is available to any other department, agency, or instrumentality of the Federal Government, and to request suppliers or manufacturers of drugs and other knowledgeable persons or organizations to make available to the Committee information relating to such drug. If any such record or information (or any information contained in such record) is of a confidential nature, the Committee shall respect the confidentiality of such record or information and shall limit its usage thereof to the proper exercise of its authority.

"(d)(1) The Committee shall establish such procedures as it determines to be necessary in its evaluation of the appropriateness of the inclusion in or exclusion from the Formulary, of any drug entity (or dosage form or strength thereof). For purposes of inclusion in or exclusion from the Formulary the principal factors in the determination of the Committee shall be:

"(A) the factor of clinical equivalence in the case of the same dosage forms in the same strengths of the same drug entity, and

"(B) the factor of relative therapeutic value in the case of similar or dissimilar drug entities in the same therapeutic category.

"(2) The Committee, prior to making a final decision to remove from listing in the Formulary any drug entity (or dosage forms or strength thereof) which is included therein, shall afford a reasonable opportunity for a formal or informal hearing on the matter to any person engaged in manufacturing, preparing, compounding, or processing such drug entity who shows reasonable ground for such a hearing.

"(3) Any person engaged in the manufacture, preparation, compounding, or processing of any drug entity (or dosage forms or strengths thereof) not included in the Formulary which such person believes to possess the requitite qualities to entitle such drug to be included in the Formulary pursuant to subsection (b), may petition for inclusion of such drug entity and, if such petition is denied by the Formulary Committee, shall, upon request therefor, showing reasonable grounds for a hearing, be afforded a formal or informal hearing on the matter in accordance with rules and procedures established by such Committee.

"LIMITATIONS ON MEDICARE PAYMENT FOR CHARGES OF PROVIDERS OF SERVICES

"SEC. 1822. (a) Any provider of services as defined in section 1861(u), whose services are otherwise reimbursable under any program under this Act in which there is Federal financial participation on the basis of 'reasonable cost', shall not be entitled to a professional fee or dispensing charge or reasonable billing allowance as determined pursuant to this part.

"(b) A fee, charge, or billing allowance shall not be payable under this section with respect to any drug entity that (as determined in accordance with regulations) is furnished as an incident to a physician's professional service, and is of a kind commonly furnished in physicians' offices and commonly either rendered without charge or included in the physicians' bills.

"REASONABLE ALLOWANCE FOR ELIGIBLE DRUGS

"SEC. 1823. (a) For purposes of this part, the term 'reasonable allowance' when used in reference to an eligible drug (as defined in subsection (h) of this section) means the following:

"(1) When used with respect to a prescription legend drug entity, in a given dosage form and strentgh, such term means the lesser of—

"(A) an amount equal to the customary charge at which the participating pharmacy sells or offers such drug entity, in a given dosage form and strength, to the general public, or

"(B) the price determined by the Secretary, in accordance with subsection (b) of this section, plus the professional fee or dispensing charges determined in accordance with subsection (c) of this section.

"(2) When used with respect to insulin such term means the charge not in excess of the reasonable customary price at which the participating pharmacy offers or sells the product to the general public, plus a reasonable billing allowance.

"(b)(1) For purposes of establishing the reasonable allowance in accordance with subsection (a) the price shall be (A) in the case of a drug entity (in any given dosage form and strength) available from and sold by only one supplier, the price at which such drug entity is generally sold (to establishments dispensing drugs), and (B) in any case in which a drug entity (in any given dosage form and strength) is available and sold by more than one supplier, only each of the lower prices at which the products of such drug entity are generally sold (and such lower prices shall consist of only those prices of different suppliers sufficient to assure actual and adequate availability of the drug entity, in a given dosage form and strength, at such prices in a region).

"(2) If a particular drug entity (in a given dosage form and strength) in the Formulary is available from more than one supplier, and the product of such drug entity as available from one supplier possesses demonstrated distinct therapeutic advantages over other products of such drug entity as determined by the Committee on the basis of its scientific and professional appraisal of information available to it, including information and other evidence furnished to it by the supplier of such drug entity, then the reasonable allowance for such supplier's drug product shall be based upon the price at which it is generally sold to establishments dispensing drugs.

"(3) If the prescriber, in his handwritten order, has specifically designated a particular product of a drug entity (and dosage form and strength) included in the Formulary by its established name together with the name of the supplier of the final dosage form thereof, the reasonable allowance for such drug product shall be based upon the price at which it is generally sold to establishments dispensing drugs.

"(c)(1) For the purpose of establishing the reasonable allowance (in accordance with subsection (a)) a participating pharmacy, shall, in the form and manner prescribed by the Secretary, file with the Secretary, at such times as he shall specify, a statement of its professional fee or other dispensing charges.

"(2) A participating pharmacy, which has agreed with the Secretary to serve as a provider of services under this part, shall, except for subsection (a)(1)(A), be reimbursed, in addition to any price provided for in subsection (b), the amount of the fee or charges filed in paragraph (1), except that no fee or charges shall exceed the highest fee or charges filed by 75 per centum of participating pharmacies (with such pharmacies classified on the basis of (A) lesser dollar volume of prescriptions and (B) all others) in a census region which were customarily charged to the general public as of June 1, 1972. Such prevailing professional fees or dispensing charges may be modified by the Secretary in accordance with criteria and types of data comparable to those applicable to recognition of increases in reasonable charges for services under section 1842.

"(3) A participating pharmacy shall agree to certify that, whenever such pharmacy is required to submit its usual professional fee or dispensing charge for a prescription, such charge does not exceed its customary charge."

(h) Section 1861(t) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by inserting ", or as are approved by the Formulary Committee" after "for use in such hospital"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The term 'eligible drug' means a drug or biological which (A) can be self-administered, (B) requires a physician's prescription (except for insulin), (C) is prescribed when the individual requiring such drug is not an inpatient in a hospital or extended care facility, during a period of covered care, (D) is included by strength and dosage forms among the drugs and biologicals approved by the Formulary Committee, (E) is dispensed (except as provided by section 1814(j)), by a pharmacist from a participating pharmacy, and (F) is dispensed in quantities consistent with proper medical practice and reasonable professional discretion."

(i) Section 1861(u) of the Social Security Act (as amended by section 227(d)(1) of this Act) is further amended by striking out "or home health agency" and inserting in lieu thereof "home health agency, or pharmacy".

(j) Section 1861 of the Social Security Act is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"Participating Pharmacy

"(dd) The term 'participating pharmacy' means a pharmacy, or other establishment (including the outpatient department of a hospital) providing pharmaceutical services,

(1) which is licensed as such under the laws of the State (where such State requires such licensure) or which is otherwise lawfully providing pharmaceutical services in which such drug is provided or otherwise dispensed in accordance with this title, (2) which has agreed with the Secretary to act as a provider of services in accordance with the requirements of this section, and which complies with such other requirements as may be established by the Secretary in regulations to assure the proper economical, and efficient administration of this title, (3) which has agreed to submit, at such frequency and in such form as may be prescribed in regulations, bills for amounts payable under this title for eligible drugs furnished under part A of this title, and (4) which has agreed not to charge beneficiaries under this title any amounts in excess of those allowable under this title with respect to eligible drugs except as is provided under section 1813(a)(4), and except for so much of the charge for a prescription (in the case of a drug product prescribed by a physician, of a drug entity in a strength and dosage form included in the Formulary where the price at which such product is sold by the supplier thereof exceeds the reasonable allowance) as is in excess of the reasonable allowance established for such drug entity in accordance with section 1823."

(k)(1) the first sentence of section 1866(a)(2)(A) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "and (ii)" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "(ii) the amount of any copayment obligation and excess above the reasonable allowance consistent with section 1861(dd)(4) and (iii)".

(2) The second sentence of section 1866(a)(2)(A) of such Act is amended by striking out "clause (ii)" and inserting in lieu thereof "clause (iii)".

(l) The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to eligible drugs furnished on and after the first day of July 1973.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the committee proposed financing to cover the cost. This item would cost $700 million and it is financed within the bill. The amendment would require that the person eligible for these drugs would pay $1 and that the remainder of the cost for covered prescription drugs would be paid by the Government.

There are provisions in the bill to help control the cost of the amendment so that the cost would be reasonable.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that, notwithstanding the fact that the Senate has agreed to this amendment along with other committee amendments en bloc, this amendment may be voted on, reserving the right of Senators to further amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

So the committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Mr. Howard Marlowe of my staff be accorded the privilege of the floor during the consideration of this measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARTKE. I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk proceeded to read the amendment.

Mr. HARTKE. I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARTKE's amendment is as follows:

At the end of Title II of the bill, add the following new section:

CHRONIC RENAL DISEASE CONSIDERED TO CONSTITUTE DISABILITY

(a) Section 201 of the bill is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new proposals.

(e) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of the section, every individual who

"(1) has not attained the age of 65;

"(2) (A) is fully or currently insured (as such terms are defined in section 214 of this Act), or (B) is entitled to monthly insurance benefits under title II of this Act, or (C) is the spouse or dependent child (as defined in regulations) of an individual who is fully or currently insured, or (D) is the spouse or dependent child (as defined in regulations) of an individual entitled to monthly insurance benefits under title II of this Act; and

"(3) is medically determined to have chronic renal disease and who requires hemodialysis or renal transplantation for such disease shall be deemed to be disabled for purposes of coverage under Part A and B of Medicare subject to the deductible premium and co-payment provision of Title 18.

(f) Medicare eligibility on the basis of chronic kidney failure would begin with the sixth month after the month of onset of chronic kidney failure and would end with the 12th month after the month in which the person has a renal transplant.

(g) the Secretary is authorized to limit re-imbursement under Medicare for kidney transplant and dialysis to kidney disease treatment centers which meet such requirements as he may by regulation prescribe.

"(1) such requirements much include at least requirements for a minimal utilization rate for covered procedure and for a medical review board to screen the appropriateness of patients for the proposed treatment procedures.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that time on this amendment be limited to 30 minutes, to be equally divided between and controlled by the mover of the amendment and the manager of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, my amendment is cosponsored by myself, the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee (Mr. LONG), and the distinguished Senator from North Dakota (Mr. BURDICK). I ask unanimous consent that the name of Senator BURDICK be added as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, this amendment creates a program to aid those Americans suffering from chronic kidney disease.

Ours is a highly advanced society. We spend billions of dollars each year to go from home to work, from coast to coast from one continent to another, and from earth to space. Tens of billions of dollars are spent on weapons to kill, on cosmetics to make us look pleasing, and on appliances to make our lives easier. We do all of this, but when it comes to maintaining our health, we revert to the primitive values and attitudes of the distant past.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HARTKE. In what must be the most tragic irony of the 20th century, people are dying because they cannot get access to proper medical care. We have learned how to treat or to cure some of the diseases which have plagued mankind for centuries, yet these treatments are not available to most Americans because of their cost. An extension of this irony is that medical research has produced two proven life-saving therapies for terminal kidney patients but only a small percentage of these people now receive them.

Mr. President, more than 8,000 Americans will die this year from kidney disease this year because they cannot afford an artificial kidney machine or a kidney transplant. These will be needless deaths—deaths which should shock our conscience and shame our sensibilities.

What are we to say to these 8,000 people? How do we explain that the difference between life and death is a matter of dollars? How do we explain that those who are wealthy have a greater chance to enjoy a longer life than those who are not? These are difficult questions to ask; they are even more difficult to answer.

Mr. President, we can begin to set our national priorities straight by undertaking a national effort to bring kidney disease treatment within the reach of all those in need.

Each year, about 8 million Americans are afflicted with kidney diseases, the fifth leading cause of death in this country. Diseases of the kidneys and diseases affecting these organs rank among the major ailments which undermine or destroy good health. The insidious nature of kidney diseases is reflected in the fact that many people who harbor infectious organisms in their urinary tract will have no warning of their disease until kidney damage is beyond repair. Of the nearly 8 million new victims each year, about 2.8 million suffer from hypertensive renal cardiovascular diseases causing 35 percent of deaths from kidney disease; about 2 million suffer from infectious diseases causing 18 percent of the deaths; and about 3 million suffer other diseases such hypersensitivity, calculi, urinary abnormalities, and other ailments causing 26 percent of the deaths.

In terms of indirect costs of mortality—lost future income—kidney disease is the highest ranking killer, costing the country $1.5 billion annually. Additionally, more than $1 billion has to be spent each year for hospital and nursing home care, professional services, and drugs. Surprisingly, this amount exceeds the annual medical services costs for maternity care, or for all forms of cancer.

Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that the names of the Senator from Florida (Mr. CHILES) and the Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE) be added as cosponsors of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, the pending Hartke-Long-Burdick-Chiles-Dole amendment is an important breakthrough for patients suffering from chronic kidney disease. It states quite simply, that for purposes of the definition of disability under the Social Security Act, persons with chronic renal disease who are receiving dialysis or other life-saving treatment will be considered disabled.

The people who will benefit from this amendment are people who are unable to work at the previous occupation on a full-time basis and who are unable to bear the staggering cost of dialysis.

Approximately 55,000 Americans are now suffering from chronic renal disease. Twenty to 25,000 of these people are prime candidates for dialysis or other life-saving kidney treatment. Of these people, less than one-third have any insurance coverage of their own, and most of these people have coverage for no more than 2 years.

The cost of dialysis is $22 to $25,000 per year per patient in a hospital; $17 to $20,000 in a hospital-related dialysis center; and $19,000 in the first year of home dialysis with a subsequent cost of about $5,000 per year. There is substantial evidence available, however, indicating these costs will continue to go down each year with new advances in the technology of artificial kidney care.

Perhaps more exciting is the remarkable success that transplant surgeons are having with kidney transplants. It is estimated that over 2,000 transplant procedures will be performed this year in the United States. Of these, 85 percent will be considered successful. It is also important to point out that the 15 percent rejection rate means kidney mortality and not human mortality. These people are placed back on the artificial kidney machine to await another tissue-typing for another transplant. At the present time, the average costs of a transplant are $15,000. Again, we can look at the substantial reductions in the cost of transplantation. For example, Dr. Sam Kountz, a transplant surgeon at the University of California has reduced his costs to $8,000 per transplant or no more than any major surgical procedure.

Sixty percent of those on dialysis can return to work but require retraining and most of the remaining 40 percent need no retraining whatsoever. These are people who can be active and productive, but only if they have the lifesaving treatment they need so badly.

I might point out, also, that this amendment eliminates an inequity in the current law, because the present provisions says that if a kidney patient goes on the dialysis machine, he is no longer considered disabled. In other words, if he is disabled, he can receive the Medicare payments and the disability payments; but if he goes on the dialysis machine, he no longer can draw the payments. So he has to make the choice: He can receive treatment and lose his disability payments or he can get off the machine and die, and that is a rather fatal distinction.

Final cost estimates for this vital amendment are now being worked out. Preliminary estimates indicate an annual cost of approximately $250 million at the end of 4 years with the first full-year cost at about $75 million.

It is possible that these costs could be covered by the slight actuarial surplus in the hospital insurance trust fund and the slight reduction in costs now estimated for the regular medicare program for the disabled. However, if it is finally determined—and I think it can be, before these considerations of H.R. 1 are concluded—that a medicare tax increase of a small amount is necessary, it would be quite normal.

When the actuaries complete their work, and if they indicate the need for an increase in the medicare tax, I would be more than glad to propose a further amendment to that effect in the interest of responsible legislating.

The need for this amendment is urgent. We will do what is required to pay these costs.

That is what the pending amendment provides—a chance for thousands of Americans to remain alive and be productive. The $90 to $110 million that this amendment will cost each year is a minor cost to maintain life. And it is a minor cost when compared to the rewards which society will reap from people who can return to the workforce rather than wither and die.

I think this is one instance in which medical technology has given its blessing to a wonderful Nation, and what we need now is to implement this blessing, to make sure that the amendment is adopted.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "Fact and Fiction About the Artificial Kidney Machine," which I think will be informative not only to this body but also to those individuals who are now or potentially may be affected with kidney disease; a statement by the National Kidney Foundation, which points out that the Nation's fourth biggest killer—that is, kidney disease—is at the bottom of the list of those which receive funds at the present time from private sources; and an article published in the New York Times, written by Lawrence K. Altman, from Seattle.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FACT AND FICTION ABOUT THE ARTIFICIAL KIDNEY MACHINE

FICTION

Artificial kidney machines are scarce and hard to get

Contrary to popular belief, there is no shortage of artificial kidney machines. There is sufficient manufacturing capacity to produce any number which can be put to use.

Artificial kidney machines are very expensive

Artificial kidney machines cost no more than the average new or used car. The price range for different makes of commercially produced artificial kidney machines is from $1,800 to about $6,000. One of the "models" in common use costs less than $1,800.

FACT

Artificial kidney machines can now be rented Artificial kidney machines now are available for rental at a reasonable monthly charge.

FICTION

There is an artificial kidney machine being developed which is as small as a can of soup or a small radio

Despite the newspaper stories which appear from time to time about a "minikidney" or a portable kidney, no can-of-soup size or portable artificial kidney has been developed. People sometimes refer to a part of the machine as "the artificial kidney", but complete artificial kidney machines are about the size of a home automatic washing machine.

The artificial kidney functions precisely like a regular kidney

Despite the fact that the artificial kidney is a medical miracle, it still is only a gross substitute for the normal human kidney, taking over only the kidneys' excretory function. The normal kidney not only cleanses the blood and produces urine, but serves as a primary regulator of blood pressure, produces a variety of important hormones, and even returns some chemicals and other substances to the blood stream.

FACT

The artificial kidney machine cleanses the patient's blood

Using a surgically constructed connection of a vein and artery under the skin of the arm or leg or a teflon "U" shaped "shunt" connecting a vein and artery and coming out through the skin, the patient's blood stream is continuously channeled through the machine on one side of a special membrane. A dialyzing fluid on the other side of the membrane removes toxins by a process in which certain molecules pass through membranes in a predictable way.

FICTION

The artificial kidney machine is used only on patients whose kidneys have shut down permanently

Although this is the most publicized use of this miraculous machine, it is also used following surgery to assist the patient's own kidneys; in poison and overdose cases to hasten the excretion of a damaging toxic substance; in severe burn cases and in many other medical emergencies. The machine is used during such emergencies for one or several treatments. Patients who have such temporary renal shut-down usually regain normal kidney function when the causative problem is resolved. In the meantime, however, they need the artificial kidney to pull them through the renal shut-down crisis.

FACT

Patients on the artificial kidney machine are treated three times each week

Most patients on chronic dialysis treatment are treated three times each week and from four to twelve hours each time, depending upon the type of artificial kidney used. Some patients can be sustained on treatments once or twice a week, but most patients do better when treated at least three times a week.

Patients can sleep, read, watch television during treatment on the artificial kidney machine

The patient is usually in a relaxing chair or in bed during treatment. Many use this time to catch up on sleep. Some read or conduct other activities of a sedentary nature.

Treatments on the artificial kidney machine are complicated and sometimes uncomfortable

Treatment by means of this artificial organ is not simple. It involves sending the patient's entire blood supply through a machine over and over again for a number of hours, while maintaining proper blood pressure, blood temperature, and chemical balance. At times patients have uncomfortable side effects during treatment. The alternative, however, is death. A relaxed attitude on the part of the patient often means more comfortable and more effective treatment.

FICTION

Artificial kidney machines are delicate mechanisms which can get out or order easily

Artificial kidney machines in general use today are more rugged than an automobile and can take a lot of punishment. Some artificial kidney machines have been in use for more than 15 years. They require no more servicing than the usual home television set. Most manufacturers provide service for the artificial kidney machines they sell although some are better equipped and staffed for this purpose.

FACT

Patients can be treated by the artificial kidney machine in their own homes

About half of the patients on the artificial kidney are being treated in their own homes by their own relatives, following suitable training in a medically supervised dialysis center.

Less than 10 to 15% of the patients whose lives could be saved by the artificial kidney are receiving this treatment

A cumulative total of 40,000 to 60,000 patients are suitable candidates to be kept alive on the artificial kidney. Fewer than 7,000 are being given this treatment. "The rest are simply left to die," in the words of the late Congressman John Fogarty.

FICTION

With kidney transplants becoming more successful, there soon will be no need for artificial kidney machines

The growing success of kidney transplantation will increase the need for artificial kidney machines; to get the patients into good enough condition to withstand the surgery; to keep them alive while waiting for a donor kidney; to maintain life if the transplanted kidney should fail or be "rejected" after transplantation.

Artificial kidney patients are invalids, incapable of living a normal life

Although many patients go through periods when they are not well, especially during the early phase of their treatment, most can conduct generally normal lives once their condition becomes stabilized. They can get about, go to work, drive, travel, raise families, do housework, and pursue their usual activities.

FACT

There is a shortage of doctors and trained dialysis staff to treat patients with the artificial kidney machine

Physicians who are willing to devote their time exclusively to the treatment of patients who need the artificial kidney machine are still in short supply. The same applies to trained dialysis supporting staff. Hospitals are reluctant to commit precious space to this long-term patient treatment modality. Home dialysis and ambulatory dialysis centers outside of hospitals are relieving the pressure, and other novel solutions are being developed. Organizations such as the Kidney Foundation are active in helping to devise innovative solutions to the dialysis manpower problem.

FICTION

Treatment on the artificial kidney machine is more expensive than other medical treatment

Treatment on the artificial kidney machine varies in cost from $3,000 a year to $10,000 or $12,000, but can cost as much as $30,000 depending, in addition to other factors, upon whether the treatments are given at home, in a hospital or in an ambulatory dialysis center. At the lower end of the cost scale, this life-saving treatment is less expensive than psychiatric treatment, for example, or the cost of some surgical procedures. Financial help is available to many through medical insurance, state rehabilitation agencies, military dependents' insurance, VA, and other private or public sources.

FACT

The artificial kidney machine is now a recognized treatment method among doctors

Although there was controversy over this unusual treatment some years ago, it is now an accepted means of treating patients in chronic renal failure and in many acute situations where the kidneys need temporary help.

FICTION

Anyone can buy an artificial kidney machine

Artificial kidney machines require medical training and supervision. Only a doctor trained in dialysis is qualified to select the particular make of machine to match a patient's or an institution's needs and for this reason no equipment should be purchased for a patient or an institution without consulting a physician who is trained to evaluate the equipment needed. Responsible manufacturers consider these machines a "prescription item," and they are provided to patients only on doctors' orders.

FACT

Since many artificial kidney patients are being treated at home by their own relatives, life-threatening mistakes are possible

As with driving an automobile, operator errors are possible both during home dialysis and when treatment is performed in a hospital. Some of these errors can be serious, even fatal. However, most of the artificial kidney machines used in home dialysis are protected against most operator errors through a number of fail-safe automatic shutdown devices and light-buzzer alarms. These safeguards along with careful training, should prevent operator error.

FICTION

The highly publicized community patient selection committee is the best way to pick the patients who should be treated by the artificial kidney machines

Optimally, treatment facilities should be adequate so that this life-saving procedure can be available to everyone who could benefit. Under such circumstances there would be no need for a community committee to "play God" by deciding who shall live and who shall die. Selection would become a purely medical decision as it should be. Few Patient Selection Committes are still in use. Most artificial kidney patients are being selected these days on the basis of medical criteria.

Patients on the artificial kidney machine live only a short time

Clyde Shields, the first chronic dialysis patient in this country, lived for more than 13 years after he began treatment, and died recently of a heart attack, apparently unrelated to his artificial kidney treatment. As treatment methods improve, a greater and greater number of artificial kidney patients are living for a long time. Many hemodialysis patients living today have been under treatment for years. However, as with any serious ailment, some of these patients do succumb, especially during the initial stages of treatment and before the end of the first year.

FACT

Patients can be given artificial kidney treatment outside of hospitals

Less than half of the chronic dialysis patients are being treated in hospitals. The rest are being treated at home, with a family member trained to help, and in dialysis centers, most of which are associated with hospitals but are not located in the hospital. There are even mobile dialysis vans in several areas, bringing the treatment to the patient, but this is still somewhat experimental.

The artificial kidney machine does not cure kidney failure

The artificial kidney is not a cure for kidney failure. It substitutes for kidney function but has no curative value. Once a patient's kidneys have ceased to function permanently, they will not resume their function no matter how many artificial kidney treatments are given. (Remember that some patient's kidneys have stopped functioning only temporarily, and these patients may be given a few artificial kidney treatments to tide them over until their own kidneys start to function again.) Therefore, chronic artificial kidney patients must be given dialysis treatment for the rest of their lives, unless the patient receives a kidney transplant from a living or deceased human donor. However, only certain patients are suitable for such transplants, and donor kidneys are exceedingly rare. (For further information about kidney transplants, ask for "Fact and Fiction About Kidney Transplant.")

Everyone knows something about cancer and heart disease.

But few realize that 8 million people in this country have kidney disease. That it kills more people each year than automobile accidents. That we even have some of the answers, but that thousands will die just because we don't have enough money to use them.

And because so few people realize how serious kidney disease is, we're only number 19 on the list of contributions.

ARTIFICIAL KIDNEY USE POSES AWESOME QUESTIONS

(By Lawrence K. Altman)

SEATTLE, October 23.—Ernie Crowfeather, a bright, charming, part American Indian with a history of personal instability and brushes with the law, died recently at the age of 29 after refusing further life-supporting therapy.

By what was regarded as a suicide, Ernie averted the frightening possibility that his doctors would have had to purposely turn off for lack of funds and because of his irresponsibility, the artificial kidney that for two years had kept him alive on public money totaling $100,000.

His case was extreme, but he shared some of the problems of a growing number of Americans who are living on artificial kidneys and machines such as heart pacemakers and respirators. Others survive because technology has provided expensive long-term treatments such as those that prevent hemophiliacs from bleeding to death.

Yet because American society is now being forced to set priorities on its expenditures, the limited funds allocated for the saving of human lives have put many such decisions on a competitive basis. Expenditure of public funds to treat one adult on the artificial kidney must be balanced, for example, against their use to treat or prevent other diseases in several children. In the process, health experts say that many kidney patients are dying because they have no money to pay for expensive life-sustaining care.

For a host of reasons, the Seattle physicians who did the early work on artificial kidney treatment said that Ernie Crowfeather's case dramatically illustrated all the * * * scians encountered when they prescribed expensive modern medical techniques to prolong life.

During his two years on the artificial kidney. Ernie's case raised virtually every awesome question that could come up in the application of such costly sophisticated medical care for a person with a devastating illness—questions, basically, of who can be saved and who must die.

SOME OF THE QUESTIONS

Some of the questions doctors said, could arise in similar, less unusual instances. Yet many of the questions are not new. More than a decade after regular artificial kidney treatments were first begun here, an endless series of seemingly unanswerable questions still hound doctors and society.

With many more Americans dying every day from kidney disease than there are positions available for them in artificial kidney or transplant programs, how does one select those patients whose lives are to be spared? On what basis should doctors and society decide who gets the expensive treatments?

Precisely which members of society have the power and responsibility to decide who shall live and who shall die? What is the legal status of such decisions?

Once the decision is made, how can those kidney ravaged patients who are denied artificial kidney treatments or kidney transplants accept death gracefully?

Even for those selected as good candidates—medically and as responsible members of society—who pays?

Once therapy has begun, how can medical authorities reverse a decision to use a life-extending machine without fearing a potential charge of murder if the patient refuses to fully cooperate in his own treatment and if such refusal causes medical complications that raise costs to astronomical levels?

If therapy must be stopped because a patient's funds have been depleted, who must face the horrendous task of turning the machine off? What legal consequences might result for that individual or group of people?

Should society continue to support expensive life sustaining devices for patients who are convicted of criminal acts? If not whose responsibility is it to make the decision to stop treatment?

PROBLEMS DEVELOPED

As Ernie's case unfolded, each of these questions led to a dilemma.

Ernie Crowfeather, half-Sioux, half-Caucasian, was said to be a charmer, affable, a great lover and a thief whose criminal record had begun long before his kidneys failed. None of his friends, relatives and physicians interviewed since his death said they knew why Ernie robbed, passed bad checks and experimented with drugs like LSD.

One of his psychiatrists described Ernie as a typical sociopath, so inadequately prepared to handle the world on his own that he arranged to be admitted to prisons and reformatories as places of shelter and protection.

In 1969, because Ernie had developed acute kidney failure, he entered the University of Washington Hospital, the teaching institution of the state-supported medical school for artificial kidney treatment. The artificial kidney cleansed his body of the toxic chemicals that are normally eliminated in the urine.

KNEW LITTLE OF BACKGROUND

Between treatments, his doctors disconnected the artificial kidney from a tube in his body so he could leave the hospital to join his friends in the world that he said had rejected him because of his Indian background—a heritage about which his family said he knew little.

His doctors eventually discovered that he had a mysterious, incurable kidney disease, the complications of which made it extremely difficult to treat him with an artificial kidney. With Ernie's permission he was given a kidney transplant—a kidney was removed from a dead person and surgically placed in his body—but within a year the body had rejected the transplanted organ, probably because he had not taken his medicines properly.

Once again, Ernie began thrice-weekly treatments on the artificial kidney, this time at home. But his personality could not cope with the routine that is needed to live on the artificial kidney, it was said, and the machine that they placed in his home had to be removed despite many demonstrations of its proper us. Instead, Ernie was again treated in a hospital, which is much more expensive than home therapy.

HOME TREATMENT FAVORED

Many kidney experts favor home treatment because the manpower and physical facilities, not the machines, are what make artificial kidney therapy expensive. It costs up to $36,000 a year for thrice weekly treatments in profit-making hospitals and kidney centers and $21,000 in the non-profit Northwest Kidney Center here.

Researchers have had great success in reducing the costs of artificial kidney therapy by treating the patient in his home rather than the hospital. Kidney experts here say that after an investment of $10,000 to buy the machine and train the patient, the cost averages $3,500 a year to treat him at home where the patient and his family provide the manpower.

Nevertheless, experts like Dr. Belding H. Scribner say that many patients with kidney disease who could be saved are dying for lack of treatment. Each year 7,000 Americans, many in the prime of their lives, reach the point where their kidney disease will kill them without a transplant or the artificial kidney. If all Americans who needed it got such therapy, Dr. Scribner said the total would eventually stabilize at 50,000 people.

FIFTEEN PERCENT GET THERAPY

Yet, Dr. Scribner said that just 6,700 Americans, 14 per cent of this total, are living today on transplants or artificial kidneys.

"We're simply not coming close to meeting the need," Dr. Scribner said.

Accordingly, Dr. Scribner said that inertia existed among physicians who know chances are one in seven that their patient can get such expensive therapy; the treatment can wipe out the savings of any middle-class American family.

"When chances are so slim, physicians would rather not raise false hopes for the patient and his family," Dr. Scribner said, and went on:

"Expensive treatments like this [artificial kidney] aren't going to work if to be eligible for state aid you have to sell your house and give up your job. The payment issue has caused some of us to redefine the term medical indigency."

Dr. Scribner winced as he pointed out that in some states patients have refused treatment, thereby committing suicide, rather than become paupers in order to qualify for public financial assistance. He said that Washington and Maryland had redefined medical indigency to avoid such a possibility.

COMMITTEE APPROACHED

Ernie Crowfeather, unemployed and without insurance, appealed to the anonymous committee at the Northwest Kidney Center here that has the legal power to decide who shall get the funds that keep Washington's kidney disease patients alive. Center officials said that they assure lifetime support for 90 per cent of the applicants each year.

However, because of Ernie's lack of cooperation his doctor said he had developed an unending series of medical complications that made artificial kidney treatments so costly—about eight times that of the average patient. Accordingly, center officials said that his support would have deprived too many others of a chance at the therapy.

"Ernie Crowfeather would be an unsuccessful dialysis [artificial kidney] patient due to medical and emotional instability. Medical, psychiatric and social worker opinions reveal little hope for successful reform and indicate a high probable inability to manage home dialysis," the committee said in rejecting his application for a second time.

After the kidney center's rejection, people who had never met Ernie previously, but who had learned about his case from the hospital staff, went outside the system and began an emergency life-and-death appeal to the public for funds.

SOCIAL WORKER COMMENTS

"I just couldn't understand how the doctors were going to pull the plug on this character and let him go, no matter who he was," said Peter Schnurman, a social worker for a philantropic organization here. So he and Mrs. Elizabeth Morris of the Indian Center helped to start a drive to raise $20,000 beyond the $80,000 already spent to keep Ernie alive. Less than a year later, knowing the $20,000 was gone and telling friends that he had muffed his chance, Ernie disappeared from the hospital for the last time.

While he stayed away, hospital physicians and administrators held several meetings, never able to make firm decisions about their course of action in the event that he returned.

Should they continue to treat Ernie on the artificial kidney and at whose expense, they asked each other. If not, which doctor would stop these treatments and on what grounds?

The decisions never had to be made. Ernie stayed away until he died two weeks later in Ellensburg, a town about 100 miles from Seattle where no artifical kidney exists.

Some doctors said privately that if Ernie had come back they would have stopped the treatment, not only because he had been uncooperative but also because he had said his life was miserable.

Hospital administrators said they would not have permitted such a decision to have been made without approval from the state's higher officials. Everyone said they feared a court challenge because there apparently are no legal precedents for doctors stopping life-sustaining therapy in the case of a physically fit ambulatory patient.

IS PROTECTION POSSIBLE?

If physicians are forced to turn off the machine on an uncooperative active patient, could state legislatures or courts protect the doctors and hospital officials by backing up their decisions, provided that they had been thoroughly discussed with family members beforehand?

Some physicians say the decision is so complex that society, not just doctors, must decide. Other doctors say they fear a charge of murder if they stop therapy on a patient like Ernie.

If society considers it suicide for a patient like Ernie to die as he did by refusing life-supporting therapy, then, by the same logic, the doctors say, it must be murder for physicians to deliberately turn off these machines.

As Dr. Scribner concluded:

"You can't call it suicide on one hand and not call it murder on the other—you can't have it both ways. That's a new issue of fundamental importance that these magnificent medical advances have raised and that society must now face squarely."

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARTKE. I yield to the distinguished Senator from Kansas, who is a cosponsor of the amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I say to the Senator from Indiana that I am pleased to join in sponsoring this amendment. It deals with a subject in which the Senator from Kansas has a rather personal interest. He has a somewhat higher awareness than perhaps some people of the importance of kidney disease and kidney injuries, because I have lived quite well for the past 25 years with only one. I understand quite clearly the importance of having at least one in good working order and have a rather close-at-hand appreciation for the dangers and burdens of kidney disease and injury.

As the Senator from Indiana has pointed out the occurrence of major kidney disease or injury can inflict tremendous medical and financial burdens on individuals and their families. These burdens are frequently reduced to basic life and death questions.

The problems know no barriers of race, geography, age, or sex. They are widespread, and the experiences of many of my Kansas constituents have clearly demonstrated the need for concentrated action to be taken to meet these needs. And as the Senator has pointed out quite clearly, there is a need.

I think that the one reservation—that could be raised to the amendment is in approaching some of these catastrophic illnesses on a piecemeal basis rather than on a broad basis. But I firmly believe that the Senator from Indiana's amendment is at least a step in the direction that will bring about some much needed progress.

I support the amendment and am pleased to join the Senator as a cosponsor.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, I am delighted to have the support of the distinguished Senator from Kansas. I did not know of the personal interest he had. For any family who has had this problem, it is one which is very touching.

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARTKE. I yield.

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. President, I commend the Senator from Indiana and the Senator from Kansas for sponsoring this amendment.

We in the Northwest are very proud that the first kidney machine was put together at the University of Washington Medical School, under the leadership of Dr. Belding Scribner.

As the able Senator from Indiana has pointed out, the current cost is roughly $22,000 per year per patient. The cost initially was more than $30,000 per year per patient. They are now lowering the cost. There is now a home kidney machine, the cost of which has been reduced to under $10,000 per year.

I think it is a great tragedy, in a nation as affluent as ours, that we have to consciously make a decision all over America as to the people who will live and the people who will die. We had a committee in Seattle, when the first series of kidney machines were put in operation, who had to pass judgment on who would live and who would die. I believe we can do better than that. We have patients who have been on the machine for more than 10 years and are leading normal lives.

So I would hope that we would make an effort here, at least a beginning, to approve the amendment, so that we can do better than we have done heretofore.

Mr. HARTKE. I thank the distinguished Senator from Washington.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARTKE. I yield.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I am familiar with what my colleague has said. As a matter of fact, at one time they wanted me to be on the committee that would dip into the fishbowl to pick out the names. I said, "No, thank you"; I did not want it.

We do have in the HEW bill which is now before the Senate a substantial increase in funds, not only for transplant but also for kidney machines. If a transplant does not work—they have been fairly successful—there is no place for the fellow to go after that but on a machine. That adds to the problem, because more and more transplants are being undertaken. The percentage is getting better and better.

So the Senator's amendment would complement what we are doing in the HEW bill to increase the availability.

My colleague from Washington mentioned that from the beginning, when Dr. Scribner put together the first machine, it cost a great deal of money, but we are reducing the cost. The testimony was that they are hopeful of getting the cost of home treatments down to $5,000 or $6,000 a year. The problem has been—and the Senator's amendment will be helpful—not so much in getting the cost of the machines down, which they are doing by engineering and medical research, but in getting trained people to know how to use the machines on those who need them. A person cannot do it by himself.

So in the HEW bill we are encouraging, in the rehabilitation services and in training, the teaching of not only medical auxiliaries that will know how to do it but even a brighter spot on the horizon in this terrible matter before us—say a man needs a kidney treatment, his wife can now go to one of the places in the hospital, like a nursing place, and find out how to do it, or vice versa. That is being done.

I compliment the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JACKSON). The time of the Senator from Indiana has expired.

The Senator from Louisiana has 15 minutes.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to extend the colloquy for another 5 minutes.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, does that mean 5 minutes to each side?

Mr. HARTKE. To each side, yes.

All I want is to permit other Senators to make a statement. I have none.

Mr. BENNETT. I will be happy to yield 5 minutes of my time, if that will be satisfactory.

Mr. HARTKE. So far as I know, it will be. I just do not wish to shut off any other Senator from making a statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair states that the distinguished Senator from Florida (Mr. CHILES) wishes to make a statement.

Mr. BENNETT. I have control of the time in opposition, and I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Indiana (Mr. HARTKE) so that he may discuss this matter with the Senator from Florida.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. HARTKE. I yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida is recognized.

Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Indiana and the Senator from Utah for yielding me this time. I associate myself with the remarks made by the distinguished Senator from Indiana, the Senator from Kansas, and the two Senators from Washington. I am delighted to be a cosponsor of the amendment.

I happen to be honorary chairman of the Florida Kidney Foundation, Inc., in the State of Florida for this year. In that connection, I have some knowledge of what the Senator is working on. Certainly this is going to be a far-reaching amendment. As the Senator from Washington pointed out, in this country with so much affluence, to think there are people who will die this year merely because we do not have enough of these machines and do not have enough dollars, so that we do have to make the choice of who will live and who will die, when we already know we have a good treatment that can succeed and keep these people alive, while we are working out other improvements in transplants, finding cures, and everything else necessary. This should not happen in this country. But we have come a long way.

I want to ask the Senator, as I listened to his explanation and his point about disability, how would that affect a child? How would that affect someone under the age of 21?

Mr. HARTKE. The amendment would provide for extension of this kind of treatment not only for the wife but also for the children. It provides for complete coverage in line with the approach of the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, Mr. LONG, regarding catastrophic illnesses

Mr. CHILES. This amendment, then, would consider a child as being disabled and eligible for treatment regardless of the fact that the father was working, because of the tremendous expense involved.

Mr. HARTKE. That is exactly right, and this explains the necessity for this amendment being drawn in this fashion, rather than in some other fashion.

Mr. CHILES. I am delighted to hear that the Senator's amendment provides complete coverage.

Mr. HARTKE. I want to thank the Senator and make it clear that at this time there is no difficult problem as to the availability of the machines, nor as to the availability of sufficient treatment as indicated by the Senator from Washington. There is one machine that is 13 years old, and still alive is one person of that original group who went on that first machine. So, for those who want to know how long it will prolong life, all I can say is that we do not yet know its full potential.

In this field, the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG) has been a long-time advocate dealing with the problems of catastrophic illnesses. This is one area for an effective means and an effective method. It certainly is not a cure-all, nor is it a solution for all of catastrophic illnesses, or the cases on which he has devoted so much of his time, but it is one on which we can have some unanimity of understanding as to the approach to a solution which will be good for everyone.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I may require.

I am under no illusions. When yesterday the Senate voted $2.5 billion for eyeglasses, hearing aids, and foot massages, there is no question about the fact that the Senate is about to vote another $100 million to $250 million for kidney dialysis and transplantation.

At risk of branding myself as one who is opposed to this program and, therefore, one who wants to see people die—which obviously I do not—there are one or two observations that must be made before the inevitable vote on this amendment is taken.

Yesterday and today the Senate added more than $5 billion to the cost of social security. This amount is small, estimated variously as between $100 million and $250 million. What is going on reminds me of a television ad I see every once in a while, of a very happy housewife who takes you to her cupboard and opens it up and says, "Christmas in September; isn't it a wonderful idea? I can sit at home and have all these good things brought to me. I do not have to go out and fight the shoppers in December."

Well, Mr. President, obviously, we are involved here in a new "Christmas in September" program. We may well be on the way to loading down the bill to the point where, A, it will die of its own weight in the Senate or, B, it will die of its own weight in the process of trying to get a conference.

If we are going to use this as a vehicle to bring out every worthy beneficial program and pile it onto this bill, I am not sure that the bill will be able to carry it. The point has already been made and I am sure will be made again, that the whole issue of a national program for health insurance lies ahead of us. The chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House has indicated that this will be one of his major programs for next year. The President had a program which will undoubtedly be resurrected next year. Other Members of the Senate have programs.

This amendment represents a move to pick out one particular phase of health care and bring it in ahead of the others and write it into law. There are a lot of other diseases that people are subject to which are as serious as the kidney problem. We cannot add them to this particular bill without weighing it down to the point where it cannot carry it.

I think that a more reasonable way to handle this amendment would have been to delay action until it can become a part of a broader health insurance bill.

I recognize that the chairman of the committee has been anxious to cover this whole field of catastrophic illness, but realizing the weight that such coverage would put on the bill he has refrained from offering that amendment to this particular bill, being willing to let it be carried over until we got onto the whole health care issue the next time Congress meets.

As I have said, I have no illusions as to what the Senate will do with this amendment. But, I shall vote against it, first, because I believe this is not the proper vehicle to which it should be attached and, second, because I want to make a slight protest against adding this additional straw to the financial burden that will break the back of the social security system.

As I say, I know what will happen to it.

Mr. President, I am prepared to yield back—I will be happy to yield some time now to the chairman.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the amendment which I am sponsoring along with Senator HARTKE would cover under medicare those persons who suffer from chronic renal disease and who need kidney dialysis or transplantation. As Senators know, H.R. 1 already contains a provision which covers the disabled under medicare. This amendment is drafted as an addition to that section. Although I am sure that most Senators would consider those who need kidney dialysis to be disabled, many of them are able to get back to work so that they cannot meet the specific social security disability requirements. This amendment would deem them disabled for medicare purposes only regardless of their work status. Additionally the amendment would cover all people fully or currently insured under social security and their spouses and dependents rather than only covering insured workers.

The medicare coverage would become available to those with chronic kidney disease 6 months after the onset of their condition. This guarantees that the disease is chronic and also assures an appropriate mesh with private insurance coverage.

Mr. President, the next Congress will tackle health insurance issues, and I am sure during that debate we will deal with health insurance problems in general, and I hope that specifically we will deal with the problem of insuring against catastrophic illness.

I am cosponsoring this proposal at this time because these very unfortunate citizens with chronic renal failure cannot wait for Congress to debate these broader issues. They need help—it is critical—and that help must come now as many of them, without assistance, simply will not be alive for another 2 years.

Mr. President, I still hope that the Congress will be able to pass at some point a complete catastrophic health insurance proposal, but I think that this particular problem must be dealt with now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is all time yielded back?

Mr. LONG. I yield back my time.

Mr. BENNETT. May I withhold my times, because I did withhold it for the chairman. We have equally serious problems which we have not begun to attack, which are not so striking as the kidney problem. There is the problem of the hemophiliacs, who must constantly receive blood transfusions if they are to remain alive. Nobody is worried about them in this bill.

This demonstrates that we are picking out one particular sector of the whole health care problem, and because it is dramatic, we are trying to push it ahead of everything else. We can only handle so much. We can only finance so much.

I hope—but I have no illusions, as to whether or not the Senate will reject this amendment—the Senate rejects the amendment.

Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time having been yielded back, the question is on agreeing to the Hartke-Long amendment. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

So the Hartke-Long amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BURDICK. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I believe it would be helpful if the Senate would vote on the committee amendment that appears beginning on line 6, page 954 through line 18, page 963. Although this amendment has already been agreed to when the committee amendments were adopted en bloc, it would be well in conferring with the House on this matter in difference that we be able to state the Senate's position on this particular item.

I ask unanimous consent that notwithstanding the fact that this amendment has been agreed to en bloc along with others, that this amendment be subject to a vote of the Senate, and that it remain subject to amendment if it is agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered; and, without objection, the amendment will be printed in the RECORD.

The amendment is as follows:

"(2) LIMITATION.—The amount of the payment to which an eligible individual is entitled for any calendar year under paragraph (1) shall be reduced by one-fourth of the amount by which his income, or, if he is married (as determined under section 143), the total of his income and his spouse's income for the calendar year exceeds $4,000. For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'income' means all income from whatever source derived, other than payments provided by this chapter, determined without regard to subtitle A (relating to income taxes).

"(c) ADVANCE PAYMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Upon application therefor made after the close of any of the first three quarters of any calendar year, the Secretary or his delegate shall pay to an eligible individual an advance payment on account of the annual payment to which he reasonably expects to be entitled under subsection (a) for that year. The amount of any advance payment to which an eligible individual is entitled at the close of any calendar quarter shall be equal to—

"(A) the annual payment to which the eligible individual would be entitled with respect to the wages and compensation described in subsection (b)(1) received by him on or before the close of the most recent quarter for which application is made, taking into account the wages, compensation, and other income received and reasonably expected to be received during the calendar year, reduced by

"(2) MINIMUM ADVANCE PAYMENT.—No advance payment shall be made under this subsection for any amount less than $30.

"(3) DETERMINATION OF STATUS.—For purposes of this subsection, the determination of whether an eligible individual is married shall be made as of the close of the calendar quarter or quarters for which an application for payment has been filed by that individual.

"(4) ANNUAL STATEMENT.—Any individual who receives an advance payment under this subsection for any calendar year shall file, after the close of that year, a statement with the Secretary or his delegate setting forth the amounts he has received as advance payments under this subsection during that year, the amount of income he and his spouse, if any, have received during that year, and such other information as the Secretary or his delegate may require and in such form and at such time as he may require.

"(d) CREDIT IN LIEU OF PAYMENT.—An eligible individual may elect for any taxable year to take the amount of any payment to which he is entitled under this chapter as a credit against tax under section 42. The election shall be filed at such time and in such form as the Secretary or his delegate may prescribe.

"SEC. 10002. RECOVERY OF OVERPAYMENTS; PENALTIES.

"(a) RECOVERY OF OVERPAYMENTS.—If the Secretary or his delegate determines that any part of any amount paid to an individual for any year under this chapter was in excess of the amount to which that individual was entitled under this chapter for that year, the Secretary or his delegate shall notify that individual of the excess payment and may—

"(1) withhold, from any amounts which that individual is entitled to receive under this chapter in any subsequent year, amounts totaling not more than the amount of that excess;

"(2) treat the amount of that excess as if it were a deficiency under subchapter B of chapter 63 of subtitle F and utilize the procedures available to him under that subtitle to collect that amount;

"(3) enter into an agreement with that individual for the repayment of that amount; or

"(4) take such other action as may be necessary to recover that amount.

"(b) PENALTIES.—Each application form and any other document required to be filed under this chapter shall contain a written declaration that it is made under penalty of perjury. The provisions of chapter 75 (relating to crimes, other offenses, and forfeitures) shall apply to such forms and documents.

"SEC. 10003. COOPERATION OF OTHER GOVERNMENT AGENCIES.

"The Secretary or his delegate is authorized to obtain from any agency or department of the United States Government or of any State or political subdivision thereof such information with respect to any individual applying for or receiving benefits under this chapter, or any individual whose income is taken into consideration in determining benefits payable to an eligible individual under this chapter, as may be necessary for the proper administration of this chapter. Each agency and department of the United States Government is authorized and directed to furnish to the Secretary or his delegate such information upon request.

"SEC. 10004. APPLICATIONS; REGULATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary or his delegate shall develop simple and expedient application forms and procedures for use by eligible individuals who wish to obtain the benefits of this chapter, arrange for distributing such forms and making them easily available to eligible individuals, and prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this chapter.

"(b) TIME FOR FILING APPLICATIONS FOR PAYMENT.—No annual payment may be made to an eligible individual for a calendar year unless the application for that payment is filed on or before the last day of the calendar quarter following the close of that year. No advance payment may be made to an eligible individual for any calendar quarter or quarters unless the application for that payment is filed on or before the last day of the calendar quarter following the close of the quarter or quarters for which application is filed. For purposes of section 42, failure to file an application for an annual payment within the time prescribed by this subsection shall not affect an eligible individual's entitlement to such payment.

"SEC. 10005. DEFINITION OF ELIGIBLE INDIVIDUAL.

"For the purpose of this chapter, 'eligible individual' means an individual—

"(1) who is physically present in the United States;

"(2) whose wages are subject to tax under chapter 21 or 22 (relating to the Federal Insurance Contributions Act and the Railroad Retirement Tax Act, respectively) or who receives compensation from the Work Administration for services performed in guaranteed employment on behalf of an employer under a contract entered into with the Work Administration under section 2052(e) of the Social Security Act; and

Effective Date

(d) The amendments made by this section shall take effect on January 1, 1973, and shall apply with respect to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1972.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, this provision in the bill provides, what we on the committee have termed a work bonus for low-income workers. This would be of major assistance to workers with a low income.

Mr. President, the simplest way to explain it is to say that as far as the working man is concerned it means that those who are making $4,000 or less, and have children to support will, in effect, have returned to them the money that represents the social security tax they have paid, as well as most of the social security tax paid on their behalf by the employer.

It would provide a payment based on 10 percent of the earnings of those workers. The purpose here is to prevent the social security tax from taking away from the poor and low-income earners the money they need for support of their families.

Mr. President, it would prevent the taxing of people onto the welfare rolls. As Senators know, the social security tax has no exemptions, so even a person making less than the minimum wage is paying a social security tax. We did not want to in any way prejudice the social security funds, so, it was our view that social security taxes should continue to be collected and paid into the fund; however, that there should be paid from general funds an amount equal to 10 percent of the worker's earnings up to $4,000.

The social security tax under the bill will go to 12 percent; 10 percent will in effect be refunded to the worker. This is proceeding on the theory that it is far better to provide the working man some tax relief than it is to provide him with welfare payments.

It is far more dignified and the benefits are entirely work-related. Some of these people might qualify for welfare; others would not. We estimate that about 5 million family heads plus their families would be benefited by this provision.

If a person with children to support were making $4,000, this provision would mean he would get a tax refund of $400 a year, or $100 every quarter. It phases out on a 1 for 4 ratio up to the figure of $5,600. If, for example, a person were making $4,800 a year, he would have an annual refund of $200. If a person were making $4,400 a year, he would have an annual refund of $300.

There appears on page 94 of the committee report a chart, which I ask unanimous consent to put in the RECORD at this point, which indicates how a husband and wife would benefit from this provision.

There being no objection, the tabulation was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Annual income of husband and wife (assuming it is all taxed under social security)

	Work bonus
$2,000	$200
3,000	300
4,000	400
5,600	0

Mr. LONG. For example, if they were earning $2,000, they would receive a work bonus of $200. If they were earning $3,000, they would receive a work bonus of $300. If they were earning $4,000, they would receive a work bonus of $400. It would phase out so that at $5,000 they would receive a $150 work bonus, and at $5,600 they would receive zero.

The entire purpose of this provision is to help low-income working people. This is a provision the committee felt would help them by in effect lifting from their backs the taxes they pay.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. ALLEN. Does that take into account the fact that the employer pays half the social security tax, and if the employee got the full amount of the social security tax back, would he not be getting considerably more than had been charged to him?

Mr. LONG. This provision proceeds on the theory that even the employer's portion of the tax was generated by the efforts of the working man. The employer would have to put up the social security tax in any event.

In an effort to be as helpful as we can to the working man, we recognize the fact that his effort is generating not only his part of the tax but also is making possible the employer's contribution. The employee needs that money now, so we would pay it for him and his wife, keeping in mind that this is one way we can help the poor in a work-related way and prevent them from having to go on welfare.

Mr. ALLEN. As the Senator knows, it is not only the employees who are groaning against ever-increasing social security taxes; it is also the employer, and especially the small employer, the small businessman, the employer who has only a few employees. He might feel that he is getting left out in this picture in that the refund would go to the employee only.

Mr. LONG. Senator, this provision is based on this theory that a tax cut would be far better than putting that family on welfare.

Mr. ALLEN. I am going to support the Senator's amendment.

Mr. LONG. We are satisfied that we can justify what amounts to a tax cut. As far as the tax that the employer is supposed to pay is concerned, in most cases the employee is not paying any 6 percent social security tax; he is paying 12 percent. The reason for that is that, in the last analysis, it is the employee who is paying on behalf of the employer and the employee, because the employee absorbs that tax every time he buys something. When his wife buys food at the grocery store, when she buys clothes for the family, everything she buys has a social security tax cranked into it as a part of the cost of doing business. So, in the last analysis, it is more the consumer than it is the employer who is burdened with the social security tax, because it is passed onto the ultimate consumer of the product as a cost of doing business.

To find a dignified way to provide help to a low-income working person, whereby the more he works the more he gets, and at the same time to phase it out in such a way as not to decrease the incentive to work, we on the committee came up with this work bonus proposal. This way will benefit many working poor, many of whom are not on public welfare, and many of whom we hope will not be. We hope that this kind of tax relief would do much to help low-income working persons.

As I have said, it is estimated that this provision would help 5 million heads of families.

Mr. ALLEN. What about the self-employed? How would they figure into it?

Mr. LONG. This provision does not cover the self-employed. The reason for that is that coverage of the self-employed involves problems. We struggled with the question of bringing the self-employed into it, and the complications to which that led were more than we could supply answers for at the time. If this provision works—and the committee feels it will work—we hope we will find a way to meet the technical difficulties in extending the provision to the self-employed.

Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. CHILES. As I understand the purpose of this provision, it is to allow some help to be given to the working poor in a way which would not be giving them a welfare check. It would not be taking away the worker's pride. It would put him in a position where he would not feel he has to be a recipient of welfare. This proposal would not be like the present family assistance program, would it, where we would take somebody not now on welfare, who is employed, but give him a monthly check and put him on the welfare rolls? This would be a way of supplementing his earnings and getting around that; would it not?

Mr. LONG. That is the way we view it. We conceived this proposal initially as, in effect, relieving low-income working persons from the social security tax, but then when we thought in terms of the extent to which we might be able to help them, it seemed to us we could justify completely this kind of help, not only because it amounted to a refund of a tax which had been paid by the employee himself, but because the tax had been paid by the employer on the employee's behalf, on the theory that that, too, was something that was generated by his work efforts.

We felt we would be justified in having him get a refund of more than 5 percent, or 6 percent when the tax goes to 6 percent; that we could justify giving 10 percent to the working poor, which corresponds largely to a refund to the workingman on the tax generated by his work efforts. It still would permit enough of the tax of the employer and employee not to be refunded that he would be able to feel that some of his tax supported money was flowing back to him from the contribution made by him.

One can look at this as he wants to. He can look at it as a work subsidy for those making low wages. He can look at it as a tax refund. We decided to call it a work bonus, because, whatever one calls it, it results from tax money collected as a result of the man's working.

Mr. CHILES. The touchstone of our tax system was that we were going to tax those with the ability to pay. One of the faults of the social security system is that continually we really place the same burden, or a greater burden, on those least able to pay, because if we started with a system in which one paid only 4 percent, and only on the first $3,600, it was going on the person who was earning his pay by the strength of his arm and the sweat of his brow, and yet there were always some welfare features in the bill which should have been taken care of by general revenues. This is recognizing that we should base it on the ability to pay, to help that man to help himself, and not take his pride away from him, not put him into the class where he has got to feel like he is taking a dole.

I think the amendment is an excellent amendment. As the chairman knows, I appeared before his committee with an amendment something like this, and wanted to bring it up on this bill, in which I was going to provide that until he reaches the point where he is paying Federal income tax, he will not pay any social security tax; because why should we charge him social security on the first dollar he makes, and yet give him a refund of his income tax up to the point that he reaches $3,600, depending on how many dependents he has or whatever it is? Here we are going to charge a man on the first dollar he earns and every dollar after that, because he is in that bracket.

So I think the chairman has a good amendment here, and I am delighted with the amendment, because I think it is better than the guaranteed wage, family assistance, or whatever it is, where we would take away a man's pride; because one thing I found out when I campaigned was that the first thing anyone told me, if he was not on welfare, whether he was white, red, black, or anything, was, "I don't get one of those Government checks." He had his pride.

I am talking about a man working on the road, digging a ditch, farming, a shade-tree mechanic, or anything else; the first thing he would tell me was, "I don't get that Government check; I ain't on that dole."

To put such a man on Government assistance has always shattered me. Yet how could we help him? This tax credit, giving him some basis of helping himself without taking away his pride, I think, is the best way to do it, and I am delighted that the committee has proposed this amendment.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, we not only agreed with the Senator's amendment, we went him one better. He wanted to take the social security tax off the poor. We have proposed to do that, not just as to the part collected from him, but also the part collected from the employer on his behalf, almost all of it. We felt there should be some small amount of tax collected on his behalf to flow into the social security fund, but this 10 percent can be justified; and, frankly, as the one who proposed this matter in committee, the argument the Senator from Florida made and the experiences he had in talking to people on the highways of Florida, which he related to me, about their plight and their desire not to be on welfare but to work to support their families, played a major part in the fact that this matter is not before the Senate.

Just as a matter of simple fact, I have been dismayed to see some of the studies indicating that the poor in this Nation are paying altogether more taxes than they should. I suspect that some of those studies are misleading, because they fail to take into account what we refer to as the transfer payments, that is, the welfare payments and social security payments being paid to the poor which makes it possible for them to have revenue with which to pay taxes. But in any event, even when you take all that into consideration, the poor are still paying too much in the way of taxes.

Insofar as we can do something about it at the Federal level, we think that this just about does the job. Maybe we can find some way to help the States to relieve their poor from some of the regressive taxes that exist in the State governments which burden the poor. That is a different problem, and that is something we will have to struggle with when we have a tax reform bill next year or the year after. But insofar as the tax system under social security involves a tax that tends to tax away from the working poor the money they need to provide for their families, this would relieve them of that burden.

Mr. CHILES. I certainly agree with the chairman. As I said before, I think sometimes when we use these terms we almost use a misnomer in terms when we talk about the working poor. Most of the people out there that I found who were working did not consider themselves poor. If they were working they did not consider themselves poor, and did not even like to be referred to as poor. They felt that they were paying a heavier burden, and knew they were paying a heavier burden, than the guy getting an oil depletion allowance or a deferred compensation allowance, or the guy who had a charitable foundation helping him out, or the person with all kinds of deductions that way. They knew they were paying more than their share, but they did not consider themselves poor, because they were working; and I think we need to do everything we can to maintain in them that feeling of pride.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CANNON). The Senator will state it.

Mr. HARTKE. As I understand it, this amendment was agreed to previously when the committee amendments were agreed to en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HARTKE. Under the circumstances, however, in such a situation, is it not true that the committee amendments as agreed to en bloc were subject to further amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HARTKE. As I understand it, when the chairman of the committee called up this amendment, notwithstanding the fact that it had previously been agreed to, there was reserved the right to offer further amendments to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HARTKE. Yes. However, I would like to make this further parliamentary inquiry: If the amendment is adopted, does that preclude further consideration of any other amendment dealing with this subject matter under H.R. 1?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No, it does not.

Mr. HARTKE. All I want to know is, is it necessary, in order to preserve the rights of a Senator at this time on this subject matter, that an amendment would have to be introduced to this amendment, or an amendment in the nature of a substitute addressed to this amendment, or are such rights preserved during the further consideration of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All rights are preserved.

Mr. HARTKE. In other words, let me make it very clear again: Even though this amendment is agreed to on a roll-call vote, and even though there be a motion to reconsider and a motion to lay on the table the motion to reconsider that matter, would it then be subject to being reopened at a later date?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment would still be subject to further amendment.

Mr. HARTKE. The reason I ask that, and I direct my remarks to the chairman of the committee at this moment, is that this is an integral part of the commtitee's so-called workfare program. Am I correct in that?

Mr. LONG. If you want to look at it that way. It depends on the point of view. As far as I am concerned, this is something we ought to do whether we have a guaranteed work opportunity or whether we should have a family assistance plan. I would think that in either event we would want to provide this advantage for working people who are not on welfare, not seeking any welfare help, and that even when they go to work, it is far better to pay them something as a work-related tax advantage than it is to pay it as something else.

Mr. HARTKE. I want to make a few observations, but I do want to ask some questions about this amendment.

The first observation is that it is generally recognized on the floor of the Senate, as has been stated repeatedly by various Senators, that the social security tax is a regressive form of taxation, in that it places the burden on those least able to pay, in placing a larger percentage of taxation on those in the lower income groups. It is certainly much heavier for them than it is for the higher income groups, and the fact is that when you get into the astronomical figures around $100,000 a year, the percentage of taxation you pay for social security is extremely low for those individuals.

We have adopted, I think, the general view here that something should be done of a major nature to repeal outright the regressive nature of social security taxation, and substitute for that some type of fair method of taxation of a progressive nature along the lines of the graduated income tax.

That can be done in a number of ways. One is that the whole social security trust fund could be abolished and payments made out of general revenues.

I personally think that the trust fund is nothing more than an abdication of authority, and that they should be eliminated in every field. I think the trust fund concept is simply a statement that Congress does not have the ability to make individual judgments each and every time it is necessary for the future of the country.

So we freeze in concepts and principles which in some cases are outmoded as much as 30 years. That probably is one of the real difficulties with the whole welfare system—the fact that we have a combination welfare system and social security system. The social security system is tied to a regressive form of taxation, and the welfare system is operating out of the general fund. Real reformation of the welfare system has been prevented by the fact that we have had the trust fund concept, which provides for some type of insecure, illusory type of security for people who are aged.

Another method of dealing with the question of the trust fund would be to provide for some type of general assumption of the trust fund liabilities in the form of a third and a third and a third—that is, one-third coming from the employee, one-third coming from the employer, and one-third coming from the general fund of the Government. This concept, basically is followed by practically every industrialized nation in the world except the United States; that is, the social security systems throughout the industrialized world and Western civilization provide for at least a one-third contribution by the Federal Government. I would favor a prosposal similar to that as a second choice to the complete elimination of the trust fund concept itself.

I have an amendment which provides for a system of gradual assumption of the responsibility of the trust fund on a one-fifth escalating basis, but I do not want to go into that now.

The reason why I raise the question at this time is that I think the pending amcndment, by the estimates we have, costs $900 million. I ask the chairman of the committee if that estimate is correct.

Mr. LONG. The report says $900 million, and I will accept that figure.

Mr. HARTKE. In other words, that is the estimate at the present time; and, of course, that figure will escalate as the years go by, unless something of a major nature is done to change the poverty levels of the United States.

I ask the Senator if that is not a correct assumption.

Mr. LONG. It is difficult to say. As income levels rise, the cost of this proposal should go down; but, then, more people will be working, in a larger work force. So it is difficult to say.

Mr. HARTKE. I should like to address my attention now to the Senator from Florida. He said that, in campaigning, he found people not on welfare who said, "I don't get one of those Government checks." Under this system, a person will get one of the Government checks. As I understand the amendment, they will get it on a quarterly basis and come back on the tax credit basis at the end of it. I ask the chairman if that is true.

Mr. LONG. It can be either a tax credit or——

Mr. HARTKE. No. I want to make it clear. Let me ask the question again.

As I understand the system, in order to qualify for this 10-percent work bonus, the determination would be made quarterly; and at the end of that quarter, if it is determined that he is entitled to a work bonus under the amounts designated in the bill, and as reported in the bill, he would apply for it at that time, and he would receive a quarterly check. Then, if all the quarterly checks did not total the amount to which he would ultimately be entitled, he could apply the balance of his requirements and his deduction as a tax credit against his ultimate tax liability.

Mr. LONG. This provision is written as a tax credit. The workingman, at the end of the year, can simply take this on his tax return as a tax credit that is due him.

If he wants to do so, he can apply to receive it quarterly; and in that event, he receives it quarterly.

Mr. HARTKE. I am not debating at this moment the desirability or undesirability of it. All I am pointing out is that Senator CHILES has made the statement that these people are opposed to those individuals receiving the Government checks.

When the employer files the return, let us say, on April 15, for the first quarter earnings, from January to March 31, at that time the employee is entitled to make an application for that Government check and to receive it as quickly as the bureaucratic machine can turn it out. Is that not correct?

Mr. LONG. He is entitled to apply for it on a quarterly basis and to receive it every 3 months. If he fails to do so, he will receive it as a tax credit, which he claims on his tax return.

Mr. HARTKE. To go back to the tax consequences: What has been introduced into the situation is a completely new form of taxation which is based on an individual and his wife, with no consideration for exemptions. I know that in the argument made for tax reform, some people would like to eliminate exemptions entirely. I am not one who subscribes to that.

Various methods of tax credits have attempted to be applied. But the fact remains that this introduces into the tax system not only the regressive form of taxation on social security and the progressive form of taxation of exemptions for children, but also a third item—that is, a form of taxation which is in between, which gives consideration only to the husband and wife, with no consideration for the size of the family beyond that. Is that correct?

Mr. LONG. We are giving a taxpayer a refund. We are returning to him his tax money. It is a refund from the point of view of the taxpayer. It does not make any difference to us whether he has one child or five children.

Mr. HARTKE. The point is that, as the report says on page 94, "The plan incorporates the feature of not varying benefits by family size," which, under the progressive income tax law, is determinative——

Mr. LONG. He gets the money back whether he has one child or five children. The social security tax is levied on that man, and if he has five children he pays the same amount of social security tax as if he has one. The refund works on the same basis.

Mr. HARTKE. It points up clearly for the Senate that what needs to be done is not to approach this matter in this halfhearted method, in my judgment—and I respect the opinion of the chairman and the committee in this regard.

The Senator is saying that he recognizes that the tax system of social security is regressive. He wants to do something to help the working poor, and he comes back with an idea which is neither fish nor fowl and does not deliver across the board.

In my opinion, it would be fairer to that individual, when he is working, to either eliminate entirely the regressive form of social security taxation or otherwise not assess that tax, in the first place, if he is in that low-income group.

The amendment I have prepared would meet the objections of the Senator from Florida, who is concerned about Government checks. It would eliminate any bureaucratic operation of Government checks, because the working poor person would never have that social security tax deducted from him, in the first place. That is a much more preferable item.

However, as I understand the parliamentary situation, such an amendment would be in order at a later time during the discussion of H.R. 1. I should like to repeat at this time and make a parliamentary inquiry. In the event this amendment is adopted on a rollcall vote—and I think it will be—then would an amendment which would provide for withholding of the tax assessment on the working poor still be in order?

As I understand it, the majority leader is anxious now to move on to another matter, and I am willing to concede that.

I do point out, again, that what we are dealing with here is a $900 million amendment which does not cure the evils which are admitted so far as the actual philosophy of dealing with the working poor is concerned; which, in effect, really does not provide the money for the individual at the time he needs it—that is, on a weekly basis—but forces him to go on an annual basis or a quarterly basis. It adds more bureaucracy, the added problem of making application, and probably, in my opinion, would be highly unworkable.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I think that Senate action on this amendment and any other on the committee's program to reform the family welfare system should be deferred until the whole family program is before the Senate, and all three of the pending versions—the committee's, Senator RIBICOFF's, and the House-passed bill—can be considered as a whole.

I shall vote for this amendment, but I do not consider this vote as an expression of the will of the Senate as to the merits of any one plan over any other.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I understand that we are ready for the vote on the pending amendment. I am all for it.

I wish to announce to the Senate that after this amendment is disposed of, the distinguished Senator from Virginia (Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR.) will offer an amendment and he would like to speak for about 5 minutes or so on it. In line with the commitment made by the leadership with the Senate yesterday, I should like to have the privilege of calling up Calendar No. 1186, H.R. 16593, an act making appropriations for the Department of Defense.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CANNON). The question is on agreeing to the committeee amendment.

On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. SCOTT. I announce that the Senators from Colorado (Mr. ALLOTT and Mr. DOMINICK), the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. BAKER), the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BOGGS), the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. BROOKE), the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. COOK), the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. COTTON), the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. CURTIS), the Senator from Arizona (Mr. GOLDWATER), the Senator from Michigan (Mr. GRIFFIN), the Senator from Florida (Mr. GURNEY), the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. HANSEN), the Senator from New York (Mr. JAVITS), the Senator from Iowa (Mr. MILLER), the Senator from Illinois (Mr. PERCY), the Senator from Delaware (Mr. ROTH), the Senators from Ohio (Mr. SAXBE and Mr. TAFT), the Senator from Vermont (Mr. STAFFORD), the Senator from Texas (Mr. TOWER), and the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. WEICKER) are necessarily absent.

If present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. BROOKE), the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. CURTIS), the Senator from Iowa (Mr. MILLER), and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. PERCY) would each vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 49, nays 5, as follows:

So the committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENSON. Mr. President, I voted against the Long amendment to set up a program of work-bonuses for low-income workers because I believe it is markedly inferior to the provisions of both H.R. 1 as passed by the House and Senator RIBICOFF's substitute as a means of providing income assistance to the working poor. Under the Finance Committee program, an employer working full time and earning $4,000 would receive a bonus of $400 while an employee, also working full time and earning only $2,000 would receive a bonus of $200. What kind of logic does it make to provide a worker with a bonus twice as large as his fellow worker if he is already earning twice as much as that fellow worker. It stands to reason that the worker with the lower salary is in greater need. It should be pointed out also that the bonus does not vary with the size of the worker's family.

The provisions of welfare reform, as proposed both by the President and Senator RIBICOFF, are preferable. Under welfare reform, the working poor would receive assistance based both on family size and income levels. As incomes rise and needs therefore lessen payments would be reduced, rather than increased.

I hope that the passage of this amendment will not lessen the possibility of achieving a rational welfare reform system, but I fear that it may.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the language of the committee report on the work bonus for low-income workers that appeared on pages 425 and 426 of the committee report, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the language was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WORK BONUS FOR LOW-INCOME WORKERS

Low-income workers in regular employment who head families would be eligible for a work bonus equal to 10 percent of their wages taxed under the social security (or railroad retirement) program, if the total income of the husband and wife is $4,000 or less. For families where the husband's and wife's total income exceeds $4,000, the work bonus would be equal to $400 minus one-quarter of the amount by which this income exceeds $4,000. Thus there would be no work bonus once total income reaches $5,600 ($5,600 exceeds $4,000 by $1,600; one-quarter of $1,600 is $400, which subtracted from $400 equals zero).

The work bonus could be taken as a tax credit when an individual files his annual tax return (this would most likely be done if an individual is entitled to only a small payment). However, the bonus could be applied for on a quarterly basis if the family's entitlement (either for the quarter or cumulatively) exceeds $30. For example, a family head earning $2.00 per hour (where the family has no other income) would be eligible for about $75 quarterly, and he could apply for and receive the bonus quarterly. If the family head earns $100 a week (and the family has no other income), annual income will total $5,200 and he will be entitled to a work bonus of $100 annually ($5,200 exceeds $4,000 by $1,200; one-quarter of $1,200 is $300, which subtracted from $400 leaves $100). In this case, he may receive $50 after the end of the second quarter and $50 after the end of the fourth quarter since his entitlement in each of the first and third quarters is less than $30.

The size of the work bonus is shown on the table below for selected examples:

Annual income of husband and wife (assuming it is all taxed under social security)

	Work bonus
$2,000	$200
3,000	300
4,000	400
5,000	150

The work bonus described above incorporates the features of (1) not varying benefits by family size, but only by income, providing no economic incentive for having additional children; and (2) having a gradual phaseout of the amount of the payment as income rises above $4,000 so as not to create a work disincentive.

The committee bill would apply the 10 percent work bonus only to earnings taxed under the social security and railroad retirement programs. The bonus thus may be viewed as a kind of rebate of these taxes for low-income workers (including a substantial portion of the tax paid by the employer on the employee's wages). However, the employer would continue to withhold social security taxes from the employee's earnings for deposit into the trust funds, and the employee would continue to receive credit for these earnings for social security purposes—in other words, the social security program would not be affected in any way by the work bonus.

There are certain types of work which are covered under social security but only when the amount of wages earned from a single employer exceeds $50 in a quarter. This limitation applies to the employment of domestics, yardmen and other similar non-business employees. Such employees (if they are still heads of a family) would get the work bonus with respect to all of their wages including those not covered by social security because of the $50 quarterly limitation. In order to qualify for the work bonus on these wages, however, the individual would have to arrange to perform the work as an employee of the Work Administration which would pay him the prevailing wage for the job and bill the private employer for the wages and other costs associated with making his services available. If the employment would ordinarily be covered by social security, then it will be covered under social security when arranged on this basis by the Work Administration. If the employment is not covered by social security, then the employer will not have to pay social security taxes. In either case, there will be a Federal record of all such wages on which the payment of the work bonus may be based.

The 10 percent work bonus would be administered by the Internal Revenue Service.

AMENDMENT NO. 1663

Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRANSTON). The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to state the amendment.

Mr. HARY F. BYRD, JR. I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The amendment will be printed in the RECORD.

The amendment is as follows:

Beginning on page 689, line 11, strike out through page 736, line 12, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

TITLE IV—PROGRAMS FOR FAMILIES WITH CHILDREN

PART A—TESTING OF ALTERNATIVE PROPOSALS FOR ASSISTANCE TO FAMILIES WITH CHILDREN; FISCAL RELIEF FOR STATES

AUTHORIZATION FOR CONDUCT OF TEST PROGRAMS

SEC. 401. (a) For purposes of this part—

(1) The term "family assistance test program" means a program patterned after that contained in amendment No. 1614, 92d Congress, 2d session, introduced in the Senate on September 28, 1972,

(2) the term "workfare test program" means a program patterned after that contained in parts A and B in title IV of H.R. 1, 92d Congress, 2d Session, as reported to the Senate by the Committee on Finance on September 26, 1972, and

(3) the term "family" means a family with children.

(b) (1) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") is authorized, effective January 1, 1973, to plan for and conduct or contract to conduct, in accordance with the provisions of this section, not more than four test programs. Two of such programs shall be family assistance test programs as defined in subsection (a) (1) of this section, and one of such programs shall be workfare test programs.

(2) Whenever a workfare test program is commenced, there shall commence, on the same date as such program, a family assistance test program. Except as may otherwise be authorized by the Congress, no test program under this section shall be conducted for a period of less than 24 months or more than 48 months, and to the maximum extent practical each such test program shall be conducted for the same length of time.

(3) Any such test program shall be conducted only in and with respect to an area which consists of one or more States, one or more political subdivisions of a State, or part of a political subdivision of a State, and shall be applicable to all the individuals who are residents of the State or the area of the State in and with respect to which such program is conducted.

(4) During any period for which any such test program is in effect in any State or in any area of a State, individuals residing in such State or the area of the State in which such program is in effect shall not be eligible for aid or assistance under any State plan or program for which the State receives Federal financial assistance under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act.

(5) The Secretary, in determining the areas in which test programs under this section shall be conducted, shall select areas with a view to assuring—

(A) that the number of participants in any such program will (to the maximum extent practicable) be equal to the number of participants in any other such program; and

(B) that the area in which any family assistance test program is conducted shall be comparable (in terms of size and composition of population, of average per capita income, rate of unemployment, and other relevant criteria) to an area in which a workfare test program is conducted.

(c) (1) No test program under this section shall be conducted in any State (or any area thereof) unless such State shall have entered into an agreement with the Secretary under which the State agrees—

(A) to participate in the costs of such test program; and

(B) to cooperate with the Secretary in the conduct of such program.

(2) Under any such agreement, no State shall be required to expend, with respect to any test program conducted within such State (or any area thereof), amounts greater than the amounts which would have been expended with respect to such State or area thereof (as the case may be), during the period that such test program is in effect, under the State plan of such State approved under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act. For purposes of determining the amount any State would have expended under such a plan during the period that any such test program is in effect within such State (or any area thereof), it shall be assumed that the rate of State expenditure (from non-Federal funds) under such plan would be equal to the average rate of State expenditure (from non-Federal funds) under such plan for the 12-month period immediately preceding the commencement of such test program.

(d) (1) The Secretary shall, upon completion of any plans for and prior to the commencement of any test program under this section, submit to the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives a complete and detailed description of such program and shall invite and give consideration to the comments and suggestions of such committees with respect to such program.

(2) During the period that test programs are in operation under this section, the Secretary shall from time to time (but not less frequently than once during any 6-month period) submit to the Congress a report on such programs. Each such report shall contain full and complete information and data with respect to such programs and the operation thereof, together with such recommendations and comments of the Secretary with respect to such programs as he deems desirable.

(3) At the earliest practicable date after the termination of all test programs authorized to be conducted by this section, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a full and complete report on such programs and their operation together with (A) the Secretary's evaluation of such programs and such comments or recommendations of the Secretary with respect to such programs as he deems desirable and (B) his recommendations (if any) for legislation to revise or replace the provisions of part A of title IV of the Social Security Act.

(e) (1) The Secretary shall—

(A) in the planning of any test program under this section; or

(B) in assembling information, statistics, or other materials, to be contained in any report to Congress under this section;

consult with, and seek the advice and assistance of, the General Accounting Office and the General Accounting Office shall consult with the Secretary and furnish such advice and assistance to him upon request of the Secretary or at such times as the Comptroller General deems desirable.

(2) The operations of any test program conducted under this section shall be reviewed by the General Accounting Office, and the books, records, and other documents pertaining to any such program or its operation shall be available to the General Accounting Office at all reasonable times for purposes of audit, review, or inspection. The books, records, and documents of each such program shall be audited by the General Accounting Office from time to time (but not less frequently than once each year).

(3) During the period that test programs are in operation under this section, the Comptroller General shall from time to time (but not less frequently than once during any 6-month period) submit to the Congress a report on such programs which shall contain full and complete information and data with respect to such programs and the operation thereof, together with such recommendations and comments of the Comptroller General with respect to such programs as he deems desirable.

(4) At the earliest practicable date after the termination of all test programs authorized to be conducted by this section, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Congress a full and complete report on such programs and their operation together with his evaluation of, and comments and recommendations (if any), with respect to such programs.

(f) In the administration of test programs under this section, the Secretary shall provide safeguards which restrict the use or disclosure of information identifying participants in such programs to purposes directly connected with the administration of such programs (except that nothing in this subsection shall be construed to prohibit the furnishing of records or information concerning participants in such programs to the Committee on Finance of the Senate or the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives).

(g) For the purpose of enabling the Secretary to formulate operational plans and to conduct test programs under this section, there are hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year $200,000,000.

Mr. MANSFIELD. For the information of the Senate, I want to repeat again the intention of the leadership that, at the conclusion of the brief remarks of the distinguished Senator from Virginia (Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR.), the majority leadership will endeavor to call up H.R. 16593, the Defense appropriation bill.

Mr. President, I make that unanimous-consent request at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there an objection?

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. It has already been done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MANSFIELD. And I wish to tell the Senate that as far as the leadership is concerned, it hopes that there will be votes on amendments this afternoon. As I understand, there is a rumor going around that there will be no votes. I wish to disabuse Members of that thought, because there may well be votes.

We are operating on a shoestring at the present time with 54 Members present. I would urge all Senators to take into consideration the meaning of what the Senate is, and even if it is Saturday afternoon, to stay here and attend to our duties.

Mr. MATHIAS. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield.

Mr. MATHIAS. I want to make an inquiry as to whether it is the leadership's intention to try to complete action today on the Defense appropriations.

Mr. MANSFIELD. If it could be done, I would be delighted; but I must say in all candor and in all likelihood, it cannot be done; but I would hope we could at least get started on amendments.

Mr. MATHIAS. Yes. I have always respected the majority leadership's judgment, and I think it is excellent in this case, because here we are dealing with a $75 billion bill, the second largest appropriation bill since World War II. It is a bill which, I think, requires more time and more attention than the half of the Senate which is present can give it on a rainy Saturday afternoon.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I am sure that the weather has nothing to do with only half the Senate being present, because I do not think the roads are so slick they could not be here if they wanted to. But as I said, I expressed the personal hope that it could be finished this afternoon, even late into the evening; but in all candor, I must reiterate that I do not think that is a possibly. But I do hope we could have some votes on some amendments.

Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendments be considered en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR. As I understand it, the amendments just submitted to the clerk's desk is the pending business; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR. Mr. President, I shall speak very briefly on this. Of course, it will not be called up for a vote today. I will describe briefly the purpose of this amendment.

Congress has had under consideration for some time now three different proposals in regard to welfare legislation. One is the administration proposal for a $2,400 guaranteed income. That has passed the House of Representatives twice, and it has been before the Senate Finance Committee since 1970. It was considered by the committee in 1970, 1971, and in 1972. It was rejected by the committee.

I think it is probably accurate to say it was rejected by the committee unanimously, although I do not want to make that statement caetgorically. It was overwhelmingly rejected by the committee.

Another proposal under discussion is the so-called Ribicoff proposal, offered by the distinguished Senator from Connecticut. It is similar to the administration backed plan, except it is a more costly version. It also provides for a guaranteed annual income. The third proposal was developed by the Committee on Finance and it is known as the workfare plan, or one might say the Long-Bennett plan, or one might say the Long plan. Whatever it might be, perhaps it is best described by calling it the workfare proposal. It seems to me that this proposal is going in the right direction.

What we want to do, as I see it, is to get people off of welfare instead of adding more people to the welfare rolls and the workfare plan is an incentive for individuals to go to work. The other two plans are lacking in work incentives and also embody the principle of guaranteed annual income. The workfare plan guarantees the principle of guaranteed job opportunities. I certainly favor the concept. I am concerned as to the cost of the workfare proposal. I am not satisfied yet as to what that cost will be. It will not be more costly than the administration program; it will be far less costly than the Ribicoff proposal, but I still am not satisfied as to the cost, and I do not believe we have adequate cost estimates.

We know the other programs will be tremendously costly; they are bound to be. The administration program doubles the number of people on welfare. That was the testimony submitted to the committee 2 years ago. There will be many more millions of people put on welfare if either the administration-backed proposal is approved or the Ribicoff proposal is approved.

It seems to me that before we go into a gigantic new program, whether it be the administration-backed proposal, the Ribicoff proposal, or the workfare proposal, regardless which one Congress may decide to take, before going into such a program it certainly should be piloted out and tested out in several areas of this country, and then let HEW come back to Congress and submit the results of such test, such pilot projects, and then Congress can decide which features will work and which will not work.

The amendment I have submitted provides for four tests: Two of the committee's work-fare plan, and two of the Ribicoff amendment plan, so that it provides for a total of four tests. HEW would be permitted to make the decision as to where it might wish to conduct these tests, I think that certainly in going into a gigantic new program that Congress should have some idea as to how these new proposals will work in practice.

Now, when the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, Mr. Richardson, came before the committee, in his formal statement he said that his proposal was revolutionary and expensive—revolutionary and expensive, and most certainly he is accurate in that statement. Almost the only thing about Mr. Richardson's welfare plan I agree with him on is that it is revolutionary and expensive.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR. I yield to the chairman of the committee.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I do not think the Secretary had any idea how expensive his proposal could be, because while what he was proposing would call for a great deal of money, the cost of that program is far more formidable than just the first cost because there is no way a plan can be put into effect that is going to stop at a guarantee $2,400 a year to everybody. I think he started out with a guarantee of $1,600 and then he had to go to $2,400 to try to get it through the House.

Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR. In 1 year.

Mr. LONG. Yes. So he himself had to increase his proposal by $800 to try to get it through the House. He started by guaranteeing everybody $2,400. Almost every recipient from the day he gets the first check will scorn you on the theory it is not enough; that at a minimum it should be up to the poverty level, which is $4,000 for a family of four, and we are talking about $2,400 for a family of four under the family assistance plan.

When they go to the $4,000 figure, if the Senator thinks they are going to satisfy those people at $4,000 he just has not had the good fortune of coming in contact with the National Welfare Rights Organization. They have been clamoring, conducting sit-down strikes and sit-down demonstrations in the halls outside of our committee room, and using their best efforts at the National Democratic Convention. They came up with a one-third vote at the National Democratic Convention calling for $6,500. That would give us some 104 million people on the welfare rolls for starters. You would soon have more people on the taking down end than you would have on the putting up end in this country under that scheme.

A person under that scheme, as under the Ribicoff amendment, would be able to keep a portion of every dollar he earns earns, so he would not go off of welfare rolls until he received more than $10,000 a year. More than one-half the people in the country would be welfare beneficiaries.

There is no way to put that family assistance plan into effect without having constant increases. Even the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. RIBICOFF) who was the sponsor of that proposal last year was urging then and urges now that you should put something far more liberal than $2,400 into effect, that that is too niggardly, even for beginners.

To show the number of people who would be on the welfare rolls, if we went to the $3,000 proposed in the Ribicoff amendment No. 559, there would be 40 million people on welfare rolls. But if we went to the Harris proposal which is $4,000 a year, the poverty level—it is said if you are going to guarantee income you could not go below the poverty level—that is up to 81 million people on the welfare rolls. Under the McGovern proposal for $6,500 it would go to 104 million people on the welfare rolls.

Mr. President, when you go down the road of guaranteed income, the Senate should know there is involved far more than just starting out by providing welfare payments for another 10 or 12 million people as would be proposed by H.R. 1. That is just openers, as the Senator from Idaho (Mr. JORDAN) said, just to use a poker player's terms. It is just openers until the next candidate for office can call your bet and propose something more. So in short order anyone going down the road to amendment No. 559 would provide at least $3,000.

One could not defend that. He would have to apologize even for offering that, and he would have to go to the Harris bill, which would authorize $4,000. That would get 81 million on the welfare payroll. So, before we get going in the direction where we would have more welfare beneficiaries than taxpayers, we had better not start on that road. That is what the committee discussed. That is what I discussed. We felt that once we started down that road, we could not go back, and that we had better turn back toward sanity while the Nation can still stand the burden being placed on it, rather than wait until we would have to make drastic changes in our form of government to bring it about.

Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR. If we are going to establish the principle of a guaranteed income, I do not see how we can logically make it less than the poverty level. I put that question to Governor Rockefeller, who is the foremost advocate of this program, and he said he agreed with that in principle, but he said if we could start out this way, it would be a start, and then we would go beyond that point.

That is why I am opposed to writting into law the principle of a guaranteed annual income. I do not think such a program should be put into effect unless it has been tested and we have had the opportunity to know what parts of it would work, and the many ramifications of it.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR. I yield.

Mr. BENNETT. I have listened to the proposal, and I am very interested, but I would hope it would contain an opportunity to test H.R. 1 as it came from the House, because we share the responsibility for this program with the House Ways and Means Committee. I would think that if we are going down the road of a test, and particularly if we are going to go to conference with them on the principle of a test, we should have an opportunity to test the House proposal, which is less expensive than the Ribicoff proposal.

Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR. I think the Senator raises a good point. It occurred to me that what we would be testing is the principle, and the principles are the same whether they be under the Ribicoff or the House-passed proposal. But I see no objection, so far as I am concerned, to changing this so that there could be an adequate test of the House-passed plan, if the Senator from Utah and other Senators feel that in testing the Ribicoff proposal, that does not give——

Mr. BENNETT. The thing that worries me about limiting it to the Ribicoff proposal is that the Ribicoff proposal starts at a level above the Senate workfare program and it also puts in single people as well as married couples. I think the House should not be required to accept the sponsorship for the Ribicoff variation to H.R. 1.

I would hope, by the time he finishes his work on his amendment, the Senator will consider probably changing it so that the test can be made on the House-passed section of H.R. 1.

Mr. HARRY F. BYRD, JR. I shall be very glad to work with the distinguished ranking Republican member of the Finance Committee on this matter to see if we cannot work it out to the point where we can get a fair test on the principle involved in both the House-passed H.R. 1 and the Ribicoff plan.

Mr. BENNETT. I thank the Senator for that consideration. I shall be very happy to work with him.

work bonus program for low-income workers.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF POSITION ON VOTES

Mr. GAMBRELL. Mr. President, I was necessarily absent on Saturday, September 30, when four record votes were taken on amendments to H.R. 1. I ask unanimous consent that the permanent RECORD reflects that had I been present, I would have voted as follows on those four amendments:

Second. I would have voted "yea" on Senator LONG's committee amendment, to make maintenance drugs available under medicare;

Third. I would have voted "yea" on Senator HARTKE's amendment to provide that chronic renal disease be considered to constitute disability under the medicare program.

Employability plans under this subsection shall be developed in accordance with priorities prescribed by the Secretary of Labor.

"(b) The Secretary of Labor shall establish manpower services, training, and employment programs for individuals registered pursuant to section 2111(a), and shall, through such programs, provide or assure the provision of manpower services, training, and employment necessary to prepare such individuals for and place them in regular employment, including—

Such a program shall provide employment relating to such fields as health, social service, environmental protection, education, urban and rural development and redevelopment, welfare, recreation, criminal justice, public facilities, and public safety or any other field which would benefit the community, the State, or the United States as a whole, by improving physical, social, or economic conditions.

"(B) enabling individuals employed under public service employment programs to move into regular public or private employment.

"(3) Before making any grant or entering into any contract for a public service employment program under this subsection, the Secretary of Labor must receive assurances that—

"(A) appropriate standards for health, safety, and other conditions applicable to the performance of work and training have been established and will be maintained;

"(B) available employment opportunities will be increased and the program will not result in a reduction in the employment and labor costs of any employer or in the displacement of persons currently employed, including partial displacement resulting from a reduction in hours of work or wages, or employment benefits;

"(C) the conditions of work, training, education, and employment are reasonable in the light of such factors as the type of work, the geographic region, and the proficiency of the participants;

"(D) appropriate workmen's compensation protection is provided to all participants; and

"(E) the employability of participants will be increased.

"(4) Wages paid to an individual participating in a public service employment program shall be equal to the highest of—

"(A) the prevailing rate of wages in the same labor market area for persons employed in similar public occupations;

On the basis of that record and any other information he may require, the Secretary of Labor shall determine the feasibility of placing such individual in regular employment or in on-the-job institutions, or other training.

"(6) The Secretary of Labor shall make payments for not more than the first three years of an individual's employment in any public service employment program. Payments during the first year of such individual's employment shall not exceed 100 percent of the cost of providing such employment to such individual during such first year, payments during the second year of such individual's employment shall not exceed 75 percent of the cost of providing such employment to such individual during such second year, and payments during the third year of such individual's employment shall not exceed 66⅔ percent of the cost of providing such employment to such individual during such third year.

"(d) In order to assure an adequate supply of information concerning opportunities for employment by States, their political subdivisions, or by private employers, any such employer receiving Federal assistance, through a grant-in-aid or contract under this title or any other provision of law, shall provide the Secretary of Labor with complete, up-to-date listings of all employment vacancies that such employer may have in positions or programs wholly or partially supported through such Federal assistance. The fulfillment of this requirement shall be a condition for receiving such assistance.

"(e) The Secretary of Labor shall enter into agreements with the heads of other Federal agencies administering grant-in-aid programs to establish annual and multiyear goals for the employment of members of families receiving benefits under this title in employment wholly or partially supported through such Federal assistance. For the purposes of carrying out these agreements Federal agencies may provide, notwithstanding any other provision of law, that the establishment of such goals shall be a condition for receiving such assistance.

"(f) Of the sums authorized by section 2101 to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1974—

"(1) not more than $540,000,000 shall be appropriated to the Secretary of Labor to enable him to carry out his responsibilities under subsections (a) and (b) (except subsection (b)(4)) of this section, and under section 2115, and

"(2) not more than $1,200,000,000 shall be appropriated to the Secretary of Labor for the public service employment program under subsection (b)(4) of this section.

"EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

"SEC. 2115. (a) (1) The Secretary of Labor shall, in the administration of part A, periodically and regularly consult with representatives of employers in the private and public sectors of the economy and with representatives of families and individuals who are receiving or are eligible to receive manpower services, training, and employment under this Act.

"(2) The Secretary of Labor shall take all necessary steps to terminate discriminatory practices of public and private employers and thereby make employment opportunities available to needy individuals. To this end, the Secretary shall assure that all participants in this program are treated without discrimination on the basis of race, religion, sex, or national origin, and for this purpose shall establish detailed equal opportunity reporting requirements with respect to all activities under this part affecting recipients of benefits hereunder, including job referrals, salary levels and placements, and on the nature of job listings made available under the program. The Secretary of Labor shall report to the Congress at least annually on the steps he has taken under this section and the results he has achieved.

"(b) Of the sums authorized by section 2101 to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1974, not more than $10,000,000 shall be appropriated to the Secretary of Labor to enable him to carry out his responsibilities under this section.

"ALLOWANCES FOR INDIVIDUALS PARTICIPATING IN TRAINING

"SEC. 2116. (a)(1) The Secretary of Labor shall pay to each individual who is a member of an eligible family and who is participating in manpower training under this part an incentive allowance of $30 per month. "Special Limits on Gross Income

"(f) The Secretary may prescribe the circumstances under which, consistently with the purposes of this title, the gross income from a trade or business (including farming) will be considered sufficiently large to make such family ineligible for such benefits.
